REBELS SHELL MADRID; FAIL TO GAIN IN NEW DRIVE

Explosives Fall in Center of City During Long-Range Artillery Fight—Infantry Held Back on Western Line.

HEAVY ENGAGEMENT AROUND POZUELO

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Dec. 11.—Insurgent shells fell in the heart of the Spanish capital today as Fascist rebel and Government guns were fired in a long-range artillery fight.

A heavy insurgent infantry attack on the western line between Montclos and Pozuelo was stopped, the Government reported, in a three-hour struggle.

Under cover of artillery, Gen. Francisco Franco's insurgent troops started their offensive while a biting wind blew down from the snow-capped Guadarrama Mountains. The fighting was heaviest around Pozuelo, to the west of the city, and around the San Fernando bridge.

Officials speeded the evacuation of the capital's non-combatant population to the Eastern coast as a means of conserving the food supply.

The severe cold sent Madrid residents searching through the houses for wood. Others stood in line for hours to draw allotments of fuel.

A shortage of matches developed and persons on the streets with lighted cigarettes were surrounded by others asking for lights.

Louis de la Pre, 44 years old, correspondent for the Paris Soir, died today, just three days after he was injured, with three others, when a plane was shot down by an unidentified plane over Spanish insurgent territory.

Briton Tells League Council of Neutrality Violations.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Dec. 11. — Viscount Cranborne, British Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told the League of Nations Council today the international agreement for non-intervention in Spain had been violated for the benefit of both sides in the civil war.

His declaration came after Julio Alvarez del Vayo, Madrid's Foreign Minister, said an international war was being fought on Spain's soil, and that "an international conflagration daily becomes more of a menace."

Viscount Cranborne, who represents Great Britain at the Council because of the absence of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, said the forces of both the Spanish Government and the Fascist insurgents had been increased "to an alarming proportion."

He urged the Council to support the non-intervention agreement, negotiated outside the League by nations. League backing, Viscount Cranborne said, might help to prevent the struggle from "being extended and prolonged."

France and Great Britain, he declared, will try to arrange an armistice.

Brief Prayer in Rome for Noted Playwright Buried in Sicily.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Dec. 11.—Luigi Pirandello received a pauper's funeral today in accordance with the wish of the noted playwright and Nobel prize winner.

In the early morning a brief prayer was said over the cheap wooden casket in his Roman villa. Then a hearse, used to bear paupers to their graves, drew up before the house where Pirandello died suddenly yesterday morning at the age of 69.

The drivers—Pirandello had asked that he have no pallbearers—carried out the casket with only members of the immediate family in attendance.

His widow bowed as the hearse left the house and male members of his family gave the Fascist salute. The body was placed aboard a train and will be taken to Agrigento, Sicily, where Pirandello was born and where he will be buried without further ceremonies.

Vatican officials said the Pope was holding his own against the paralysis, which has confined him to bed for the past week.

RIOTING IN STRIKE AT SHIPYARD; MAN KILLED, 36 HURT

POLICE DISPERSE CROWD WITH GAS

Clash Starts When Pickets Try to Prevent Workers From Entering Reopened Plant.

By the Associated Press.

CHESTER, Pa., Dec. 11.—Strikers and workers at the Sun Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. clashed in two riots at the gate of the plant today. One man was killed and about 36 were injured.

Chester police used tear-gas bombs to break up the first disturbance, after several thousand strikers and sympathizers had gathered about the main entrance. In the melee, police said about 300 workers broke through the picket lines to enter the plant.

About 10 minutes later another riot started and someone turned in a false fire alarm from a box at the main gate. Fire engines responded, scattering the crowd. Some of the injured said they had been run down by the fire trucks.

Man Dies in Hospital.

John Young, 63 years old, of Chester, was picked up unconscious and died a few minutes after being taken to a hospital. Physicians said they could not determine immediately whether he had died from a heart attack or from an injury.

While strikers and others went to the aid of the injured, more workers dashed through the picket lines to enter the plant.

Among the injured, Peter Martain, 42, of Camden, N. J., was so seriously hurt physicians said he was not expected to live. Martain had given bail of $1000 yesterday on an assault and battery charge in connection with strike activities.

Several of the injured had been beaten with clubs, firsts, rocks, and bricks. Some of the fire trucks were used as ambulances to take the injured to hospitals.

Windows, Autos Damaged.

Windows and automobiles in the vicinity of the plant were damaged by flying sticks and stones.

State police from nearby barracks arrived after the riots and took positions on guard about the plant.

The company had announced its intention of resuming operations today after maintaining only a skeleton force on duty since the start of the strike.

The walkout followed refusal of repair crews to work on a ship that the men said was manned by non-union seamen. At a mass meeting Monday night the workers drew up demands for additional pay, better working conditions and a closed shop.

John G. Pew, president of the company, denied an assertion of the workers that they had an agreement with the company not to work on ships with non-unions crews.

MAIL BARRED TO AGENCY NAMED IN FRAUD ORDER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Delivery of mail and postal money orders to the National Commercial Travelers' Association, St. Louis, was prohibited today in an order issued by Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department.

The order was issued after a hearing on a citation, directing the association and its president, H. R. DeLaye of St. Louis, to show cause why a fraud order should not be issued. The Postoffice Department charged the association sold memberships for $25.50 each, to owners of tourist homes, inns and similar establishments on the promise of increased patronage.

Informed of the order, DeLaye said the association, which has offices at 1042 North Taylor avenue, "sold agreements to persons who knew what they were buying, and felt it was entitled to collect the balances due under the agreements," adding, "I guess we'll have to shut up shop now."

ALDERMEN PASS MILK ORDINANCE UNANIMOUSLY

Mayor to Sign It Late Today or Tomorrow and It Will Be Effective Immediately.

RULES SUSPENDED FOR QUICK ACTION

Vote Taken as Soon as Bill Is Favorably Reported by Public Welfare Committee.

The standard milk control ordinance of the United States Public Health Service was passed unanimously today by the Board of Aldermen.

Mayor Dickmann, who had approved the measure, is expected to sign the bill late today or tomorrow. Since it contained an emergency clause it will become effective as soon as it receives the Mayor's signature.

Passage of the bill today, under a suspension of the rules, came as a surprise. Only yesterday it received unanimous approval of the Public Welware Committee and it was reported to the board today. A plan to suspend the rules and pass it today had been abandoned, it was said yesterday. The rules provide that a week must elapse before a bill reported by a committee may be read the third time and called for passage.

However, immediately after adoption by the board of 12 minor committee amendments, which were acceptable to Health Commissioner oJseph F. Bredeck and other sponsors of the bill, Alderman Emmett Golden offered a motion to suspend the rules and call the bill for final passage. The motion was adopted without dissent.

Only One Alderman Absent.

The motion for adoption of the bill as amended likewise was carried unanimously. All members of the board except Alderman Gregory Murray were present.

As adopted, the measure included all the principal features which met with strenuous opposition from St. Louis milk dealers but which were insisted upon by Dr. Bredeck, the Consumers' Council, the St. Louis Medical Society and more than 100 other organizations which indorsed the bill. The Sanitary Milk Producers, farmers' co-operative, joined the distributors in opposing it.

The ordinance permits the Board of Public Service to lower the grade of a distributor's product for violation of the ordinance, provides a tax of about 1-11 of a cent a quart to provide funds for inspection service, and raises the requirements as to quality of milk and conditions of production and distribution to meet standards of the United States Public Health Service.

One Amendment Opposed.

Only one amendment met with opposition. It provided that distributors who could meet requirements for Special Grade A pasteurized milk might label and sell this premium product before the first grading period begins one year hence.

Alderman Lawrence P. Walsh objected that this put the small distributor at a disadvantage since he would not be able to make necessary changes for production of such milk immediately. Only he and Alderman Joseph B. Schweppe voted against the amendment, however, after several other members had expressed a differing opinion.

Although the ordinance becomes effective immediately upon signature by the Mayor, distributors will be given a year to meet requirements. Grading of milk then will begin.

The commercial milk, 95 per cent of the consumption, may have a bacteria count of not more than 200,000 per cubic centimeter before pasteurization and not more than 30,000 afterward. The present ordinance permits this 13-cent milk to have 1,500,000 bacteria before pasteurization and 100,000 afterward.

Grade B pasteurized milk must meet the same requirements as to bacteria content before pasteurization as Grade A pasteurized, but may contain 50,000 bacteria afterward. Grade C must be marked "for cooking purposes only."

Alderman Otto L. Lietchen, chairman of the Public Welfare Committee, in a speech made when reporting the bill, said he wished to see it passed immediately "as a Christmas present to the people of St. Louis."

PARLIAMENT PASSES ABDICATION BILL; ROYAL ASSENT GIVEN

EDWARD TELLS STAFF GOOD-BY, VISITS GARDENS

EXPECTED AT DOVER TO CROSS TO FRANCE

Belief Is He Will Motor to Coast and Board Destroyer—His Brother, Duke of Kent, Visits Him.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Edward VIII said farewell today to old members of his personal staff and visited for perhaps the last time the gardens and wooded paths of old Fort Belvedere.

Police guarded the turreted retreat and the nearby flying field. The Duke of Kent, Edward's youngest brother, arrived at the lodge in the afternoon.

Edward's last luncheon as King was with Winston Churchill, the statesman who steadfastly defended his sovereign's position in Commons, and the Duke of Kent.

It was believed Edward will motor to the coast, there to board a destroyer which will take him to France. It was reported the crossing would be from Dover to Dunkirk.

He succeeded his father, George V, when the latter died five minutes before midnight, Jan. 20. His term ended at 1:52 p. m. today.

Edward during the morning signed a document empowering the royal commission to give his assent to the act of abdication. Therefore, there was no necessity for him to affix "Edward R. I." to the act itself.

MRS. SIMPSON HAS NOT CHANGED PLANS, STILL AT CANNES

CANNES, France, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson has made no change in her plans to remain at the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers at least until Christmas, it was stated at the villa today. At the same time French officials said "Mr. Windsor," Britain's abdicating King Edward VIII, was not expected on the Riviera soon.

Mrs. Simpson said through a spokesman today she expects to obtain her final divorce decree without any complications. She said she was not aware of any move in England to invalidate her temporary divorce decree from Ernest Aldrich Simpson.

Mrs. Simpson has "no arrangements to meet Edward," the spokesman declared, repeating that she expects to remain in Southern France for several weeks at least.

Late in the afternoon, Mrs. Simpson left the villa for a short drive. She was accompanied by Lord Brownlow, Gentleman-in-Waiting to the ex-King. Her chauffeur drove the same automobile which she used in her dash across France last week. She returned shortly before 6 o'clock.

Shortly before she left, a messenger delivered a big box of roses to the villa.

The meeting of the retiring ruler and the twice-divorced American woman whose attachment for each other precipitated the British crisis, is not likely to take place until public interest has quieted, it was believed here. As to marriage, British social circles on the Riviera were not inclined to discuss it until Mrs. Simpson's divorce becomes absolute next April 27.

When the two do meet it probably will be at some place remote from crowds such as have surrounded the villa here. France, Switzerland and Italy have been mentioned as possible meeting places, but there has been no definite indication; nor has any date been mentioned.

The Man Who Broke a King

PREMIER STANLEY BALDWIN

(Excerpts from the Premier's Report to the House of Commons of His Conversations with King Edward)

"He said to me many times * * * 'You and I must settle this matter together; I will not have anyone interfering.'

"I told him I did not think that particular marriage would receive the approbation of the country.

"He said, 'I am going to marry Mrs. Simpson and I am prepared to go.'

"I said, 'Sire, that is most grievous news.'

"His Majesty asked me whether I could answer his question (whether compromise on a morganatic marriage was possible).

"I gave him the reply that it was impracticable."

"He took my answer without question and never referred to it again.

*"My efforts have been directed in trying to help him make the choice which he has not made. * * * I left nothing undone that I could have done to move him from the decision at which he arrived."*

BIG LOSS TO LLOYD'S ON CORONATION RISKS

All Articles Bearing Edward's Face or Name Must Be Scrapped.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — King Edward's abdication made heavy losses for manufacturers of special goods for his scheduled coronation next May. Articles bearing Edward's picture or name will have to be written off. Many of the makers of coronation mugs, plaques, silver spoons and the like carried insurance with Lloyd's against postponement or change in the coronation plans.

Newspaper estimates of £20,000,000 ($100,000,000) trade loss were called grossly excessive in informed quarters. A conservative estimate place it at £100,000.

Some of loss was insured against as early as last August. The rate was 15 per cent. That jumped to 30 per cent until, a few days ago, no such business was written at all.

Thousands of newly printed books of common prayer and other devotional volumes will have to be revised with the substitution of new pages for those on which King Edward is mentioned by name.

The silver industry was hard hit. It had spent thousands of pounds on expensive dies and already had delivered thousands of coronation medals. They now must be melted and recast in the Duke of York's likeness.

EDWARD'S RADIO TALK TO BE HEARD IN ST. LOUIS AT ABOUT 4 P. M. TODAY

LONDON, Dec. 11.

EX-KING EDWARD will broadcast a message to the British empire over the British Broadcasting Corporation facilities tonight.

The British Broadcasting Corporation announced the King expressed the wish to broadcast immediately after he ceases to become King "as a private person owing allegiance to the new King."

The former King will be heard in St. Louis on Stations KSD, KWK and KMOX at 4 p. m. today.

PUBLIC PLACES IN ENGLAND SUSPEND FOR EDWARD'S TALK

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Suspension was arranged for theaters, cinemas, music halls and greyhound tracks tonight for the minutes in which the radio will carry the voice of former King Edward, which many in the empire never have heard before.

The British Broadcasting Corporation announced a record of the speech would be kept permanently with the recordings of King George V's Christmas talks.

Early tonight it was announced definitely the broadcast had been set for Augusta Tower of Windsor Castle. The castle is three miles from Fort Belvedere, Edward's country lodge. There were reports the new King had decided to be at Edward's side.

WINDSOR, DAVID OR TEDDY

To England he is Edward Windsor; his family calls him David; Mrs. Simpson's name for him is Teddy.

THIS COMPLETES RENUNCIATION BY EDWARD VIII AND YORK IS THE KING

Commission of Lords, Acting for Retiring Ruler, Completes Approval After Two Houses Rush Through Law.

BROTHER TO TAKE OATH TOMORROW

Law-Making Bodies Will Swear Allegiance—Baldwin to Read Message From Britain's New Monarch Monday.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Royal Commission in the House of Lords today gave royal assent to the abdication act, completing Edward's renunciation of the British throne and elevating the Duke of York to the kingship.

The Duke of York automatically became the British ruler, and later chose officially the name of George VI.

The three royal commissioners, appointed by the King some time ago to act in his behalf during regular legislative sessions, substituted for the abdicating ruler whose signature on the measure is not now necessary.

It was not immediately disclosed, however, whether Edward would eventually sign his own abdication act. He may, under parliamentary law, do so if he chooses.

Reign Ends at 1:52 P. M.

Both the House of Commons and the House of Lords adjourned as soon as the abdication act became law.

Thus at 1:52 p. m. Edward VIII ceased to reign and the Duke of York became King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, Northern Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, Defender of the Faith.

In six minutes the House of Lords completed legislative action on the abdication bill, passing the measure rapidly through first, second and third readings. The act previously had been rushed through the House of Commons, where Conservative and Laborite majorities overrode an attempt to delay the procedure.

Commons will meet at 2:45 p. m. tomorrow to take the oath of allegiance to the new King. On Monday, the sovereign's forty-first birthday, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin will present a message from him.

Oath of Accession Tomorrow.

The new King, who was receiving distinguished visitors at his Piccadilly house at the instant of his accession, will take the oath of accession at 11 a. m. tomorrow at St. James' Palace.

At 3 p. m. heralds, in medieval splendor, will step out on the balcony of the palace for the historic ceremony of public proclamation. Then will follow a procession to Temple Bar and Royal Exchange, where the accession again will be proclaimed with dignity and the fanfare of silver trumpets.

The ceremony will be identical with that for Edward early in the year, except that the proclamation will not say "the King is dead."

After Edward has spoken by radio to the 500,000,000 people whom he ruled for 325 days—probably from a room at Windsor Palace which he occupied as Prince of Wales—he will go to the continent. His friends said he would not be at Cannes, but would reside near

About 10 minutes later another riot started and someone turned in a false fire alarm from a box at the main gate. Fire engines responded, scattering the crowd. Some of the injured said they had been run down by the fire trucks.

Man Dies in Hospital.

John Young, 63 years old, of Chester, was picked up unconscious and died a few minutes after being taken to a hospital. Physicians said they could not determine immediately whether he had died from a heart attack or from an injury.

While strikers and others went to the aid of the injured, more workers dashed through the picket lines to enter the plant.

Among the injured, Peter Martain, 42, of Camden, N. J., was so seriously hurt physicians said he was not expected to live. Martain had given bail of $1000 yesterday on an assault and battery charge in connection with strike activities.

Several of the injured had been beaten with clubs, firsts, rocks, and bricks. Some of the fire trucks were used as ambulances to take the injured to hospitals.

Windows, Autos Damaged.

Windows and automobiles in the vicinity of the plant were damaged by flying sticks and stones.

State police from nearby barracks arrived after the riots and took positions on guard about the plant.

The company had announced its intention of resuming operations today after maintaining only a skeleton force on duty since the start of the strike.

The walkout followed refusal of repair crews to work on a ship that the men said was manned by non-union seamen. At a mass meeting Monday night the workers drew up demands for additional pay, better working conditions and a closed shop.

John G. Pew, president of the company, denied an assertion of the workers that they had an agreement with the company not to work on ships with non-unions crews.

MAIL BARRED TO AGENCY NAMED IN FRAUD ORDER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Delivery of mail and postal money orders to the National Commercial Travelers' Association, St. Louis, was prohibited today in an order issued by Karl A. Crowley, solicitor of the Postoffice Department.

The order was issued after a hearing on a citation, directing the association and its president, H. R. DeLaye of St. Louis, to show cause why a fraud order should not be issued. The Postoffice Department charged the association sold memberships for $25.50 each, to owners of tourist homes, inns and similar establishments on the promise of increased patronage.

Informed of the order, DeLaye said the association, which has offices at 1042 North Taylor avenue, "sold agreements to persons who knew what they were buying, and felt it was entitled to collect the balances due under the agreements," adding, "I guess we'll have to shut up shop now."

ALDERMEN PASS MILK ORDINANCE UNANIMOUSLY

Mayor to Sign It Late Today or Tomorrow and It Will Be Effective Immediately.

RULES SUSPENDED FOR QUICK ACTION

The standard milk control ordinance of the United States Public Health Service was passed unanimously today by the Board of Aldermen.

Mayor Dickmann, who had approved the measure, is expected to sign the bill late today or tomorrow. Since it contained an emergency clause it will become effective as soon as it receives the Mayor's signature.

Passage of the bill today, under a suspension of the rules, came as a surprise. Only yesterday it received unanimous approval of the Public Welware Committee and it was reported to the board today. A plan to suspend the rules and pass it today had been abandoned, it was said yesterday. The rules provide that a week must elapse before a bill reported by a committee may be read the third time and called for passage.

However, immediately after adoption by the board of 12 minor committee amendments, which were acceptable to Health Commissioner oJseph F. Bredeck and other sponsors of the bill, Alderman Emmett Golden offered a motion to suspend the rules and call the bill for final passage. The motion was adopted without dissent.

Only One Alderman Absent.

The motion for adoption of the bill as amended likewise was carried unanimously. All members of the board except Alderman Gregory Murray were present.

As adopted, the measure included all the principal features which met with strenuous opposition from St. Louis milk dealers but which were insisted upon by Dr. Bredeck, the Consumers' Council, the St. Louis Medical Society and more than 100 other organizations which indorsed the bill. The Sanitary Milk Producers, farmers' co-operative, joined the distributors in opposing it.

The ordinance permits the Board of Public Service to lower the grade of a distributor's product for violation of the ordinance, provides a tax of about 1-11 of a cent a quart to provide funds for inspection service, and raises the requirements as to quality of milk and conditions of production and distribution to meet standards of the United States Public Health Service.

One Amendment Opposed.

Only one amendment met with opposition. It provided that distributors who could meet requirements for Special Grade A pasteurized milk might label and sell this premium product before the first grading period begins one year hence.

Alderman Lawrence P. Walsh objected that this put the small distributor at a disadvantage since he would not be able to make necessary changes for production of such milk immediately. Only he and Alderman Joseph B. Schweppe voted against the amendment, however, after several other members had expressed a differing opinion.

Although the ordinance becomes effective immediately upon signature by the Mayor, distributors will be given a year to meet requirements. Grading of milk then will begin.

The commercial milk, 95 per cent of the consumption, may have a bacteria count of not more than 200,000 per cubic centimeter before pasteurization and not more than 30,000 afterward. The present ordinance permits this 13-cent milk to have 1,500,000 bacteria before pasteurization and 100,000 afterward.

Grade B pasteurized milk must meet the same requirements as to bacteria content before pasteurization as Grade A pasteurized, but may contain 50,000 bacteria afterward. Grade C must be marked "for cooking purposes only."

Alderman Otto L. Lietchen, chairman of the Public Welfare Committee, in a speech made when reporting the bill, said he wished to see it passed immediately "as a Christmas present to the people of St. Louis."

PARLIAMENT PASSES ABDICATION BILL; ROYAL ASSENT GIVEN

EDWARD TELLS STAFF GOOD-BY, VISITS GARDENS

Belief Is He Will Motor to Coast and Board Destroyer—His Brother, Duke of Kent, Visits Him.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Edward VIII said farewell today to old members of his personal staff and visited for perhaps the last time the gardens and wooded paths of old Fort Belvedere.

Police guarded the turreted retreat and the nearby flying field. The Duke of Kent, Edward's youngest brother, arrived at the lodge in the afternoon.

Edward's last luncheon as King was with Winston Churchill, the statesman who steadfastly defended his sovereign's position in Commons, and the Duke of Kent.

It was believed Edward will motor to the coast, there to board a destroyer which will take him to France. It was reported the crossing would be from Dover to Dunkirk.

He succeeded his father, George V, when the latter died five minutes before midnight, Jan. 20. His term ended at 1:52 p. m. today.

Edward during the morning signed a document empowering the royal commission to give his assent to the act of abdication. Therefore, there was no necessity for him to affix "Edward R. I." to the act itself.

MRS. SIMPSON HAS NOT CHANGED PLANS, STILL AT CANNES

CANNES, France, Dec. 11.—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson has made no change in her plans to remain at the villa of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers at least until Christmas, it was stated at the villa today. At the same time French officials said "Mr. Windsor," Britain's abdicating King Edward VIII, was not expected on the Riviera soon.

Mrs. Simpson said through a spokesman today she expects to obtain her final divorce decree without any complications. She said she was not aware of any move in England to invalidate her temporary divorce decree from Ernest Aldrich Simpson.

Mrs. Simpson has "no arrangements to meet Edward," the spokesman declared, repeating that she expects to remain in Southern France for several weeks at least.

Late in the afternoon, Mrs. Simpson left the villa for a short drive. She was accompanied by Lord Brownlow, Gentleman-in-Waiting to the ex-King. Her chauffeur drove the same automobile which she used in her dash across France last week. She returned shortly before 6 o'clock.

The meeting of the retiring ruler and the twice-divorced American woman whose attachment for each other precipitated the British crisis, is not likely to take place until public interest has quieted, it was believed here. As to marriage, British social circles on the Riviera were not inclined to discuss it until Mrs. Simpson's divorce becomes absolute next April 27.

When the two do meet it probably will be at some place remote from crowds such as have surrounded the villa here. France, Switzerland and Italy have been mentioned as possible meeting places, but there has been no definite indication; nor has any date been mentioned.

The Man Who Broke a King

PREMIER STANLEY BALDWIN

(Excerpts from the Premier's Report to the House of Commons of His Conversations with King Edward)

"He said to me many times * * * 'You and I must settle this matter together; I will not have anyone interfering.'

"I told him I did not think that particular marriage would receive the approbation of the country.

"He said, 'I am going to marry Mrs. Simpson and I am prepared to go.'

"I said, 'Sire, that is most grievous news.'

"His Majesty asked me whether I could answer his question (whether compromise on a morganatic marriage was possible).

"I gave him the reply that it was impracticable."

"He took my answer without question and never referred to it again.

*"My efforts have been directed in trying to help him make the choice which he has not made. * * * I left nothing undone that I could have done to move him from the decision at which he arrived."*

BIG LOSS TO LLOYD'S ON CORONATION RISKS

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — King Edward's abdication made heavy losses for manufacturers of special goods for his scheduled coronation next May. Articles bearing Edward's picture or name will have to be written off. Many of the makers of coronation mugs, plaques, silver spoons and the like carried insurance with Lloyd's against postponement or change in the coronation plans.

Newspaper estimates of £20,000,000 ($100,000,000) trade loss were called grossly excessive in informed quarters. A conservative estimate place it at £100,000.

Some of loss was insured against as early as last August. The rate was 15 per cent. That jumped to 30 per cent until, a few days ago, no such business was written at all.

Thousands of newly printed books of common prayer and other devotional volumes will have to be revised with the substitution of new pages for those on which King Edward is mentioned by name.

The silver industry was hard hit. It had spent thousands of pounds on expensive dies and already had delivered thousands of coronation medals. They now must be melted and recast in the Duke of York's likeness.

EDWARD'S RADIO TALK TO BE HEARD IN ST. LOUIS AT ABOUT 4 P. M. TODAY

LONDON, Dec. 11.

EX-KING EDWARD will broadcast a message to the British empire over the British Broadcasting Corporation facilities tonight.

The British Broadcasting Corporation announced the King expressed the wish to broadcast immediately after he ceases to become King "as a private person owing allegiance to the new King."

The former King will be heard in St. Louis on Stations KSD, KWK and KMOX at 4 p. m. today.

PUBLIC PLACES IN ENGLAND SUSPEND FOR EDWARD'S TALK

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Suspension was arranged for theaters, cinemas, music halls and greyhound tracks tonight for the minutes in which the radio will carry the voice of former King Edward, which many in the empire never have heard before.

The British Broadcasting Corporation announced a record of the speech would be kept permanently with the recordings of King George V's Christmas talks.

Early tonight it was announced definitely the broadcast had been set for Augusta Tower of Windsor Castle. The castle is three miles from Fort Belvedere, Edward's country lodge. There were reports the new King had decided to be at Edward's side.

WINDSOR, DAVID OR TEDDY

Commission of Lords, Acting for Retiring Ruler, Completes Approval After Two Houses Rush Through Law.

BROTHER TO TAKE OATH TOMORROW

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The Royal Commission in the House of Lords today gave royal assent to the abdication act, completing Edward's renunciation of the British throne and elevating the Duke of York to the kingship.

The Duke of York automatically became the British ruler, and later chose officially the name of George VI.

The three royal commissioners, appointed by the King some time ago to act in his behalf during regular legislative sessions, substituted for the abdicating ruler whose signature on the measure is not now necessary.

It was not immediately disclosed, however, whether Edward would eventually sign his own abdication act. He may, under parliamentary law, do so if he chooses.

Reign Ends at 1:52 P. M.

Both the House of Commons and the House of Lords adjourned as soon as the abdication act became law.

Thus at 1:52 p. m. Edward VIII ceased to reign and the Duke of York became King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, Northern Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Emperor of India, Defender of the Faith.

In six minutes the House of Lords completed legislative action on the abdication bill, passing the measure rapidly through first, second and third readings. The act previously had been rushed through the House of Commons, where Conservative and Laborite majorities overrode an attempt to delay the procedure.

Commons will meet at 2:45 p. m. tomorrow to take the oath of allegiance to the new King. On Monday, the sovereign's forty-first birthday, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin will present a message from him.

Oath of Accession Tomorrow.

The new King, who was receiving distinguished visitors at his Piccadilly house at the instant of his accession, will take the oath of accession at 11 a. m. tomorrow at St. James' Palace.

At 3 p. m. heralds, in medieval splendor, will step out on the balcony of the palace for the historic ceremony of public proclamation. Then will follow a procession to Temple Bar and Royal Exchange, where the accession again will be proclaimed with dignity and the fanfare of silver trumpets.

The ceremony will be identical with that for Edward early in the year, except that the proclamation will not say "the King is dead."

After Edward has spoken by radio to the 500,000,000 people whom he ruled for 325 days—probably from a room at Windsor Palace which he occupied as Prince of Wales—he will go to the continent. His friends said he would not be at Cannes, but would reside near

British Press Discovers Edward Lacked Something Essential in King

HIS IDLE FRIENDS MISLED HIM, SAYS THE LONDON TIMES

"OBSTINACY RATHER THAN STRENGTH"

Ex-Ruler Did Not Have Requisite Fiber When Supreme Decision Came, In Opinion of London News Chronicle.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The British press today marked with regret the abdication of King Edward VIII. Newspaper comment were:

The London Times: They profoundly misunderstood the earlier signs of division in this country who represented it as an issue between "the people's King" and a hidebound set of aristocrats and ecclesiastics. It would be far more accurate to say that His Majesty's circle was too largely composed of men and women, some of them of high birth and all of them remote from "the people," who cared less for his welfare than for their own amusement.

The real clash was between the thoughtlessness of an exotic society and the hard core of British tradition of conduct which is common to all classes in this country; but it must also be said in fairness that none of us can realize how hard is the path of a King in choosing good friends.

That amid all his great qualities there was also something lacking in himself is sufficiently shown by the unprecedented decision recorded this morning; for it is proof of obstinacy rather than of strength that it must have been reached in the face of very human reluctance to abandon the position which afforded him so many proofs of success.

"Had to Be All or Nothing."

The London News Chronicle: The people felt that Edward had it in him to be a great King. But when the supreme decision came between personal choice and public duty he lacked just the requisite fiber to stay the tremendous course. It had to be all or nothing. Only he himself can ever know the intolerable conflict within his own breast or what precise prompting led him at length to the decision which the whole nation so deplores.

The Daily Telegraph: The price of renunciation astounds the world . . . A King who had won so completely the affections of his people might have asked of them almost anything and they would have given it with both hands. But there is always the something which duty must deny, and it will be the abiding grief to the thousands who have loved the King that the one thing he asked, not merely of his ministers, but through his ministers of them, was a marriage which he deems necessary for his happiness, but which they judged to be disastrous to crown and realm.

The London Daily Herald: The affection which this democratic people feels for its King springs only from this: That he serves rather than rules, that he goes with no faction but stands as representative of all, and that above all he has no political authority independent of that of his popularly elected Ministers. And a new King takes the throne at a moment when the nation has made it more plain than ever that it will not conceive of kingship on any other terms.

"Kingly Quality of Courage."

The Manchester Guardian: Wayward and self-willed Edward may have been, but let one thing be remembered. He freely admitted and shouldered a burden from his own past, thereby displaying the one quality that redeems waywardness from weakness, the kingly quality of courage as it is to show to all sorts and conditions of men.

The London Daily Mirror: We must rally round the King's successor. His task is tremendous. We believe he will face it bravely. It is for him to unite us all again with a high sense of public duty which may in time efface the painful memory of these days of humiliation, anxiety and grief.

The Blackshirt (British Fascist publication): The King has left the throne. He has left it because politicians faced him with a cruel choice between the nation and the woman he loved. We cannot blame the King's brother who now assumes the burden which the King lays down and he will receive our loyalty in accord with the consistent policy of this movement to be loyal to the Crown not only in fair weather but also in foul.

The Leeds Mercury: The personal tragedy in whose bitterness we all share has not been allowed to become a national calamity.

"Fatally Lacking for Role."

The Dundee Courier and Advertiser: The dominant opinion today formed in all charity is that something essential for the role of kingship was fatally lacking in the character of King Edward despite his charm and abundant and energetic good will.

The Edinburgh Scotsman: This should not have been the end. There ought to have been a point at which his majesty himself felt he was treading a dangerous path. Even within the past week he might have put personal inclination aside and dedicated himself anew as his peoples hoped and wished to the service of his country and his empire.

The Birmingham Daily Post: He abdicated because in the matter of his contemplated marriage he could neither accept the advice of his ministers nor hope that any alternative ministry won't advise him differently, and because within the area of the British commonwealth ministerial advice on matters of concern to the state must always prevail.

The Liverpool Post: "We have passed through a dangerous time; we must try to forget and turn to the next tasks, of which there are many to hand."

The Cardiff Western Mail: "The nation will not be disposed to prolong the agony of painful parting. It will accord King Edward a farewell salute and pass on to greet his successor."

The London Morning Post: "They (the people) will sincerely hope he may find the happiness which he seeks."

"Infatuation Ruined Career."

The Plymouth Western Morning News: "It will take place as one of history's greatest romances."

The London Daily Express: "Well, we have lost a good King, who might have been a great King, one with charm, personality and understanding. . . . Now we have a new King. Nobody doubts he will show the same high character and worth as his father. . . . As for the proposition that the King ought not to marry a woman who has divorced her husband that, if you like, is untenable. Are you going to hold it against her that she made use of the law of the land? She has been the injured party. In the eyes of justice she bears no guilt."

Among editorials throughout the Empire were the following:

Rand Daily Mail—"King Edward has been called upon to make one of the most heart rending choices that can befall to any man. And Queen Mary, who is in the evening of her life, has not only suffered the loss of her beloved husband but has seen the expectation of her son's long and happy reign so unfortunately disappointed.

"King Edward has laid down his high office. The people will not forget the many services he has rendered them."

Rangoon Gazette—In the act of abdication the man in Edward VIII triumphed over the King, and by the irony of fate the most popular of English monarchs has voluntarily given up the throne of his fathers.

The Times of Malta—It has been a moment to make the upholders of tradition quail. Now that it is past, Malta joins the Empire and the Duke of York in the words "God save the King."

De Valera's Paper Criticises.

Irish newspapers criticised the abdication. De Valera's organ, the Dublin Irish Press, said: It is an extraordinary instance of the inconsistency of public opinion in England and of the strain of illogicality which runs through the British character that the people should be constantly crying out for greater facilities for divorce and that when a monarch should propose to make his spouse a woman who had divorced two husbands there should be such an outcry raised and the position found to be so intolerable that he had no alternative but to relinquish the throne when he was not prepared to meet the general wish.

The Dublin Irish Times: We believe the British monarchy will emerge in splendor from this latest trial but the new King and Queen will stand in need of loyal, active support of everyone of their subjects. The darling of the British Empire and of five continents is going into exile. It is not for the first time in history that love of a man for a woman swayed the destiny of kingdoms.

The Belfast Telegraph: It is disappointing, especially as we recall the motto of the Prince of Wales, "I serve." He may have overestimated the strength of moral opinion of the empire when he played with the idea of making Mrs. Simpson his wife.

Two New Portraits of Mrs. Simpson

enough to that Riviera resort to visit Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, whom he intends to marry as soon as she is free.

The title he will bear—if, indeed, he is anything but Edward Windsor—will be decided by the new King, his brother, "when the time comes." That was the authoritative word in Commons today from Sir Donald Somerwell, the Attorney-General.

Baldwin's Tribute to Edward.

In the final proceedings in the House of Commons, Prime Minister Baldwin paid another moving tribute to the passing sovereign.

"Though we have this duty to perform, and we perform it with unanimity," he said, "we shall always remember with regard and affection the wholehearted and loyal service that His Majesty has given to this country as Prince of Wales and during his short time as King.

"For all this work we are grateful, and we shall not forget."

The Commons swamped an amendment by the left-winger, James Maxton, which would have rejected the abdication bill on the ground it failed to "give effect to the principle of popular election." The vote was 403 to 5.

Attorney-General Somerwell told a Laborite questioner, Will Thorne, in Commons: "There is no truth in the suggestion King Edward will be compelled to leave the country."

Baldwin Cheered by Crowd.

Prime Minister Baldwin, who only a few days ago was a frequent victim of cat-calls when he emerged from his official residence at No. 10 Downing street, was given a popular demonstration as he left for Commons.

The Commons chamber was well filled, but was in no sense packed as it was for yesterday's dramatic announcement of the abdication. There was only a small crowd outside as the members assembled.

The large crowds gathered at the residence of the new King and Queen in Piccadilly. During the early morning hundreds of persons milled about the Duke of York's home in the damp, misty cold, hoping for a glimpse of the sovereigns shortly-to-be and their two infant daughters, Princess Elizabeth, who some day may be Queen Elizabeth II, and Princess Margaret Rose.

Procedure in Commons.

As soon as Baldwin arrived in the House, to the cheers of all parties, he formally moved "that government business should have precedence at today's sitting" and asked for suspension of the 4 o'clock adjournment rule.

The motion carried immediately and the voice of the attendants sounded in the lobby: "Make Room for Black Rod."

In accordance with the age-old custom, the sergeant-at-arms rose and closed the door leading to the chamber. Black Rod gave the traditional three knocks and the door was opened to him.

After the gentleman usher of Black Rod was admitted to the House he advanced to the table and announced that the House of Lords was authorized by virtue of His Majesty's commission to declare the royal assent to acts which had been agreed on by both houses and desired the immediate attendance of Commons to the House of Lords to hear the commission read.

The sergeant-at-arms shouldered the mace and the speaker headed the procession to the upper chamber. On his return the speaker announced the Commons had been to the House of Lords where the commission under the Great Seal was read, giving the royal assent to the railway freight rebates act and other acts.

After this curious delay, considered to be a display of the independence and the superior authority of the House of Lords, Baldwin rose, and, amid cheers, moved the second reading of the declaration of abdication bill.

Baldwin Explains Act.

Baldwin said the provisions of the bill required very few words of explanation from him at this stage.

"As the House will see, the four dominions of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa have desired to be associated with this bill," he said.

"As regards the Irish Free State, I received a message from Mr. De Valera (President of the Free State) today telling me that he proposed to call his Parliament together today to pass legislation dealing with the situation in the Irish Free State.

"The legal and constitutional position is somewhat complex, and many points with regard to that, which any one desires to raise, would be more appropriately dealt with at a later stage.

"It is necessary to have an act of Parliament because the succession to the throne is covered by the act of settlement which makes no provisions for abdication or for succession consequent on abdication."

Baldwin, explaining the provisions of the act, said "no descendant of George II other than issue of Princesses married into foreign families shall be capable of contracting marriage without consent of the King.

"That was passed really to provide a measure of control over the marriages of those who might themselves succeed to the throne or whose descendants might succeed.

"It would clearly be wrong if provisions of the act should apply to His Majesty and his descendants who on passing of this act will cease to have any right in the succession."

Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor party, expressed support of the bill "in order that we might carry out the wishes of His Majesty that this chapter in our history, which is closing, should be closed with least possible delay.

"But a new chapter is being opened, and I want to say a word or two as to why we are supporting this bill.

"We are not to be diverted into abstract discussion about monarchism and republicanism.

"One essential is that the will of the people shall prevail. Further, we want the mind of the nation to return as soon as possible to the urgent problem of the conditions of the people and the state of the world and the great pursuit of peace.

He Criticises Press.

"I believe that a great disservice has been done to constitutional monarchy by over-emphasis and vulgar adulation, particularly in the press.

"Interests which stand for wealth and class privilege have done all they can to invest the monarchy with an unreal halo and procreate a false reverence for royalty and this has tended to obscure the realities of the position.

"I think, too, the continuance of old-fashioned court ceremonial and surrounding of the monarchy by the persons drawn from a narrow privileged class has hampered him in his work."

Attlee said that if constitutional monarchy "is to survive in the present age" a new start is necessary. "I hope we shall now see a new start made," he exclaimed.

The keynote of the monarchy, Attlee said, should be the utmost simplicity "which will bond together the people and the monarchy more closely than before."

His speech met with surprisingly loud cheers.

The left wing labor leader, Maxton, still rebelling against passage of the abdication bill, formally put his motion before the House to decline second reading to the bill.

"The peace and prosperity of the people require a more stable and efficient form of government of a republican kind," Maxton argued. "I say to this House and this country after the experience of these last weeks, republicanism has become more an issue of practical politics than it has been for many years."

Maxton said the constitutional monarchy was a "device which worked reasonably well through three reigns but which hasn't worked so well these last weeks."

The Maxton motion, in which he said life under the monarchy was a "fool's paradise," was merely a formal protest a group of republican-minded members against the monarchial system.

Clergyman Seconds Motion.

The Rev. Campbell Stephen, who seconded the Maxton motion, declared the only argument put forward for retention of the monarchy was that it remained the only link binding England and its dominions.

"If that is the case," he said, "the empire is being held together by a very weak link."

The Rev. Mr. Stephen, emphasizing his opinion the ties between the throne and the dominions are economic, said:

"The dilemma of the King arose because the King, like the rest of them, was a human being. The problems that have arisen in the present instance might well arise in the next few years.

"I know that the new monarch is a married man. So was Mr. Simpson, and just as it happened with the others it also might happen here."

Five members of the House of Commons voted against the abdication bill on its third and final reading. They were Maxton, the Rev. Mr. Stephen, Dr. Alfred Salter and George Hardie, all Laborites, and William Gallacher, Communist. Jock McGovern and George Buchanan, Independent Labor party members, declared their intention of voting against the bill, but could not cast their ballots after they had been appointed tellers.

The final scene in the House of Lords was a swift and simple enactment of old world parliamentary ritual. After the few brief minutes that passage required, the three peers of the Royal Commission retired and quickly donned their scarlet and ermine robes and oddly shaped black hats.

The gilt throne stood, empty, its cover removed, looking strangely bleak and alone.

A short red bench was placed at the steps to the dais. There, in the presence of more than 500 peers, one Bishop, three peeresses and packed press and visitors' galleries, the three Lords of the Royal Commission took their seats.

Commons Members Present.

Members of Commons were summoned, to be informed in the usual manner that the King, choosing to be not personally present, had appointed the commissioners to "give assent to an act."

The reading clerk pronounced the King's declaration of abdication, then the act itself. The clerk of Parliament, standing at a side table facing the Lord Chancellor, turned about toward the members of Commons, jammed together at the end of the chamber beneath the gallery.

In traditional Norman French he intoned: "Le Roi le Veult"—(The King wills it").

Mixed Expressions by Crowd.

"Long live King Edward!" cried hundreds among a surging crowd of 15,000 which gathered in the fog outside Buckingham Palace last night.

"Quitter!" cried others, who thought he should have fought to hold his throne.

Members of the British Union of Fascists still jeered Prime Minister Baldwin. Parading the streets, they cried: "We want Baldwin, dead or alive!" The Fascists were the object of a bill recently passed in Commons forbidding the wearing of political uniforms.

BALDWIN SEES THE NEW KING

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin paid his first official visit to the new King this afternoon. He received a tremendous cheer from a crowd gathered outside the King's home in Piccadilly at Hyde Park Corner. Cries of "Good old Stan," mingled with repeated cheers greeted Baldwin when he left the house after 45 minutes. The Duke of Gloucester was cheered when he arrived for a visit.

The new King will not move into Buckingham Palace until the New Year, but, like his brother, will go there to transact state business.

His family will spend Christmas at Sandringham, with the Queen mother and other relatives.

Socialist M. P. Charges Simpson Divorce Was Collusive; Denounces 'Pampered Royalty' in Commons

"You Know King Was Weak Creature and You Wanted to Get Rid of Him," George Buchanan Says — Other Comment.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Following Prime Minister Baldwin's historic statement in the House of Commons yesterday, detailing his conversations with Edward VIII, leading up to the King's abdication, and speeches in support of the Government by Labor and Liberal leaders, a discordant note was struck by remarks of Left-wing Laborites and a Communist.

James Maxton, leader of the Independent Socialists opened his remarks by saying he realized he was speaking in a house in which an overwhelming proportion of the membership was under strong emotion.

"I respect those emotions although I do not entirely share them," he said. "The monarchial institutions of this land date from very early times and by many are regarded as sacrosanct and everlasting.

"I share with others in this house the human sympathies that go out to His Majesty as a man confronted with the difficulty which has confronted him in recent weeks.

New Times, Old Institutions.

"I share the same human sympathies with the Prime Minister who has had to shoulder the task which few if any of the occupants of his position have ever had to shoulder before and in the nature of the case he has had to shoulder them alone.

"The decisions he has made are, I believe, in strict accordance with his conservative principle, but I do say that in the very nature of the monarchial institution on an hereditary basis circumstances of this kind were bound to arise and have arisen now—circumstances which have created very grave difficulties in this country and in the empire overseas.

"We are living today in a new kind of world with new kinds of problems.

"Institutions that dated back centuries, however much reverence they might inspire because of their ancient origins and traditions associated with them over the centuries, were not necessarily those which could cope with the problems of modern times.

"This party therefore intended, however it might be against the general run of opinion in the House, to take the view strongly that the lesson of the past few days and this day in particular was that the institution of monarchy has outlived its usefulness—and that the happenings of the last few days indicated the grave perils that were bound to happen where a centralizing, unifying figure was an hereditary personality.

"We would try to persuade the House to face the situation with the idea in their minds that the course for Great Britain and its allied countries in the future was the course of other advanced countries in the world and that we should become one of the Republican nations."

To Be a King or a Man.

Col. Josiah Wedgwood, Laborite, said that after hearing the "admirable and sincere" speech by Baldwin he had no regrets that the motion he had introduced early in the crisis was dead. (Col. Wedgwood had introduced a motion calling on the Commons to vote confidence in the monarchy.)

"I could have wished that the King could have been allowed to live here happily married and as King but His Majesty has wished otherwise.

"A thousand years hence we might be a little more liberal in our views and allow, but that is not the case now.

"The Prime Minister has made it perfectly clear that there were really only two alternatives for the King—to continue lonely and disappointed, ruling an empire, or throw up royalty and remain a man.

"I wish to commend him for his choice for nothing could be more hopeless than for the kingdom to be ruled by a man with a grievance, hostile to every Minister who had put him in the dilemma.

"Tomorrow we shall all take a new oath of allegiance. Throughout the country there will be millions of people with aching hearts. They will carry on.

"They will take that oath because he wished it, but if they sometimes raise their glasses to the King across the water, who shall blame them?"

Communist's View.

William Gallacher, only Communist member in Commons, said:

"It is obvious that forces were operating and advising and encouraging what has been going on. Throughout this issue Parliament has never been consulted from beginning to end.

"It was not an issue between the King and Parliament but an issue between two groups who were fighting continually for domination.

"It will not be possible to repair the damage that has been done to the monarchial institution of this country."

George Buchanan, Socialist, followed the Communist member and brought gasps of amazement from every quarter of the House with his statement. Referring to the Simpson divorce case, he said:

"Everybody knows it was a breaking of the law, a throwing of the law courts aside, an entering into an association now which everybody knows was a collusive action.

"Today you are setting aside your pampered royalty and the next one will be pampered, too. They are surrounded by a set of flunkies who refuse to allow them to know the truth. Tomorrow I will say it is time that people ceased to trust these folks.

"I have heard praise of the King which I feel was not held sincerely in any quarter of the House. I go further.

"You Want to Get Rid of Him."

"Who has not heard the tittle-tattle and gossip? If he (the King) had not gone out voluntarily everyone knows the same people who in this House paid him lip service would have poured out scorn, abuse and filth about him.

"If the King was one-tenth as good as you say he was, why does everyone want him to be unloaded? It is because you know he was a weak creature and you want to get rid of him.

"The great tragedy is that if an ordinary workman had been in this mess, everybody in this House would have been ashamed of him."

Sir Ian Fraser, a Conservative, declared:

"Not in any representative capacity, but as an old soldier I would like to say that no group of the community has enjoyed in a greater degree the understanding, sympathy and good will of His Majesty than the ex-service man.

"They will feel not merely that they have lost one who has worked with them and for them for a quarter of a century but a personal friend.

"No group has a deeper sense of importance, or stability and strength in difficult times and feel certain that their loyalty to the crown and their help to the new King will be unbounded."

Previously Winston Churchill, veteran British statesman, took the floor to say:

"Nothing is more certain and more obvious than that recrimination or controversy at this time will not only be useless but harmful and wrong.

"What is done is done. What has been done or left undone belongs to history and as history so far as I am concerned it shall be left.

"Therefore, I shall make only few observations. First is this: It is clear from what we have been told this afternoon that there was at no time a constitutional issue between the King and his Ministers or between the King and Parliament.

King 'Conformed Strictly.'

"The supremacy of Parliament over the country and the duty of the sovereign to act in accordance with the advice of his ministers—neither of these were at any moment in question.

"No sovereign has ever conformed more strictly and more faithfully to the letter and spirit of the constitution than his present Majesty.

"In fact he has voluntarily made a sacrifice for peace and the strength of his realm which goes far beyond the bounds required by the law and constitution.

"That is my first observation. My second is this:

"I have throughout pleaded for time. No one can say how grave would have been the evils of a protracted controversy. On the other hand it was my duty to endure those evils. Time was also important from another point of view.

"It was essential that there should be no room for assertion after the event that the King had been hurried in his decision.

"I believe if this decision had been taken last week it could not have been declared that it was an unhurried decision so far as the King himself was concerned.

Virtues Led to Tragedy.

"In King Edward there were discerned qualities of courage and simplicity and above all sincerity, rare and precious, which might have made his reign glorious in the annals of our ancient monarchy.

"It is the acme of tragedy that these very virtues should in a private sphere have led to this melancholy and bitter conclusion.

"But although our hopes today are withered, still I will assert that his personality will not go down unchershed to future ages, but that it will be particularly remembered in the homes of his poorer subjects and that they will ever wish from the bottoms of their hearts for his private peace and happiness and for the happiness of those who are dear to him.

"I have been looking at this matter from an angle different from that of most of the honorable members.

"It was my duty more than a quarter of a century ago to stand beside his present majesty and proclaim his style and title at his investiture as the Prince of Wales amid the sunlit battlements of Caernarvon Castle.

"Ever since then he has honored me and also in wartime with personal kindness and I may even say friendship. I should have been ashamed if in my independent and official position I had not cared about for every means, even the most forlorn, to keep him on the throne of his father, to which he had only just succeeded amid the hopes and prayers of all."

U. S. PROSECUTION COMPLETES CASE AT MUENCH TRIAL

Government Rests on Fourteenth Day of Its Presentation on Mail Fraud Indictments.

DEMURRERS FILED FOR 4 DEFENDANTS

Judge Moore Indicates He Will Give Ruling on Routine Allegations This Afternoon.

The Government rested shortly after noon today in the case of Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench and three co-defendants on trial before United States District Judge George H. Moore charged with using the mails in a scheme to defraud Dr. Marsh Pitzman, wealthy physician, by convincing him falsely that Mrs. Muench was the mother of a child and that he was its father. The trial is in its fourteenth day.

Immediately demurrers were filed for all four defendants, who, in addition to Mrs. Muench, are her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench; Attorney Wilfred Jones, the baby broker, and Mrs. Helen Berroyer.

The demurrers, which were based on the routine allegation that the Government had failed to prove its case, and asked for the discharge of the defendants, were taken under advisement by the Judge, who indicated he would rule on them this afternoon.

Anna Ware, who recovered her illegitimate son by court order a year ago from the Muenches after they had attempted to palm off the child as their own, was on the witness stand during most of the morning session, concluding her cross-examination. The former Pennsylvania housemaid, now 20 years old, told her story in the same faint voice and in the same pathetic detail with which she had related it on three previous occasions, the first in the habeas corpus proceeding in which she recovered her child from the Muenches, and the second and third in trials at Kahoka, Mo. In the second of these trials, as is known, the same four defendants were convicted and fined for conspiracy to take custody of a child without authority of the Juvenile Court.

Three Chief Points.

For the purposes of the prosecution of the mail fraud trial Anna's testimony included three important items of evidence: First that Jones arranged for her to come to St. Louis to have her baby, and took charge of the child; second, that his companion, when he took the baby, was Mrs. Berroyer, garbed as a nurse; third, that before the baby was born he took Anna riding in his automobile with a woman who, Jones said, was to be the baby's foster mother, and that that woman was Mrs. Muench.

On cross-examination Verne R. Lacy, counsel for Jones, failed to shake her in any detail on her story. His questions seemed to be based upon penciled memoranda handed him by Jones, and simply served to take her again over the account she gave on direct examination, amplifying certain details, but changing none.

Typical of the examination was a series of questions in reply to which she testified she had been persuaded to come to St. Louis to have her baby by Mrs. Lily Giordon of Newton, Pa., who had employed her as a housemaid. Mrs. Giordon's husband was the father of the Ware baby, which was born at the home of Mrs. Giordon's mother, Mrs. Rebecca Winner, a midwife, 2015 Maple avenue.

Everyone Knew, She Says.

"Well," said Lacy, "you came to St. Louis to conceal the birth of the baby because you didn't want the people back home to know about it, didn't you?" "No," the witness replied. "Everyone knew about it. We had filed criminal charges against Mr. Giordon there."

Confirming the point that one of the aims of her trip to St. Louis was to make her give up the child, the Government previously had introduced a letter from Mrs. Giordon to Jones in which she had urged the baby broker to work toward that end.

Lacy went over meals and clothes bought for her by the St. Louis Star-Times and places of amusement to which she had been taken, then asked if a lawyer for the Star-Times had not talked to her before the trials at Kahoka.

Blanton's Objection Overruled.

District Attorney Blanton objected that even if the lawyer had talked to her, it would not be binding on the Government's case. Lacy said his purpose was to show whether or not "constant association with special interests had influenced her." Blanton suggested that newspaper representatives might have been there to protect her, but was overruled. Lacey then asked her what other newspaper representatives she had talked to, but did not go into the conversations, except when Anna volunteered once that one newspaper attorney to whom she spoke during the present trial had merely asked her how she was.

Defense Plea Overruled.

When Anna left the stand, at 11:45, the District Attorney announced that the Government had concluded, but the defense protested that they wanted to examine Mrs. Grace Thomasson further. After objection by the Government, that they already had ample time to cross-examine her, had been overruled, Defense Attorney Roy W. Rucker cross-examined her for about 20 minutes.

The chief subject of his questioning was the operation which Mrs. Thomasson had testified was performed on Mrs. Muench by her husband in the Muench home on the night of Aug. 30-31, 1935, with Mrs. Thomasson assisting. The purpose, she had testified, was to make it appear that Mrs. Muench had given birth to a child. The witness was required to state the nature of the operation again in clinical detail.

Questioned About Third Baby.

Counsel then directed the witness to her testimony that on the early morning of Dec. 17, 1935, she and Jones set out for Chicago to get a third baby to be used in the hoax. This was after the first, or Price baby, had died, and the second, the Ware baby, had been proved to be the child of Anna Ware and had been taken from the Muenches. Mrs. Thomasson testified she left for Chicago, after a conference attended by Mrs. Muench, Attorney Shad Bennett and Bennett's stenographer, in Mrs. Berroyer's automobile, driven by Mrs. Muench's chauffeur, known to her as "Robert."

At this juncture, a Negro was asked to stand up in the court room, and Mrs. Thomasson was asked if he was "Robert." She said that he was and was excused from the stand.

At this point, the Government rested.

BRITAIN DEFAULTS ON DEBT AGAIN; TALKS OF NEW PARLEY

Says It Is Ready to Reopen Discussions If There Is Chance of Settlement.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The British Government defaulted again today on its war debt to the United States, but did not say, as in the past, that it was unable to meet its annual installment. Instead, it made a reference to new debt discussions.

A note transmitted to R. Walton Moore, acting Secretary of State, through the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, said: "His Majesty's Government will be ready to reopen discussions on the matter whenever circumstances are such as to warrant the hope that a satisfactory result might be reached."

The British Government first refused to pay in 1932. The December installment due from Britain is $117,670,765.

'VERY LITTLE' REMAINS OF $440,000 ESTATE

Executor Says Mrs. Gietner Spent Most of It on Charity Which He Heads.

The will of Mrs. Carrie Elligson Gietner, who inherited $440,000 five years ago on the death of her husband, was filed yesterday in Probate Court, but the executor, Werner Hencke, told a Post-Dispatch reporter there was "very little" left of the estate.

Mrs. Gietner, Hencke said, had used most of the money to establish the Carrie Elligson Gietner Home at 5523 Virginia avenue, an institution for the aged, crippled and convalescent, which her will named as the principal beneficiary of her estate.

Hencke, a plumbing contractor who lives at 2335 South Grand boulevard, is superintendent of the home which, he said, has nine residents.

The will was drawn in July, 1931, before Mrs. Gietner established the home. In its original form it contained specific bequests of $23,000 and certain real estate chiefly to friends of Mrs. Gietner and left the residue of the estate to Hencke with instructions that he was to establish a trust fund for the benefit of the home.

Eight Codicils.

Subsequently Mrs. Gietner added eight codicils, canceling the specific bequests, but the codicils were found to be invalid when the will was filed because they were witnessed by only one person, usually Hencke. Two witnesses are required.

The specific bequests which Mrs. Gietner sought to cancel, but which remain in effect because of the defective codicils, were: $5000 to Carlyn Armiger, Portsmouth, Va.; real estate at 1600 South Twelfth street to the Blind Girls' Home, 5235 Page boulevard; $5000 to Theresa Kolb, 2910 South Grand boulevard; $5000 to Elsie Wheeler, San Diego, Cal.; $5000 to the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, and $500 each to Christine Beck, Lena Otzleberger, Sina Davidson, Florence Dickson, Margaret Lehman and Theodore Harris.

Those whom the will named as recipients of $500 bequests, Hencke said, were residents of th Bethesda Home at the time the will was signed, but now live in the home Mrs. Gietner established. Mrs. Gietner's intention, he said, was to cancel these bequests because she had provided a home for the persons named.

Gift of $81,000 a Year Ago.

After Mrs. Gietner established the home, Hencke said, she drew on her estate from time to time for funds to support it. The last occasion, he said, was about a year ago when she gave the home $81,000.

Mrs. Gietner, the widow of Charles Gietner, druggist and former president of the St. Louis College of Pharmacy, lived at 2910A South Grand boulevard. She died Dec. 3 at the age of 76.

Federal Charge Against Earl Evans, Former Progressive Miners' Officer.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Dec. 11. — Earl (Nip) Evans, Saline County Sheriff and former officer in the Progressive Miners' Union was arrested here at 10:20 a. m. today on a bench warrant charging conspiracy to violate the Sherman Anti-trust Law.

The Sheriff was released under a $10,000 bond returnable in United States District Court at Springfield Jan. 4. He declined to make a statement.

First Commoner Queen Of England Since 1542

George's Wife, Known as Smiling Duchess, Endeared to Empire by Devotion to Her Family.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The new Queen of the Empire, who was born Elizabeth Angela Marguerite Bowes-Lyon, will be the first commoner to share England's throne since Catherine Parr, who in 1542 became the sixth and last of the wives of Henry VIII.

"I like to be called 'Lizzie,'" she once said. If she is to be known as Queen Elizabeth, she will be the Empire's first queen of that name in 330 years.

The title "England's Smiling Duchess," often has been applied to her, because of her good temper and unruffled calm.

But the quality that has endeared her especially to the Empire's millions is her devotion to her family, a trait she shares with her husband, Edward's successor to the throne.

Now 36, the former Lady Elizabeth, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore, devotes most of her time to her home, her husband and her two small daughters.

Her days rotate around the two little princesses — Princess Elizabeth, who some day may rule the Empire in her own right, and Princess Margaret Rose; and around the details of her household.

She Respects Tradition.

She is a head shorter than her husband, and a bit plump, with a round face, smooth, fairly heavy brows and light brown hair which she parts in the middle.

For a while it was rumored that she would wed Edward Windsor, then Prince of Wales.

The Empire's felicitations, when her engagement to York was announced, were warm and sincere.

It was reported that her father sold family papers to defray the cost of the wedding, and certainly her dowry was small. But the people knew it was a love match, and were vastly pleased.

Descriptions of their wedding day say the day dawned with rain falling steadily, but at the end of the service the sun emerged from behind the mist.

The venerable Dowager Queen Alexandra then moved from her place and bestowed kisses on the bridal party.

The woman who will be England's next queen carried no bridal bouquet—she had put it on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Given Status of Princess.

King George gave her a silver dinner service. From Buckingham Palace came the announcement: "Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon on her marriage has become Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of York, with the status of a princess."

York gave her diamond and pearl necklaces. She had a beautiful wardrobe, and life moved smoothly along.

Three years after she married the Duke of York, Princess Elizabeth was born, in the childhood bedroom of the duchess, in her father's town house.

Princess Margaret Rose, now 6, was born four years later in Glamis Castle, Scotland, soon after her mother's thirtieth birthday.

Princess Gets News.

A person in close touch with the royal household disclosed today that Princess Elizabeth was bent over her books when her mother entered her schoolroom and told her the important tidings of her father's accession. But she was not told she was now a more important personage herself as heir presumptive to the throne.

"Much of the tenseness of the moment was communicated to Princess Elizabeth," said a witness of the drama, "for she's an astute, sharp-witted little girl.

"For days she has been asking questions. Naturally, she was told nothing of the true gravity of events.

"But, in driving to and from Windsor, she has frequently caught sight of newspaper posters bearing the King's name. She has plied her attendants with questioning regarding what was happening to 'Uncle David.'"

The Princess and her young sister, Princess Margaret Rose, were expected shortly to be taken to the Royal Lodge, Windsor.

In the eyes of conservative England, the choice of a Prince Consort for a Queen is even more important than the choice of a Queen for a King on the theory that a husband has more ability to influence his wife.

Elizabeth can follow the example of her great-great-grandmother, Victoria, and propose to the man she chooses.

The first Queen Elizabeth remained unmarried, the memory of her sister Mary's marriage to Philip II of Spain, later England's arch-enemy, fresh in her mind.

The Crown was voted jointly to William of Orange and his wife, Queen Mary, after he had chased her father, James II, out of the land.

Queen Anne married Prince George of Denmark. Like Queen Victoria's Albert, he was disliked because he was a foreigner.

Yet, England has always believed it unwise for a Queen to marry a Briton because it was felt he would become too proud and he would have a chance to reward his friends and punish his enemies.

EAST SIDE DANCE HALL BURNS

Lansdowne Park Pavilion Was Built for World's Fair.

Fire caused damage estimated at $10,000 to the Lansdowne Park dance pavilion, Twenty-sixth street and Lincoln avenue, East St. Louis, early today. The dance hall, converted into a skating rink last October, was destroyed, and an adjoining two-story building containing a bar and dining hall was damaged.

The buildings were insured, but the fixtures and furniture were not. The dance pavilion was built in 1904 for the World's Fair and was used as a dairy exhibit building. It was owned by Charles Sharn, 1632 North Twenty-fifth street, East St. Louis.

M'LAIN REFUSES TO TESTIFY UNTIL CHARGE IS MADE

HEARING RECESSES UNTIL WEDNESDAY

Adjournment Follows 20 Minutes of Testimony and Two Hours of Delay and Wrangling.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 11. — After a hearing that included about 20 minutes of testimony and more than two hours of delays and wrangling over procedure and legal points, the penal institution investigation in progress before the State Penal Board was adjourned at noon today until Wednesday morning.

The adjournment came after counsel for Superintendent Guy W. McLain of the State intermediate reformatory at Algoa, whose management of the institution has been under fire in the inquiry instituted by Attorney-General McKittrick, refused to permit him to be called as a witness until the Attorney-General produced evidence of any irregularities and filed specific charges against McLain.

The delay until Wednesday was ordered to give the Attorney-General time to subpena additional witnesses to testify concerning the handling of funds at the reformatory, including a canteen and activity fund from which althletic supplies and other equipment is purchased for the use of reformatory inmates. One of the witnesses to be called is Jason E. Roy of Douglas County, former assistant superintendent of the institution.

Sustained by Board.

The Penal Board, headed by Stephen B. Hunter, director of penal institutions, sustained the contention of McLain's attorneys that he should not be called on to testify until evidence of alleged irregularities had been produced and specific charges filed. The board held McKittrick could call any other witness he desired to inquire into any alleged irregularities, or misuse of any of the reformatory funds.

The hearings have been in progress since Monday, and followed a preliminary investigation by McKittrick. So far 53 witnesses have testified, about half of them reformatory inmates. The testimony given so far has dealt with the handling of reformatory records, the bookkeeping, alleged illegal withdrawal of subsistence supplies by McLain for his own use, alleged whipping and beating of reformatory inmates without compliance with statutory requirements concerning corporal punishment, and the general management of the reformatory.

Olin N. Bell, assistant superintendent of the reformatory, was the only witness examined today. He testified briefly about the handling ot the records of the reformatory canteen, under his direction, since Aug. 1, 1935. The canteen is stocked with tobacco, candy and other supplies, not included in the regular issues to inmates, which may be purchased by employes or inmates. Profits go into an activity fund to purchase instruments for the reformatory band, athletic equipment, and to provide entertainments.

AIMEE M'PHERSON QUESTIONED ABOUT TAKING TURKISH BATH

Evangelist Tells Lawyer in Slander Suit "I Certainly Wasn't Plastered."

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 11.—A. Brigham Rose, counsel for Rheba Crawford, asked Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson yesterday: "In the parlance of the pavement, were you plastered at Sixth and Hill streets at 3 a. m. yesterday morning?"

"Why, this is silly—it's humiliating," the evangelist replied. "I certainly was not plastered, and I wasn't there at 3 a. m."

Rose's question came at a deposition hearing relative to Miss Crawford's $1,080,000 slander suit against Mrs. McPherson. After the witness' denial, he continued: "When where you there?"

"I was there about 6 o'clock," she answered. "Believe it or not, I was coming out of a Turkish bath."

"I was taking it to cure a cold—many do," said the witness.

Mrs. McPherson testified that once when Miss Crawford, then associate pastor at Angelus Temple, was asked by temple officials about the commissary at the institution, she declared, "to hell with the commissary."

FLEES IN CONSTABLE'S AUTO; IS HURT IN WRECK

Youth Captured in County After Officers Fire Three Shots in Chase.

A 16-year-old youth, who stole Deputy Constable Fred Ripper's automobile, was injured when the machine left Lemay Ferry road at Mehlville and upset in a ditch while Ripper was giving chase in another machine at 3 a. m. today.

The youth, placed under guard at County Hospital, was booked as Don Dobashan, 301 Russell avenue. He suffered concussion of the brain.

The chase started after Ripper and Deputy Constable George Geders, both of Carondelet Township, got out of Ripper's machine to make an investigation at the home of Fred Coco, Lemay Ferry and Green Park roads, and left the ignition key in the lock. The youth ran from beside a filling station next door and drove away in the car. Ripper and Geders, who had started to question a man and a woman seated in a parked automobile, got in that car and gave chase for two miles, firing three shots. Two bullets hit Ripper's car, a 1937 model.

Coco's daughter, Catherine, had called the officers after she was awakened and discovered two youths standing at an open door. They asked her for something to eat. She slammed the door and ran to the telephone. When Ripper and Geders reached the scene they found a youth standing near the front of the house. They ordered him to remain there while they completed their investigation. After the automobile chase the youth had disappeared. He was arrested this morning walking south on Lemay Ferry road, and said he was Henry Miller, 17, 2204A South Third street. According to the officers, he said he and the other youth had been drinking and he spent part of the night in a roadside ditch.

LADY ASTOR IN BROADCAST TO U. S. ON KING'S ABDICATION

Says Edward Put Personal Affection Above Public Duty; Made His People Unhappy.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Nancy Lady Astor said in a broadcast from London last night that King Edward's placing of "personal affection above public duty" had caused "unhappiness in the hearts of all his majesty's subjects."

"But underneath that unhappiness," said the American-born woman, the first of her sex admitted to Parliament, "remains the same spirit of calm determination which has characterized the Anglo-Saxon race in every emergency.

"Those who will not obey the rules, can't rule," she said, "and, believe me, in this crisis, tragic though it has been, it has left us not weaker but stronger.

"Mrs. Simpson was rejected because of her previous history. The Prime Minister made it quite clear that the dominions showed objection to the King's marriage to Mrs. Simpson. . . . Not because she is not of royal blood nor because she was an American.

"You must understand that in the reign of George V, the crown became in a very special legal sense the bond of the Empire. . . . Our kind of monarchy is not out of date, for it appeals to the heart as well as the head."

Of Edward, she said: "We all loved him, and still do. But we hoped great things of him and today we mourn that he has let these opportunities pass from him."

POLICE GET LETTER ASKING THEM TO FIND SANTA CLAUS

Note Wants Him Sent to Family of Nine Children on Third Street.

A letter asking "Mr. Policeman" to find Santa Claus and send him to 2215 South Third street, where a family of nine children had awaited him in vain on past Christmases, was received in the mail yesterday at Wyoming Street Police Station. Addressed to the "Second Police Station", the appeal was signed "Teresa Cecilia McGuirk," described as 7 years old, but appeared to have been written or dictated by an older person.

"I always heard you find lost people," the letter said. "Will you please find Santa Claus and send him to our house? There are nine children of us—six boys, 16, 14, 11, 9, 2, and 2 months, and three girls, 18 (crippled), 7 and 4. We are so poor, Santa Claus never did come to our house. Mother always said she guessed Santa was lost and could not find our house. Me and sister Lillie hope Santa brings us a doll and a buggy so we can play together. Please find him and send him to our house. I am 7 years old and in second grade. From a little poor girl and her brothers and sisters who look for Santa Claus at Christmas."

Skyscrapers Barred in Peiping.
By the Associated Press.

PEIPING, North China, Dec. 11.—The American Embassy radio tower, the highest structure in Peiping, and the dragon-topped gateways of the former Imperial Palace will continue to dominate the skyline here, according to General Sung Cheh-yau, ruler of North China.

Shocked by the stark outlines of several multi-storied buildings going up here, General Sung concluded that they would be a blot on Peiping's classic landscape, and has prohibited further structures over two stories high.

U. S. PRESS COMMENT ON EDWARD'S ACTION

Excerpts from editorials in the United States on King Edward's abdication follow:

New York Times: ". . . It is a sad frustration of the hopes that centered in Edward VIII. . . . All this high opportunity for service, this call to duty, he put aside in one mad surge of passion for a woman. This was unworthy of a true man and of the great tradition into which his inheritance had brought him. . . . The dominions have stood fast. . . . Have seen their own rights safeguarded and the power of Parliament over the crown vindicated. . . ."

New York Herald Tribune: ". . . One moral seems unmistakable and it has the widest bearing on the conduct of every democracy. It is that only complete candor can create the atmosphere necessary for the healthy conduct of a people's government.

Chicago Tribune: . . . No one can conclude (the) action exhausts the possibilities or defines the consequences. . . . A train of events has been started and not brought to its destination. No King of the realm could indicate his opinion of the value of the crown in such a fashion and leave it to his successor in the sacrosanct light in which he received it from his father. . . . It is worthy to remark, too, that the British nobility, aristocracy and upper classes who reject the King's choice of a consort were fairly well contented to carry their title to punctilious morality in the persons of King George and Queen Mary. Their own conduct has been nothing to point a scornful finger at either Edward or the woman he intends to marry. . . .

Baltimore Sun: Unquestionably the people will rally around their new King and his already popular wife. The ranks will close and the British nation will march on. It will not, however, march without new doubts and glancings over the shoulder, new apprehensions lest wider cracks appear in the supposedly unbreakable facade of the British constitution.

New York Sun: "The abdication of Edward VIII is a victory for constitutional democratic institutions. The King's solution of the difficulty into which his love affair had brought him and the empire over which he was called to reign he embodied in the suggestion that Parliament enact a statute sanctioning a morganatic marriage. To this the answer of the Government was an unequivocal 'no.'"

Boston Globe: "He (Edward) bade fair to fulfill the symbol of the crown more vividly than did ever his father and grandfather. Perhaps that was just the trouble. Little though the British people may relish a change in the much less colorful figure of his brother, the Duke of York, his docility is expected to be much more acceptable to the present ministry."

Dallas News: "The stability of the British Commonwealth is apparently restored after a brief period of danger. The new King will doubtlessly make a satisfactory ruler, possibly a more adequate one for these times than Edward would have been. It must be painful for any man to retreat from a position as high as the King-Emperor, but the alternative of deserting a lady at the church might have left even sorer wounds to both Edward's emotions and to his prestige in an age in which chivalry has not been entirely forgotten."

FAVORS LIFTING U. S. EMBARGO ON SOME ARGENTINE MEAT

National Chamber of Commerce Head Says That in Southern Argentina Is Disease-Free.
By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 11.—Harper Sibley, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, declared today he believed Southern Argentine beef and mutton were free from the disease which caused the United States to forbid their importation of Argentine chilled meat.

President Roosevelt said on his visit here, he would recommend approval by the United States Senate of a convention to replace the flat embargo with regulations to permit the entry of meat from zones free of hoof and mouth disease.

Sibley, who returned today from a three-day flying trip in Patagonia, Argentina, contended chilled mutton from Patagonia should be admitted to the United States market even though the United States prohibition continues on beef from Northern Argentina, where hoof and mouth disease is said to exist.

Ram Breaks Woman's Leg.

Mrs. Bessie Besterfeldt, 52-year-old wife of a Jersey County (Ill.) farmer, is in St. Joseph's Hospital, Alton, suffering from a fractured leg and body injuries sustained Dec. 3 when she was knocked down by a ram. The animal had broken out of its pen and when she attempted to get it back in, the ram knocked her down. She was struck by the ram again and again until she became unconscious.

Stop Order on Patent Medicines.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — Karl A. Crowley, Postoffice Department solicitor, issued an order today prohibiting delivery of mail and payment of money orders to Dr. L. Emerick, Eaton, O. Crowley said Department attorneys charged Emerick with selling an alleged cure for diabetes which consisted of "a haphazard collection" of medicines discredited by the medical profession.

AGE ELIMINATES PARK FOR U. S. JUDGESHIP

Cummings Says Roosevelt Will Appoint No One Over 60 —Governor Is 64.

Gov. Guy B. Park has been eliminated as a possible appointee to the newly created United States District Judgeship in Missouri by the fixed policy of President Roosevelt to appoint no one more than 60 years old to a Federal judgeship. Park was 64 last June.

Senator Bennett Champ Clark, who arrived in St. Louis yesterday afternoon to remain several days on personal business, said he talked to Attorney-General Cummings Wednesday and was informed that the administration age rule on Judges would be followed in the Missouri appointment.

Among those mentioned for the appointment, who also are eliminated by reason of age, are Col. James E. Rieger of Kirksville, Judge Daniel E. Bird of Kansas City, Judge O'Neil Ryan of St. Louis and A. N. Gossett of Kansas City.

These eliminations and the understanding that James P. Aylward of Kansas City, Boss Tom Pendergast's choice, would not accept the judgship, leave Boyle G. Clark of Columbia, head of the Supreme Court's Bar Supervisory Committee, as an outstanding possibility for the appointment.

Senator Clark said that he had made no decision as to whom he would recommend and would make none until he had conferred with Senator Harry S. Truman, probably after Jan. 1.

A strong indorsement of Gov. Park was sent to Washington Wednesday by five of the seven Judges of the Missouri Supreme Court and the six Supreme Court Commissioners. There have been reports that if Gov. Park failed to receive the Federal appointment, he would be made a Supreme Court Commissioner, though to place him on the Commission would necessitate the resignation of one of the commissioners, none of whose terms expires until 1939.

ANTI-PRICE DISCRIMINATION LAW EXPLAINED BY PATMAN

Predicting that there will be just as few violations of the law of which he was co-author as there have been of the Interstate Commerce Law, Congressman Wright Patman interpreted the Robinson-Patman law for a group of about 300 business men at a meeting at Hotel Statler last night.

The law which was passed to prevent price discrimination applies to all classes of commodities and affects from 90to 95 per cent of business, he stated. Prices may be changed and advertising allowances made but all customers must be given the same advantages regardless of quantity purchased. "The law is not aimed to harm the cooperatives and it is not an anti-chain bill," he said. "Its aim is to get equal prices and a fair deal so merchants will compete through cleverness and efficiency rather than chiseling and cheating." He also said that the buyer was just as guilty as the seller and liable for suits for three-fold damages.

The meeting was sponsored by McKesson-Merrell Drug Co. for the retail druggists in this territory. The speaker was introduced by Zack V. Kerrigan, president of the Missouri Pharmaceutical Association. William T. Mason, president of the Board of Aldermen, and J. G. Noh also spoke.

EDWARD'S INCOME UNCERTAIN BUT HE HAS AMPLE MEANS

He Gives Up $2,050,000 Pay, But Is Said to Have Inherited $5,000,000 From Grandmother.

PENSION ALSO IS POSSIBILITY

Wording of Abdication Indicates He Also Will Lose $500,000 in Annuities From Duchies.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11. — The future income of Edward Windsor is uncertain. Whether the man who gave up the throne of England will accept a pension from the Government was unannounced, but it generally was taken for granted he would have ample means, from one source or the other.

It long has been known that Edward is independently wealthy. He once had an active stock brokerage account. It is said his grandmother, Queen Alexandra, bequeathed to him £1,000,000 (about $5,000,000). Royal wills, however, are not made public. Alexandra, it also is said, left Edward her valuable collection of gems, most of which he is thought to have given to Mrs. Simpson.

It had been assumed he would retain at least part of the £100,000 ($500,000) annual income from the Duchies of Lancaster and Cornwall.

But the abdication bill title phrase, "demise of the crown," seemed to indicate this was impossible. The closest historical parallel was when the Stuarts were replaced by Edward's Hanoverian ancestors, to whom all crown lands were promptly transferred.

What Reigning King Receives.

A reigning King receives £43,000 sterling ($215,000) from Lancaster. Since birth, Edward has received approximately £70,000 ($350,000) annually from Cornwall, always designed for the King's eldest son.

To save the British taxpayer money, Edward, after allotting £25,000 ($125,000) to the Duke of York, has applied this private income since his accession against his salary as King. The latter is fixed by the civil list and, in Edward's case, totaled £410,000 ($2,050,000). Had he married, retaining the throne, there would have been £40,000 ($200,000) more each year.

King George received £470,000 ($2,350,000) and, since his death, the widowed Queen Mary has received £70,000 ($350,000).

Question of Estates.

It is still to be decided whether Edward inherited estate such as Fort Belvedere and Balmoral as the oldest son of his father, or as his successor on the throne.

In the latter event, he could retain only his strictly personal property—and Government aid might be welcome.

Edward loses his high-sounding titles with his throne. With relinquishing of his throne, he ceases to be Edward VIII, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the Dominions Beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

If he takes a title at all, it probably will be chosen from one of the eight peerages he held as King. He could choose any of his dukedoms: Cornwall, Lancaster, Normandy or Rothesay.

Or he might take a more humble Earldom, becoming the Earl of Chester or the Earl of Carrick.

Even lower in the aristocratic scale he might decide to be the Baron of Renfrew or the Lord of the Isles.

Or Just David Windsor.

He could even decide on just plain David Windsor.

No longer will he be Prince and Great Steward of Scotland.

In addition, he has been Colonel-in-Chief of two regiments of household cavalry, five regiments of Foot Guards, the Royal Artillery, the Royal Engineers, the Royal Scots Fusiliers, the South Wales Borderers, the Duke of Cornwall Light Infantry and the Prince of Wales Volunteers.

He has been Colonel-in-Chief of the Middlesex regiment of the Seaforth Highlanders, the Royal Wiltshire Yeomary, the West African frontier force, the King's African Rifles, and the Ceylon Defense Corps.

No longer will he be able to call himself Captain-General of the Honorable Artillery Co., Honorary Colonel of several line regiments and officers training corps, nor Honorary Air Commodore-in-Chief of the Auxiliary Air Force.

Nor General of the Japanese Army, nor Admiral of the Danish Navy, both honorary.

Besides his titles, Edward, as King, possessed an enormous ward-

9 MONTHS IN JAIL FOR AUTO KILLING

John E. Ryan, Who Fled From Scene, Also Fined $100 by Jury.

John E. Ryan of 1231 Hamilton avenue, 40-year-old printer employed by the Post-Dispatch, was sentenced to nine months in City Jail and fined $100 yesterday by a jury in Circuit Judge Robert J. Kirkwood's Court, which found him guilty of leaving the scene of injury to a person. Ryan's car fatally injured Manuel Rossman, 4226AW Evans avenue, a 15-year-old newsboy, at Page boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, last April 14, according to the testimony.

Rossman was crossing Page boulevard when struck by an automobile which failed to stop. He died the next day. Ryan was arrested by police a week later, when they found his car being repaired at a garage near his home.

Ryan testified he saw the boy crossing the street and felt a bump, but did not know he had struck anyone. He said he read of the accident and death of Rossman, but was frightened and did not know what to do about it.

The Circuit Attorney's office offered to recommend a sentence of six months in jail if Ryan would agree to plead guilty, but he chose to stand trial. His attorney, Edward E. Butler, former Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, said a motion for a new trial would be filed.

KING EDWARD'S RANCH HANDS RECEIVE NEWS IN SILENCE

Word Reaches Canadian Property 9 Hours After Announcement in British Parliament.

By the Associated Press.

CALGARY, Dec. 11.—Hired hands on King Edward's famed "EP" ranch in the foothills of the Rocky Mountains, 90 miles from here, last night received in silence news of the monarch's abdication.

They did not know what happened until nine hours after the announcement in the British Parliament.

John Graham, youthful Scottish foreman, when told over the telephone what had happened in London said that all hands had worked in the fields from dawn to dusk.

Indians on the Stoney Reserve, near Calgary, also received in silence news of the abdication. To them, King Edward was Chief Morning Star, a title conferred at the reserve in 1923 when, in ceremonial Indian dress of beaded buckskin and feathered headdress, he was honored by the tribal chiefs.

PHILIPPINE FLOOD RELIEF

Health Director Says 80,000 in Cagayan Valley Need Aid.

MANILA, Dec. 11.—Health Director Eugenio Hernando last night reported "hunger everywhere" in the floodswept Cagayan valley. Official advices said 80,000 persons needed relief.

They also showed 13 towns and scores of villages badly affected in Isabela, one of the three provinces through which the destructive waters rushed Friday. While soldiers buried the dead, relief workers began innoculating survivors against typhoid and cholera.

WAY TO PUT OUT PLANE FIRE

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 11.—A "fog" nozzle that smothers flames in clouds of mist was said to be successful today as a weapon against airplane crash fires.

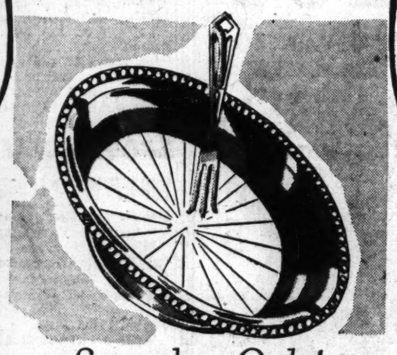

The new type nozzle was tested yesterday at the North Island Naval Air Station on a wrecked tri-motored airplane that had been saturated with gasoline and set afire. Using two of the nozzles, Capt. S. D. Hogan of the Los Angeles Fire Department and a naval officer extinguished the flames in less than a minute. Two bluejackets were able to remove a dummy from the wreckage half a minute after the water was turned on.

TEXT OF BILL ON ABDICATION OF KING EDWARD

Proposal Cites Ruler's Wish and Declares Him No Longer Head of the British Empire.

HIS SUCCESSION PROVIDED FOR

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—The text of the abdication bill in the House of Commons follows:

"A bill to give effect to his Majesty's declaration of abdication and for the purposes connected therewith.

"Whereas His Majesty by his royal message of the tenth day of December in this present year has been pleased to declare that he is irrevocably determined to renounce the throne for himself and his descendants, and has for that purpose executed an instrument of abdication set out in the schedule to this act, and has signified his desire that effect thereto should be given immediately.

"And whereas following upon the communication to his Dominions of His Majesty's said declaration and desire, the Dominion of Canada, pursuant to the provisions of Section 4 of the Statute of Westminster of 1931, has requested and consented to the enactment of this act, and the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa has assented thereto:

Enacting Clause.

"Be it therefore enacted by the King's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and the Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

"1. Immediately upon royal assent being signified to this act, the instrument of abdication executed by his present majesty on the tenth day of December, 1936, set out in the schedule to this act, shall have effect, and thereunder His Majesty shall cease to be King and there shall be a demise of the crown, and accordingly the member of the royal family then next in succession to the throne shall succeed to all rights, privileges and dignities thereunto belonging.

"2. His Majesty and his issue if any and descendants of that issue shall not alter His Majesty's abdication or have any right, title or interest in or to succession to the throne and Section 1 of the Act of Settlement shall be construed accordingly.

Suspends Marriage Law.

"3. The Royal Marriages Act of 1772 shall not apply to His Majesty after his abdication and not to the issue if any of His Majesty or descendants of that issue. (The act of 1772, if applicable, would prevented his marriage without consent of the reigning King.)

"This act may be cited as His Majesty's Declaration of Abdication Act of 1936."

The attached schedule read:

"I, Edward VIII, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Emperor of India, do hereby declare my irrevocable determination to renounce the throne for myself and for my descendants, and my desire that effect should be given to this instrument of abdication immediately.

"In token whereof I have hereunto set my hand this tenth day of December, 1936, in the presence of witnesses whose signatures are subscribed.

"Edward R. I., signed at Fort Belvedere in the presence of Albert, Henry, and George (the King's three brothers)."

PETITIONS SEEK END OF CITY GASOLINE TAX AT MOBERLY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBERLY, Mo., Dec. 11.—Petitions asking repeal of Moberly's one cent per gallon city gasoline tax are being circulated by local gasoline station operators, under sponsorship of the local oil men's association. Each station in the city limits has one of the petitions, and their customers are being urged to sign, with a fairly heavy response.

The petitions are to be submitted to the City Council in the near future, when a plea for removal of the tax, recently refused by the Mayor and Council, will be renewed. The drive to repeal the tax was started by station operators here several months ago, at a dinner given for business men and city officials. The service station operators assert the tax drives many local residents outside of the city to buy gasoline, as well as losing to the city stations the great majority of the tourist business.

City officials, however, assert they are willing to repeal the tax, provided the oil man will suggest some suitable plan to bring the city the more than $10,000 annual revenue represented. The city cannot, however, afford to lose that revenue now, since the city is heavily in debt, it is pointed out.

EFFECTIVE DATE FOR ILLINOIS RAIL RATE ORDER POSTPONED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday postponed for one month the effective date for free pickup and delivery service in the Illinois Freight Association territory on freight hauled by Illinois territory railroads for a minimum of 45 cents per 100 pounds.

The carriers, which have been operating the service since January, 1936, with a 20 cents minimum Dec. 4, aske the commission to reconsider its 45 cents minimum order. They complained that it was too high and placed an unfair burden on Illinois carriers competing with motor truck lines.

The order was scheduled to go into effect Dec. 21. Before the new deadline, Jan. 21, officials here will decide whether to reopen the minimum rate question. The Illinois railroads also are asking that the commission consider whether motor carriers should be subjected to a minimum rate on pickup and delivery service.

THREE SHOE WORKERS' UNIONS PROPOSE TO UNITE UNDER CIO

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—William B. Mahan, general organizer of the United Shoe and Leather Workers, said today his union would join with the Shoe Workers' Protective Union and the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsman of Brockton, Mass., in an effort to organize more than 300,000 workers in the shoe industry under leadership of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Shoe centers this proposed plan would embrace include Belleville, Ill., and St. Louis.

Mahan said the three unions had a total membership of 40,000 workers. Objectives of the amalgamation, he said, are establishment of standard prices, equalization of hours of labor, and an attempt to prevent migration of the industry from one municipality to another. He said the unons would vote on the proposal.

SIX REALTY SALES MADE TO SATISFY BENEFIT BILLS

THIS STEP TAKEN ONLY FEW TIMES

Strenuous Efforts Made to Reach Property Owners and Collect Money Due on Improvement.

Six pieces of real estate in the benefit ditsrict established for the Gravois avenue widening were sold today by the Sheriff at the Civil Courts Building to satisfy judgments on benefit bills held by the Greater St. Louis Corporation. Ten sales had been advertised, but the owners of four pieces of property paid the bills before the sales began.

This was another step in the protracted legal processes involved in the major street widening program under the 1923 bond issue. Comparatively few sales of property have been forced to satisfy the benefit judgments.

Formed by downtown financial interests to provide the city with immediate cash to pay damages for property taken in the widenings, the Greater St. Louis Corporation bought $7,136,504, par value of benefit bills and has collected more than $6,887,335 of them. The city assigned to it thousands of bills against real estate in the benefit districts surrounding the improvements, including all bills in 10 widening undertakings and more than half of the bills in the Market street widening. The corporation discounted the bills, paying the city 95 per cent.

List of Properties and Buyers.

The real estate sold today, all improved property, was:

The excess of the sale prices over the amount of the bills will go to the persons whose property was sold or to the holders of mortgages on the property sold.

Trying to Reach Owners.

Real estate men have been concerned from time to time over the possibility that property owners might not have adequate notice of the bills. However, Miss Grace Rogers, attorney collecting the bills for the corporation, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter today that strenuous efforts were made to communicate with the owners, and that Sheriff's sales were avoided as much as possible. She had no compilation of the forced sales, but said the number was small.

Frequently when execution of benefit judgments has been ordered to satisfy bills the property owners have paid the bills before the Sheriff held sales. For example, the latest group of executions ordered in the Gravois case was about 60, but most of the owners paid the bills through the Sheriff, leaving only six pieces of property to be sold today. Legal fees augment the bills after execution is ordered, the total charges in addition to the principal of the bill sometimes exceeding the principal when the latter is small.

Interest due the corporation, under the law, is 6 per cent annually for the first five years after date of judgment in the widening condemnation suit and 8 per cent a year thereafter.

Other Bills Not Paid.

All bills assigned to the corporation in the Market street widening have been paid, but some bills have not been collected in the other 10 improvements. These undertakings and dates of judgments in them are:

Gravois avenue, Oct. 16, 1930; Kingshighway Northwest, Jan. 15, 1931; Olive street and Enright avenue, June 1, 1931; Sheridan avenue, July 23, 1931; Natural Bridge avenue, Nov. 6, 1931; Vandeventer avenue, Nov. 25, 1931; Kansas street, Feb. 29, 1932; North Grand boulevard, Sept. 12, 1932; Eighteenth street, Oct. 6, 1932.

Publication of notice of the bills in a daily legal journal has been carried out as the only required legal notice, Miss Rogers said. In addition, she said, she sent letters to all property owners whose addresses could be obtained, except for those in the Kansas street case and part of those in the Enright avenue case, for whom letters had not yet been prepared. When letters were unanswered, she said, she or her aids would seek to reach owners by telephone or try to find them by other means, even looking up the water bills and other public records in an effort to find the owners. Execution of judgment was not called for except as a last resort, she said.

The Real Estate Exchange has been notifying its members of the pendency of bills since early this year and the members in turn have warned any clients whose property was involved. While no record was compiled, exchange representatives were of the opinion this action prevented many unexpected forced sales. They have heard of instances where speculators bought property from the Sheriff at sales to satisfy benefits and the former owners or mortgage holders had to pay bonuses to regain title.

Judge Didn't Know of Bill.

In a recent list issued by the exchange a member firm noticed a bill of $299 for the North Grand widening against property at Grand boulevard and Sullivan avenue owned by a corporation headed by Judge William Dee Becker of the St. Louis Court of Appeals. The firm notified Judge Becker of this Wednesday. He had been unaware of the bill. Miss Rogers said that in this instance she had sent a notice in care of the real estate company but that for some reason she could not explain the letter had been returned.

Sheriff's records showed that about 140 pieces of property had been sold to satisfy benefit bills held by the Greater St. Louis Corporation, the principal of these bills averaging about $125. In addition, the Sheriff has collected about $20,000 in gross bills, including interest and fees, where sales have been avoided after execution was ordered. About 12 executions were ordered recently in the Natural Bridge widening, but no sale has been set.

Miss Rogers habitually has made the opening bid at sales, to peg the minimum price at the amount of the gross bill. She said the corporation had acquired title to only 19 pieces of property, costing about $11,500, where there were no other bidders, but that it would sell the realty back to former owners without bonus.

Most benefit bills have been paid at the Comptroller's office, City Hall, where only the full amount is acceptable. Miss Rogers has been willing to accept installment payments but only a few thousand dollars has been received in this way. She has been glad to have mortgage holders notify her of their interest in property subject to benefit bills. Few motions have been filed in Circuit Court to set aside sale orders, there being no basis of fraud shown to substantiate them. The question of whether benefit taxes or special taxes for paving and other improvements had precedence as liens after general taxes has been pending in the Supreme Court of Missouri.

PACIFIC STEVEDORES SEEK TO EXTEND STRIKE

Leader to Make Personal Appeal to Eastern Union for Support.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—Support of Eastern longshoremen will be sought by Pacific Coast stevedores in the strike of maritime workers, now in its forty-third day.

Harry Bridges, coast president of the International Longshoremen's Association, announced today he would appeal personally to longshoremen in New York, where Joseph Ryan, International I. L. A. president, recently declared there would be no sympathy strike by his union. Bridges said he would address a mass meeting in Madison Square Garden Dec. 14.

Pacific Coast I. L. A. locals will vote on a district executive board recommendation to support East Coast longshoremen "when they take action to bring about the granting of demands of the West Coast unions."

"It is anticipated," said a board statement, "that the East Coast men will effectively tie things up in Atlantic ports, thus bringing additional pressure on the shipowners."

Offshore operators awaited moves from unions in considering a new peace offer made yesterday. The offer was understood to provide wage increases and cash for overtime in exchange for "neutral" control of hiring halls. The strikers demand control of the halls from which men are dispatched to jobs.

From Seattle, the steamer Arctic headed north last night to discharge 550 tons of mixed cargo at Alaskan ports, where a shortage of supplies was reported caused by the strike.

J. R. Ummel, Seattle representative of the Alaska Railroad, said the Government-chartered vessel carried considerable perishable cargo.

100 Police Guard Pier When Liner Washington Docks.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—One hundred policemen, including mounted and radio squads, were assigned to keep striking seamen in check last night at the Manhattan pier of the United States liner Washington.

About 300 pickets were massed in the area when the liner arrived from Europe, with Postmaster-General James A. Farley among the passengers.

There was no disorder when the crew of 470 was paid off. Replacements were made at that time and officers said members of the crew were told they could remain aboard to assure their personal safety if they chose until the Washington sails next week.

Leaders of the insurgent strike, called over opposition of regular International Seamen's Union officials, said they had notified President Roosevelt and Secretary of Commerce Roper that the American liners were carrying crews which were not qualified for service at sea.

RAIL RATE ON COAL ATTACKED

I. C. C. Asked Not to Extend Surcharge Past Dec. 31.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Charles F. Hosford Jr., chairman of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, urged the Interstate Commerce Commission today to discontinue emergency surcharge freight rates after Dec. 31. Railroads are urging the commission, on the other hand, to continue the present surcharges during the interval required to consider an adjustment of rate schedules.

"Continuance of the surcharges even temporarily will result in irreparable injury to the bituminous coal industry," Hosford said. "It is my belief that excessive coal freight rates have been one of the major causes of the depression in the bituimnous coal industry."

WPA REPORT ON WORK DONE

26,000 Miles of Road, 1100 Schools Built by Sept. 15.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — The WPA reported today that it had completed 26,000 miles of road construction up to Sept. 15, besides work done in Pennsylvania, a summary of which was not yet available.

The report said the program also includes repair and improvement of more than 120,000 miles of roads and streets, of which 78,575 miles had been completed on Sept. 15. More than 1100 elementary or secondary schools had been built by WPA labor on that date, and work was in progress on 700 more. Repairs and improvements were completed or under way on 11,000 school buildings.

UNION DRIVE AT STEEL MILL

Sound Trucks Used at Homestead Plant of Carnegie-Illinois.

By the Associated Press.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Dec. 11. — Seventy-five union organizers mingled with changing shifts of workers at the Homestead plant of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation today, seeking recruits with pamphlets and loudspeaker appeals. It was pay day at the mill.

The noisy campaign went on under the cold glare of a searchlight at "the hole"—a tunnel-like opening in the high gray walls of the plant. Company guards remained inside while policemen patroled the outside. The organizers had lawyers and bondsmen nearby. Loudspeakers, mounted on an automobile in a vacant lot, entreated in English and Slavic, "Join the union, buddy. Don't be afraid of the bosses. The Labor Act protects you."

PUEBLO, Colo., Dec. 11.—The Colorado Fuel and Iron Corporation announces wage increases averaging 10 per cent for its steel workers and salaried employes. The increases are retroactive to Nov. 16. Officials said about 5000 employes were affected.

W. W. Harvey, district manager, said the company had decided it would no longer contest the city's suit for removal of the lines. The city has installed a municipal plant. Harvey said the district office of the firm probably would be moved to some other city.

$101,000 FOR RELIEF VOTED BY ALDERMEN

An ordinance appropriating $101,000 from the general municipal revenue fund to supplement the public relief appropriation made for December was passed today by the Board of Aldermen.

At the same time Alderman Joseph B. Schweppe, chairman of the board's relief committee, introduced a bill to appropriate $135,000 from general revenue to meet relief needs in the first half of January.

Schweppe told reporters he had not consulted with the St. Louis Relief Administration or with city officials about his bill, but sponsored it of his own initiative.

"Somebody has got to take care of these people and I don't know where else we are going to get the money," Schweppe explained.

The original appropriation for relief in December, $147,000, exhausted the city's relief bond issue fund, totaling $8,200,000. Efforts will be made as soon as the Legislature convenes in January to obtain a state appropriation for relief in St. Louis.

WITNESSES TESTIFY TEACHER THREATENED TO KILL FATHER

By the Associated Press.

WISE, Va., Dec. 11.—Relatives and acquaintances of Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old former school teacher, on trial for killing her father, testified yesterday that threats were made by the daughter against her father, Trigg Maxwell.

Miss Ruth Baker, a cousin, who roomed with Miss Maxwell when the two attended Radford State Teachers' College, said the daughter several times declared: "I'll kill him."

Mrs. Helen Moles, who lived at the Maxwell home for a time, said Edith Maxwell once challenged her father to fight and called him a "coward of a daddy." She also testified that the young woman threatened to "kill him," and that she once related how she had "laid out" her father with a poker.

Maxwell was shot to death in his cottage at Pound, Va., one night in July, 1935. His daughter was convicted and sentenced to 25 years in prison, but the Virginia Supreme Court gave her a new trial.

Toys to Needy Children

EDWARD Mc DONALD

GIVES AWAY TOYS MADE AS HOBBY

More than 600 children, whose parents cannot afford to buy Christmas presents, are going to have a merry Christmas this year because for the last two months Edward McDonald, 5356 Patton avenue, has been constructing toys for free distribution.

It began 10 years ago when McDonald, an interior decorator by trade, prevailed on the Board of Religious Organizations to open a toy shop at Seventeenth street and Washington avenue, for needy children. Each December, he would devote his entire time to distributing toys.

In 1933 he suffered business reverses which forced him to go on the relief rolls. With his first toy shop well established, McDonald, with a knack for making things, decided to manufacture toys for needy youngsters. With the loan of a power-driven squirrel saw, and a limited amount of funds for the purchase of paint, lumber and materials, he started to work.

Last year he gave away presents to 300 children, which total he will double this season. Almost half of these have been made by him. For the girls there will be miniature bedroom sets, including couches, beds complete with mattresses and spreads, chairs, drop-leaf tables, ironing boards and canvass chairs, while the boys will receive wagons, scooters and wheelbarrows.

In addition to these gifts, money provided by friends has made it possible for him to purchase additional articles, including games, dolls, electric trains, sewing sets and a host of others.

To avoid confusion and duplication parents requesting toys must fill out application blanks, stating the number of children and their ages so that they may obtain suitable presents. Distribution commenced today and will last through Dec. 24.

Short, and slight of build, with a kindly smile, McDonald is one of the oldest members of the Third Baptist Church whose Sunday school he attended for 33 years without a single absence.

HUTCHESON RENOMINATED HEAD OF CARPENTERS AND JOINERS

Two Rival Candidates Drop Out; Convention Indorses 5-Day, 30-Hour Week.

LAKELAND, Fla., Dec. 10.—William L. Hutcheson of Indianapolis, won renomination to the presidency of the United Carpenters and Joiners yesterday after names of two rival candidates were withdrawn.

Unanimous nomination by the convention is equivalent to election, but the brotherhood voted on convention-chosen candidates at a referendum in January.

First to drop out was J. M. Williams of Washington, president of of the American Federation of Labor building trades department. A few moments later, the nomination of James M. Gauld of Boston was withdrawn.

A craft unionist, Hutcheson is an opponent of John L. Lewis and the Committee for Industrial Organization. He engaged in a fist fight with Lewis during the 1935 A. F. of L. convention.

The convention today indorsed a proposal for a five-day, 30-hour week.

Text of Baldwin's Statement To Commons on Events Leading Up to the King's Abdication

Prime Minister Tells Parliament Edward Made His Own Decision and That He Acted Only as Friendly Adviser.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 11.—Following formal announcement of King Edward's abdication, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin gave Commons yesterday a detailed account of the conversations between the King and the head of his Government that led to renunciation of the throne.

After Speaker Fitzroy had finished reading the King's message, Prime Minister Baldwin said:

"I have to move that His Majesty's most gracious message be now considered.

"No more grave message has ever been received by Parliament and no more difficult and I might almost say more repugnant task has ever been imposed upon the Prime Minister.

'I will ask the House which I know will not be without sympathy for me now to remember that in this last week I have had little time in which to compose a speech for delivery today.

"And so I must tell what I have to tell, truthfully, sincerely and plainly with no attempt to dress up or to adorn and I shall have little or nothing to say in the way of comment or criticism, of praise or blame.

"I think my best course today and one that the House would desire is to tell them so far as I can what has passed between His Majesty and what has led up to the present situation.

"I would like to say at the start Wales has honored me for many years with a friendship which I value and I know that he would agree with me in saying to you that it was not only a friendship but between man and man a friendship of perfection.

"I would like to tell the House when I begin that when I said 'good-by' on Tuesday night at Fort Belvedere we both knew and felt and said to each other that that friendship, so far from being impaired by discussions this last week, bound us more closely together than it ever has and would last for life.

"Now sir, the House will want to know when it was that I had my first interview with His Majesty.

"I may say that His Majesty has been most generous in allowing me to tell the House the pertinent part of the discussions that took place between us.

"As the House is aware, I had been ordered in August and September to take a complete rest, which, owing to the kindness of my staff and consideration of all my colleagues, I was able to enjoy fully and when October came, although I had been ordered to take a rest that month, I felt I could not in fairness to my work take a further holiday and I came, as it were, on half time before the middle of October.

"I was then for the first time since the beginning of August in a position to look into things.

"There were two things that disquieted me at that moment.

"There was coming into my office a vast volume of correspondence mainly at that time from British subjects and American citizens of British origin in the United States, all expressing perturbation and uneasiness at what was then appearing in the American press.

"I was aware also that there was in the near future a divorce case coming on, the results of which made me realize that possibly a difficult situation might arise later.

"I felt it was essential that someone should see His Majesty and warn him of the difficult situation that might arise later if occasion was given for continuation of this kind of gossip and criticism — what might come if this gossip and criticism spread from the other side of the Atlantic to this country.

"I thought in the circumstances there was only one who could speak to him and talk the matter over with him and that man was the Prime Minister.

"I felt doubly bound to speak, as it was my duty as I conceived it to the country and my duty to him, not only as a counselor, but as a friend.

Didn't Consult Colleagues.

"I consulted—I am ashamed to say it but they have forgiven me—none of my colleagues.

"I happened to be staying in the neighborhood of Fort Belvidere about the middle of October and ascertained that His Majesty was leaving his house on Sunday, Oct. 18, to entertain a small shooting party at Sandringham and that he was leaving Sunday afternoon.

"I telephoned from my friend's house Sunday morning and found he (the King) had left earlier than expected.

"In these circumstances I communicated with him through his secretary and stated I desired to see him.

"It was the first and only occasion on which I was the one who asked for an interview.

"I said I desired to see him and that the matter was urgent.

"I told him what it was and I expressed my willingness to go to Sandringham Tuesday, the twentieth, but I said I thought it would be wiser, if His Majesty thought it fit, to see him at Belvedere because was anxious at that time that none should know of my visit and that the first talk should be in complete privacy.

Talked With King Oct. 20.

"His Majesty replied he would motor back Monday, Oct. 19, to Belvedere and that he would see me Tuesday morning and on Tuesday morning I saw him.

"I may say before I proceed to give any details of the conversation that an adviser of the crown can be of no possible service to his master unless he tells him at all times the truth as he sees it, whether that truth be welcome or not; and let me say here, as I may say several times before I finish that during those talks—when I look back—there is nothing I have not told His Majesty of which I felt he ought to be aware but never has His Majesty shown any signs of offense, of being hurt at anything I have said to him, and the whole of our discussions have been carried through with an increase, if possible, of that mutual respect and regard in which we stood.

What Baldwin Told Edward.

"I told his Majesty I had two great anxieties—the effect of the continuance of criticism of the King that at the time was proceeding in the American press and the effect it would have in the Dominion and particularly Canada, where it was widespread, and the effect it would have in this country. That was first.

"I reminded him of what I have often told him and his brothers in the years passed and that's this:

"The crown in this country through centuries has been deprived of many of its prerogatives, but, today, while that is true, it stands for far more than it ever had done in its history.

"The importance of its integrity is beyond all question far greater than it has ever been, being as it is not only the last link of Empire that is left but a guarantee in this country, so long as it exists in that integrity, against many evils that have afflicted other countries.

Says He Feared for Monarchy.

"There is no man or woman in this country to whatever party they may belong who would not subscribe to that, but while this feeling vastly depends on the respect that has grown up in the last three generations for the monarchy, it might not take so long in the face of the kind of criticism to which it was being exposed to lose that power far more rapidly than it was built up, and once lost I doubt if anything could restore it.

"Now, that was the basis of my talk on that aspect and I expressed my anxiety and then my desire that such criticisms should not have cause to go on.

"I said that in my view no popularity in the long run would be weighed against the effect of such criticism.

"I told His Majesty that I had looked forward to his reign as a great King in a new age. He has so many of the qualities which are necessary to it.

"I told him I had come naturally and wanted to talk it over with him as a friend. Perhaps I am saying what I should not say here—I did not ask His Majesty whether I might say this—but I will say it because I do not think he would mind and I think it illustrates the basis on which our talks have been held.

"He said to me, not once but many times during these many, many hours we have had together, especially toward the end, he said to me: 'You and I must settle this matter together. I will not have anyone interfering.'

Danger in Divorce Action.

"Well, I then pointed out the danger of the divorce proceedings; that, if a verdict was given in that case which left the matter in suspense for some time, that period of suspense must be dangerous because then everyone would be talking, and when once the press begins, as it must begin some time in this country, a most difficult situation would arise for me and for him, and there might well be the danger which both he and I have seen through all this, and one of the reasons why he wanted to take this action quickly was that there should not be sides taken and factions grow up in this country where no faction ever ought to exist.

"It was on that aspect of the question that we talked for an hour and I went away glad that the ice had been broken.

"My conscience at that moment was clear, and for some little time we had no further meetings.

"I begged His Majesty to consider all that I said. I said that I pressed him for no kind of an answer, but would he consider everything that I had said. The next time I saw him was Nov. 16.

After the Divorce.

"That was at Buckingham Palace. By that date the decree nisi was pronounced in the divorce case and I felt it my duty on that occasion—His Majesty had sent for me—I felt it my duty to begin the conversation, and I spoke to him for a quarter of an hour on the question of marriage.

"Again you must remember my Cabinet hadn't been in this at all. I reported to about four of my senior colleagues the conversations at Belvedere.

"I saw him Monday, the 16th, and I began by giving him my view on a possible marriage.

"I told him I did not think that a particular marriage was one that would receive the approbation of the country. That marriage would have involved a lady becoming Queen, and I did tell His Majesty once that I might be a remnant of the old Victorians, but my worst enemy could not say this of me—that I did not know what the reaction of the English people would be to any particular course of action.

"His Will Is Not His Own."

"I told him that so far as they went I was certain that that would be impracticable.

"I cannot go further into the details, but that was the substance, and I pointed out to him that the position of the King's wife was different from the position of the wife of any citizen of the country.

"It was part of the price the King has to pay. His wife becomes the Queen. The Queen becomes the Queen of the country, and therefore in the choice of the Queen the voice of the people must be heard.

"It is the truth expressed in those lines which may come to the minds of the many of you: 'His will is not his own, for he himself is subject to his birth. He may not, as unvalued persons do, carve for himself, for on his choice depends the safety and the health of the whole state.'

"I Am Going to Marry Her."

"And then His Majesty said to me, and I had his permission to tell you this, that he wanted to tell me something that he had long wanted to tell me.

"He said, 'I am going to marry Mrs. Simpson and I am prepared to go.'

"I said, 'Sir, that is most grievous news and it is impossible for me to make any comment on it today.'

"He told the Queen that night. He told the Duke of York and the Duke of Gloucester the next day and the Duke of Kent, who was then out of London, either on Wednesday or Thursday, and for the rest of that week so far as I know he was considering that point.

Compromise Suggested.

"He sent for me again Wednesday, the twenty-fifth of November.

"Meantime, the suggestion had been made to me that a possible compromise might be arranged to avoid those two possibilities that had been seen, first in the distance and then approaching nearer and nearer. The compromise was that the King should marry and that Parliament should pass an act enabling the lady to be the King's wife without the position of Queen.

"I saw His Majesty on Wednesday, Nov. 25. He asked me if that proposition had been put to me and I said 'Yes,' and he asked me what I thought of it.

"I told him that I had given it no considered opinion but if he asked me my first reaction it was that Parliament would never pass it. I said that if he desired I would examine it formally. He said he did so desire.

Consulting the Dominions.

"Then I said, 'It will mean my putting it formally before the whole Cabinet and communicating with all the Prime Ministers of the Dominions, and asked if that was his wish. He told me that it was and I said I would do it.

"On Dec. 2 he asked me to see him, and again I had intended asking for an audience later that week because some inquiries I had thought proper to make had not been completed. But they had gone far enough to show that neither in the Dominions nor here would there be any prospect of such legislation being accepted.

"His Majesty asked me if I could answer his question. I gave him the reply that I was afraid it was impracticable for those reasons, and I do want the House to realize this.

"His Majesty said he was not surprised at that answer. He took my answer without question and he never referred to it again.

"I want you to put yourselves in His Majesty's place and realize what his feelings are and to know how glad he would have been had this been possible.

"There was no formal decision of any kind until I come to the history of yesterday but when we finished that conversation I pointed out that possible alternatives had been nulled and it had really brought him into a position when he would be placed in a grievous situation between two conflicting causes in his own heart, either complete abandonment of the project on which his heart was set and remaining as the King, or doing as he intimated to me he was prepared to do in the talk which I have reported, and of going, and later contracting that marriage if possible.

"In the last days from that date until now that has been the struggle in which his Majesty has been engaged.

"We had many talks discussing the aspect of this limited problem. The House must realize—and it is difficult to realize—that His Majesty is not a boy.

"He looks so young that we all thought of him as our Prince but he is a mature man with a wide and great experience of life and the world.

"He always had before him three motives which he repeated in the course of conversation at all hours and again and again: that if he went he would go with dignity; that he would not allow a situation to arise in which he could not do that, and that he wanted to go with as little disturbance to his ministers as possible.

Text of Baldwin's Speech On Abdication of King

ters and his people as possible.

"He wished to go in such circumstances that the succession of his brother would be made with as little difficulty as possible and I may say that any idea to him of what might be called a King's party was abhorrent.

"He stayed down at Belvedere because he said he was not coming to London while these things were in dispute because of the cheering crowds. I honor and respect him for the manner in which he behaved at that time.

The King's Note.

"I have something which I think will touch the House. I have here a penciled note sent to me by His Majesty this morning and I have his authority for reading it. It is just simply in pencil and it says:

"'The Duke of York and the King have always been on the best terms as brothers and the King is confident that the Duke will deserve and receive the support of the whole empire.'

"Now, sir, I would say a word or two on the King's position. The King cannot speak for himself. The King has told us that he cannot carry and does not see his way to carry those almost intolerable burdens of kingship without a woman at his side, and we know that this crisis, if I may use the word, has risen now rather than later from that very frankness of His Majesty's character which is one of his many attractions.

"It would have been perfectly possible for His Majesty not to tell me this at the date when he did, and not to have told me for some months to come, but he realized the damage that might be done in the interval by gossip and rumors and talk and he made that declaration to me when he did on purpose to avoid what he felt might be dangerous, not only here but throughout the Empire, to that very moral force of the Crown which we are all determined to sustain.

"He told me his intention and he has never wavered from it. I want the House to understand that. He felt it was his duty to take into anxious consideration all representations that his advisers might give him and not until he had fully considered them did he make public his decision.

"No Sign of Conflict."

"There has been no sign of conflict in this matter. My efforts during these last days have been directed, as have the efforts of those most closely around him, in trying to help him make the choice which he has not made, and we have failed, and the King has made his decision to take this moment to send his gracious message because of his confident hope that by that he will preserve the unity of this country and the whole empire and avoid those factious differences that might so easily have arisen.

"These last days have been days of great strain. It was a great comfort to me and I hope it will be to the House, when I was assured, before I left him Tuesday night, by that intimate circle that was with him at the Fort that evening, that I had left nothing undone that I could have done to move him from the decision at which he had arrived.

"Not a Soul Wants to Judge."

"While there is not a soul among us who will not regret this from the bottom of his heart, there is not a soul here today that wants to judge.

"We are not the judges. His Majesty has announced his decision.

"He has told us what he wants us to do and I think we must close our ranks.

"At a later stage this evening I shall ask leave to bring in the necessary bill, so it may be ready for the first time, printed, and made available to the members.

"The House will meet tomorrow at the usual time, 11 o'clock, when we shall take the second reading and the remaining stages of the bill. It is very important it should be passed into law tomorrow and I shall put on the order paper tomorrow a motion to take the private members' time and suspend the 4 o'clock rule.

Message From the Cabinet.

"Now I have only two other things to say. The House will forgive me for saying now what I should have said a few minutes ago. I have told the House that yesterday morning when the Cabinet received the King's final definite announcement, officially they passed a minute, and in accordance with it, I sent a message to His Majesty which he has been good enough to allow me to read.

(Baldwin then read the message sent to the King from the Cabinet and the King's reply, both of which had already been read in the House of Lords.)

"My last words on that subject are that I am convinced that where I failed no one could have succeeded. Those who know His Majesty best would know what that means.

"This house today is a theater that is being watched by the whole world and let us conduct ourselves with that dignity that His Majesty himself has shown in this hour of his trial. And, whatever be our regret at the contents of the message, let us fulfill his wishes to do what he asks and do it with speed and let no word be spoken today that the speaker or utterer of that word may regret in days to come.

"Rally Behind New King."

"Let no word be spoken that causes pain to any soul and let us not forget today the revered, beloved figure, Queen Mary. Think what all this time has meant to her and think of her when we have to speak, as speak we must during this debate.

"We have after all, as guardians of democracy in this little island, to see that we do our work to maintain the integrity of monarchy, that monarchy, which, as I said in the beginning of my speech, is now the sole link of the whole empire and guardian of our freedom. Let us look forward and remember our country and the trust reposed by our country in this, the House of Commons, and let us rally behind the new King. Let us rally behind him and help him.

"Whatever the country may have suffered by what we are passing through may soon be repaired and we may take a hand again in trying to make this country a better country for all the people in it."

Hotel Bellboy Admitted Shooting and Beating 18-Year-Old Guest to Death.

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 11.—Martin Moore, 22-year-old Negro, was executed in North Carolina's gas chamber today for the hotel room murder of Helen Clevenger, New York University student, in Asheville last July.

The former hotel bellboy had confessed shooting and beating his 18-year-old victim to death. Moore was pronounced dead at 10:46 a. m., 12½ minutes after he entered the death chamber. At the last moment, Warden H. H. Honeycutt said, Moore repudiated the confession.

ANTI-SMOKE BILL REQUIRES WASHING LOW GRADE COAL

HE ASSERTS COST WOULD BE LITTLE

Treatment Would Be Applied to All Shipments Containing 12 Pct. Ash or 2 Pct. Sulphur.

A proposed ordinance for abatement of smoke, which requires that bituminous coal of a certain grade be washed before being sold in St. Louis, was introduced into the Board of Alderman today by President William L. Mason. A letter requesting passage of the ordinance, and explaining its provisions for control of the fuel supply, was sent to the Aldermen by Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann.

The fuel control section of the proposed ordinance, which represents a new step in the anti-smoke campaign, is:

Section 18—Importation, Sale, Use or Consumption of Certain Coals Permitted, When.

It shall be unlawful to import, sell, use or consume, in the City of St. Louis, any coal which contains in excess of 12 per cent of ash or 2 per cent of sulphur at the time such coal is mined, unless such coal, before importation or sale in the City of St. Louis, has been treated by a process known as washing. The percentages shall be taken upon analysis of the coal on a dry basis.

How Coal Is Washed.

The washing, otherwise termed processing, of coal, is done with water or air, to remove the dust and slack which contain a large part of the smoke-creating sulphur and ash. It is expected that this processing would be done at the mines, where mechanical equipment for the purpose would be installed.

City Counselor Edgar H. Wayman, who participated in preparation of the measure, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter he believed the control section to be constitutional under the general police power, for the preservation of public health. "The courts have held," he said, "that municipalities have the right to make laws for protection of community health, even when interstate commerce may be affected thereby. In this case, we would not be requiring the mine owners to do anything before sending their coal here; we would simply be fixing a qualification for the coal to be sold in the city, and the condition could be met most easily by treatment at the mines."

The Mayor, discussing this section of the measure in his letter to the Aldermen, expressed his belief that its enactment and enforcement would not add greatly to the cost of coal to consumers, including homeowners.

Mayor Dickmann's Views.

"St. Louis," the Mayor wrote, "has purified the water its citizens drink. It must do the same with the air they breathe, insofar as it is humanly possible to do so. We have been able to purify the water because all the water consumed by St. Louisans is not only controlled, but distributed by the city.

"St. Louis cannot distribute the fuel that is consumed here, and we can never make any definite strides toward purification of the air unless we can exercise some measure of control over the fuel supply.

"This is an absolute necessity. It is a necessity which has given rise to two problems that I confess have caused me considerable worry and concern. One was to avoid inflicting undue hardship upon the poor people of our city, who cannot afford a high grade of fuel. The other was to avoid economic loss through excluding from the St. Louis market the principal product of a territory (Southern Illinois) which annually contributes millions of dollars to our trade and commerce.

"With these problems in mind, we have included in the ordinance a section which requires the processing of fuel coming into St. Louis, if it contains certain ingredients in excess of specifications.

"This does not prevent the shipment of any fuel to the city, but it does require that before it is permitted to be sold here, it be improved by a process which adds but an insignificant amount of its cost to the consumer.

Licensing May Be Necessary.

"In order more effectively to control the fuel supply in St. Louis, it may possibly be necessary to later submit to you an ordinance licensing coal dealers, to the end that we may correct abuses in the coal business through which the unfortunate poor of our city are the worst sufferers.

"I do not need to point out to you in detail," the Mayor said, "with what a vicious evil we are called upon to deal. You are already as familiar as I am with the great loss suffered by our citizens in property, money and health by the ravages of smoke. You have observed, as I have, the damage and destruction it has wrought in a city on which in the last decade approximately $100,000,000 has been and is being spent in an effort to make it one of the most beautiful cities in America."

The Mayor's letter told how the people of St. Louis have "patiently endured the smoke pall which hangs over our city every fall and winter." He mentioned private efforts to further remedial measures, and the enactment of an ordinance providing for a survey by an expert.

Osborn Monnett of Chicago was recommended for the work by the United States Bureau of Mines, with which he was formerly associated as consulting engineer. Monnett's report, with the draft of an ordinance submitted by him, was sent to the Aldermen with the proposed ordinance, the two being largely the same.

The proposed ordinance submitted to the Aldermen was prepared by the Mayor's secretary, Raymond R. Tucker, formerly associate professor of Mechanical Engineering at Washington University; Frank J. McDevitt, Director of Streets and Sewers, and the City Counselor's office, in conjunction with Expert Monnett. Section 18, for fuel control, was not in Monnett's original draft. Other sections were added, one providing an approriation of $6247 for the remainder of the present fiscal year, ending next April; another was an emergency clause, making the ordinance effective immediately on receiving the Mayor's signature.

The proposed ordinance would create in the Department of Public Safety a division of smoke regulation, headed by a commissioner of smoke regulation, to be appointed by the Director of Public Safety. His salary would be $6000 a year, and he would appoint a deputy commissioner at $4000, eight inspectors, two stenographer-clerks and one clerk. The inspectors, at $1800 a year, and the clerical force, would be subject to examination by the Efficiency Board.

An appeal board of five members, appointed by the Mayor and serving for four-year terms without compensation, also would be provided. Two would be persons experienced in the fuel business, and three would be experienced in the design or operation of fuel or material burning installations.

Decisions of the appeal board, on complaints against requirements imposed by the commissioner, would be made to the Circuit Court, under provisions contained in the ordinance.

In construction of new fuel-burning plants, and reconstruction of existing plants, the proposed ordinance would require the filing of plans and specifications with the Commissioner, and issuance of a permit by him. A permit would also be required for installation and repairs of furnaces and chimneys. Detailed requirements for such installations and repairs are made in the ordinance draft.

Before issuance by the Building Commissioner of a permit for construction of any building, the ordinance would require that the chimney plans be approved by the Smoke Commissioner.

Fees for permits, examinations and inspections would be $1 to $3, and would be remitted in the case of charitable, educational and religious institutions, on affidavit.

Proposed Law On Smoke.

Section 14 of the proposed ordinance, as to "Emission of Dense Smoke," provides that "the emission of dense smoke within the city from the smokestack of any steamboat, steam tug, steam roller, steam derrick, steam pile driver, tar kettle or other similar machine or contrivance, or from any open fire, or from the smokestack or chimney of any building or premises, except for a period of, or periods aggregating, six minutes in any one hour at a time when the firebox is being cleaned out or a new fire being built therein, or from the stack of any locomotive for a period in excess of one continuous minute, is prohibited and is hereby declared

Suit Against W. H. Thompson.
By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 11.—Trial on its merits was ordered by the Illinois Supreme Court yesterday in Attorney-General Otto B. Kerner's suit to recover $72,794 from William Hale Thompson, former Mayor of Chicago. The funds were collected in 1927 by the Waterway and Flood Control Association of the Mississippi Valley, which Thompson headed.

to be a nuisance, and may be summarily abated by the Commissioner of Smoke Regulation or by anyone whom he may duly authorize for such purpose. Such abatement may be in addition to the fine hereinafter provided."

The fine for violation is fixed at $10 to $100 for each offense, each day of such violation to constitute a separate offense, with the Ringelmann Smoke Chart, published and used by the Federal Bureau of Mines, as the standard of comparison.

Another section, carrying the same provisions for fines, covers "Dust, Fly Ash, Soot, Noxious Gases." Discharges of this character from any smoke stack or chimney, for more than six minutes in any one-hour period, or from locomotives or steamboats for more than one minute in an hour, are prohibited.

It is provided that, in any prosecution, it shall be a good defense to show that there is no known practicable device, appliance, means or method by which the condition could be remedied; with the provision that the Smoke Commissioner and inspectors shall be permitted to inspect the premises and collect evidence. The Commissioner would have power to seal boilers or other heating apparatus after 10 days' notice in writing to persons notified of violation, except in the case of locomotives, steamboats and other movable mechanism. The breaking of a seal without authorization of the Commissioner would be punishable by a fine of $25 to $100.

The proposed ordinance includes a section to the effect that, if any part of it shall be declared to be invalid, the remaining provisions shall not be affected.

Monnett, in his report, stated that four classes of smoke were to be considered — industrial, railroad, large heating plants and small heating plants. "There is nothing inherently difficult" in burning bituminous coal smokelessly in industrial plants, he said, and declared the problem to be one of modernization of equipment, and careful supervision.

Locomotives already have smoke-prevention devices, Monnett said, but "the human element comes in, and regular supervision is necessary;" also, roundhouses should be equipped with the latest methods for firing up locomotives with oil.

Under the head of large heating plants, he included office buildings, lofts, warehouses, hotels and apartments from six families up. Four solutions are available, he said—mechanical stokers, oil burners, coke and gas. "In the great majority of cases," he said, "the choice, for economic reasons, will be the mechanical stoker."

Small heating plants, including homes, flat buildings, small stores and garages, were declared "the most serious and difficult to control." Some owners will voluntarily modernize their heating plants, he said, but "there will still be a large number remaining, which will consume 1,000,000 tons of coal per annum." This, he stated, is one-seventh of the normal fuel consumption of the metropolitan district of St. Louis.

"Smoke from domestic equipment" he said, "is the most objectionable type, being accompanied by large particles of soot, heavily charged with sulphur gases. The soot acts as a carrier for these gases, setting up damaging corrosive action wherever deposited or when breather into the nose, irritating the mucous membrane and constituting a distinct health hazard, as has been pointed out by many authorities.

"These small heating plants are distributed over all parts of the city and the positive statement can be made that unless some solution is found for this class of smoker, St. Louis will never be free from the smoke nuisance.

"Marked reduction in smoke can be accomplished by using the latest methods of firing soft coal, but the immense number of people involved, together with the constantly changing personnel, makes the task of education a hopeless one. It has in fact been tried on an extensive scale without permanent results.

"The solution to this part of the problem must be a cheap smokeless fuel which can be fired by anyone without previous experience in any kind of stove or furnace; easily ignited, responsive to draft regulation and that will hold a banked fire, such as is demanded by household use.

"Considerable time has been spent investigating the possibility of providing such a fuel for the St. Louis market. Emphasis is placed on the fact that it must be low in price. Users of fuel in the domestic class are accustomed to a cheap low grade raw coal, and a cheap substitute, from which the smoke has been removed, must be provided to take its place.

"Such a fuel would not be intended to displace or compete with the high-grade byproduct, coke, now used in the city. This coke is made from expensive, low-ash Eastern coals, but unfortunately its burning characteristics are not such as to make it very suitable for stoves and miscellaneous small domestic equipment. Neither can it be supplied at a price that would make its use possible for the poor of the city.

"Sufficient knowledge of the processing of Illinois coals is now at hand to be able to state that a cheap smokeless domestic fuel can be made from Belleville screenings, which will have the necessary burning characteristics for use in small household heaters. The art is in its infancy. All possible encouragement should be given to the development of this new branch of the fuel industry.

"The city, by regulations and increased pressure on small heating plants, can eventually develop a stable market for at least a million tons of processed fuel. This market can only be gradually built up as the supply of such fuel increases.

"The demand for a cheap smokeless fuel in St. Louis already far exceeds the supply and with prospect of a continued stable increase in the demand, the wide-awake business man, in co-operation with fuel chemists and engineers, can be relied upon to supply it.

Screenings and "Bug Dust."

"Processed fuel would be manufactured from the smaller sizes of screenings and 'bug dust' which is now largely a waste product of the mines. Recovery of the by-products from the smoky part of the fuel would help substantially towards paying for the process and thus act to keep the retail price down to consumer. Moreover the tonnage involved would be actually increased, as it would take two tons of the raw coal to make one ton of finished product.

"In normal times the fuel consumption of the metropolitan district of St. Louis amounts in round numbers to 7,000,000 tons. Processed fuel for St. Louis would make a change in only about 14 per cent of the total tonnage, and that in the smaller sizes and waste product not now being sold to advantage.

"The only other change in the fuel situation involved in this plan is the gradual increase in prepared stoker sizes of coal to large heating plants, in place of the sizes now being supplied.

"The smoke nuisance begins to manifest itself early in the fall when heating plants are started up, thus proving that heating plants constitute the backbone of the problem. In the past it has not been possible to enforce the smoke ordinance against the small domestic heating plant, because there has been no feasible economic solution to offer for such plants.

"Any new plan for attacking the problem should provide for a long period of uninterrupted effort, during which the modernization of existing large heating plants should receive first consideration, gradually transferring the activity to small and smaller plants as the supply of smokeless domestic fuel increases."

Monnett then made his recommendations for passage of a new ordinance, specifying provisions contained in the measure now proposed, and concluding:

"Encourage by all possible means the development of a supply of processed smokeless fuel for small heating plants, gradually increasing presusre on such plants as a supply becomes available at minimum prices, until finally all small plants can be held responsible for violations under the ordinance, the same as larger plants."

19 HELD FOR TRIAL IN BLACK LEGION PLOT

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Dec. 11. — Common Pleas Judge Ned H. Smith today ordered 19 men held for trial on a criminal syndicalism indictment charging that they helped organize the Black Legion and plotted to overthrow the Federal Government.

Viggo C. Rasmussen, a Highland Park policeman indicted with the others, was released on motion of Chester P. O'Hara, Assistant Attorney-General.

O'Hara reported that police had ben unable to arrest two others indicted, Virgil (Bert) Effinger, Lima, O., named by investigators as national commander of the hooded society; and Isaac (Peg-Leg) White, a former Detroit police officer.

Those held for trial were accused by Circuit Judge James E. Chenot in a one-man grand jury report last Aug. 21 with having conspired to overthrow the Government in an uprising of armed Black Legion members instructed to seize Federal buildings and arsenals.

Among them are: Arthur F. Lupp Sr., named by investigators as Michigan commander of the Black Legion; N. Ray Markland, former Mayor of suburban Highland Park; Wilbur Rbinson, reputed "Brigadier-General" of the Black Legion; Harvey Davis, already under life sentences in thee murders of Charles A. Poole and Silas Coleman; Albert M. Bacon, former turnkey at the Wayne County (Detroit) jail, and Leslie J. Black, former Common Pleas Court clerk.

Judge Smith ordered yesterday that four alleged Black Legion members be held for trial on charges of plotting to kill Martin H. Zink, a City Commissioner of Highland Park.

Those to be tried are N. Ray Markland, former Mayor of the suburb; Arthur F. Lupp Sr., reputed commander of the Black Legion in Michigan, and Charles Baker and Frank Howard.

The court also ordered four other men held for trial on charges of assault on George Washer of Highland Park. They are Roy Hepner, Rudyard K. Wellman, Whitney Fleming and Clarence Prince.

In another reputed Black Legion case, at Pontiac, a Municipal Judge bound Walter A. Pierce over for trial on a charge of participating in the burning of a workers' camp building in 1933. Pierce, who had been a sergeant, was dismissed from the Pontiac Police Department last week.

Man Killed in Night Club Fight.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 11.—Vallie Keesecer, Peoria, was shot and fatally wounded today in an argument over a woman in a night club. Robert Clark, suffering from two minor bullet wounds inflicted by Keesecked, was held under police guard in a hospital, accused of the killing.

PART THREE. ST. LOUIS, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1936. PAGES 1—6C

RIVER BOND ELECTION INQUIRY AGAIN SOUGHT

P. O. Peters Asks Memorial Chairman to Join Demand for Grand Jury Investigation.

The Citizens' Nonpartisan Committee, opposing the proposed Jefferson Memorial on the river front, yesterday renewed its request to the sponsoring organization, Jefferson National Expansion Memorial Association, for a statement of attitude toward the project in view of evidence of fraud in the city's bond issue election.

In a letter directed to Luther Ely Smith, chairman of the association, and to the members, the committee asked if the "public minded citizens" backing the memorial would join in demanding a grand jury investigation of voting frauds in the special election of Sept. 10, 1935, at which on the face of the returns the voters approved a bond issue of $7,500,000. The letter was signed by Paul O. Peters, executive director of the committee, who gave copies to the press.

The letter repeated arguments that the present plan for a "national park" on the river front to be established under a Congressional act for the preservation of historic sites was not the plan for which the people voted. Sections of Federal statutes were cited, one to support the view that a new national park could be established only by act of Congress and not by executive order of the President, as proposed in the river front case, and the other to show that express authority of Congress would be required for the erection in a national park of any buildings costing more than $1500.

The memorial plan is at a standstill, as a temporary injunction granted by the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia restrains Government officials from proceeding with it, pending a hearing. The city has sold $2,250,000 of bonds and sent the money to Washington to be used by Government officials, with $6,750,000 of Federal funds, for the first stage of the proposed memorial.

COUNTY COURT TO REQUEST RULING ON FEEDING PRISONERS

Maximum 30 Cents a Day Each Under One State Law, 75 Cents Under Another.

The County Court of St. Louis County will ask the Attorney-General for an opinion as to which of two statutes, fixing the maximum which may be allowed the Sheriff for the feeding of county jail prisoners, is applicable in St. Louis County. One provides a maximum of 75 cents, the other 30 cents.

The point was raised by County Auditor Edwin O. Harper following an agreement made Wednesday by the Court and Sheriff-elect Otto Frank to allow 40 cents a day for each prisoner. The statute under which allowances previously have been made provides for a 75-cent maximum. Until last February, when the allowance to Sheriff Philip G. Deuser was reduced to 45 cents, the maximum had been paid.

Harper, who had told the Court that 40 cents a day was reasonable when Frank asked for his opinion, later found the other statute fixing the maximum at 30 cents a day.

HELD AS SALES TAX VIOLATORS

Two Coal Dealers Accused of Failing to File Returns.

Two coal dealers were arrested yesterday on warrants charging failure to make State sales-tax returns for five months.

They are Lawrence Foster, 818 South Seventh street, and Roscoe Hart, head of the B-S Coal Co., 6200 South Broadway. Each furnished $2500 bond, returnable Dec. 23. The arrests were made by police at the request of Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Herman Willer, who issued he warrants. Hart declined to comment. Foster could not be reached.

JANITRESS ADMITS THEFT OF $200 FROM LETTERS

Woman, 64, Says She Has Been Taking Money From Mail for Two Years.

Mrs. Elizabeth Nagle, janitress employed by the Postoffice Department for 26 years, was charged in a Federal warrant yesterday with stealing $8 from a letter she took from a drop chute in the Wellston Branch, where she was employed. Arrested at her home, 6337 Isabella avenue, Wellston, she admitted having taken about $200 from letters in the last two years, postal inspectors said. Mrs. Nagle is 64 years old.

An investigation was begun several months ago after recipients of letters, particularly mail order firms, complained letters had been opened, money extracted and the letters resealed. The inquiry narrowed to Mrs. Nagle and the inspectors placed a letter containing bills in the chute at a time when Mrs. Nagle would be on duty.

The letter failed to reach its destination and Inspector E. J. Kupferer visited her home yesterday and found the bills, serial numbers of which had been noted before they were mailed. Mrs. Nagle, in admitting the thefts, said she did not need the money but "just got into a bad habit," Kupferer said. Her salary as a classified civil service employe was $75 a month.

SPRINGFIELD, O., SCHOOL FUNDS

Special Tax Levy for Two Years Approved by Voters.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Dec. 11.—Schools in this city of 70,000 were assured of funds for at least two years by approval of a 3-mill special tax levy by the voters, 10,905 to 6728, yesterday.

The levy, designed to raise $240,000 annually for the two years, was similar to a three-year assessment which was defeated two to one at the Nov. 3 election. As a result of the defeat, the city's 12,300 pupils and 381 teachers were sent home Nov. 6, the Board of Education declaring no more funds were available and it already owed $66,000 in October salaries. After being closed two weeks, the schools reopened when teachers agreed to work four weeks without salaries pending resubmission of the levy.

Swenson and Hansen Score for St. Louis Team in 2nd Period

Nelson, Goalie for League Leaders, Is Credited With 54 Stops—Murray, Kansas City Star, Out of Game With Foot Injury—Mound City Six Still Undefeated.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 11.—The St. Louis Flyers gained their twelfth straight American Hockey Association game here last night, defeating the Kansas City Greyhounds, 2 to 1. The Flyer victory was assured in the second period when Hansen scored the second goal on a pass from Palangio. The Kansas City goal was marked up after both St. Louis markers.

Kansas City, trying for its fourth consecutive win, pushed St. Louis from the start, when Rockburn, Greyhound defense man, floored "Stopper" Nelson, Flyer goalie, and muffed a free puck. Swenson fell on a close check, toppling the cage on Cox, Kansas City goalie.

Oscar Hansen, who set an all-time record for the league, scoring 60 points last year with St. Paul, took a pass from Palangio, lanky Flyer forward, for a score from the blue line, one minute after the initial St. Louis score, to make it 2 to 0 for the Flyers.

Murray Out of Game.

Minus the services of their goalie, Mickey Murray, Kansas City played a rushing offense to save Cox, who substituted for Murray, when the squad physician forced him off the ice due to a broken toe and badly swollen ankle, suffered in scrimmage several days ago.

The Greyhounds switched forward walls time after time, but jinxed with "bad breaks," every combination failed to click. Late in the second period Metcalfe swerved through the Flyer defense—took a bullet pass from Taylor—and flipped in the only Greyhound score.

The champion Flyers, who haven't been beaten this season in 14 games played, opened the third period with a "waiting" defense, forcing Kansas City to make aggressive stabs at the goal. Tony Anderson, speedy Greyhound wingman, missed a dead "setup" on a short pass from Coach Mackenzie, after Metcalfe had forced Nelson away from the cage. Three minutes later "Rusty" Hughes of Kansas City crashed into St. Louis' center, Pete Mitchell, against the boards, for what appeared to be a scuffle, but Referee Fred Gordon separated them before blows were exchanged.

Mitchell Goes to "Cooler."

Pete Mitchell went to the "cooler" for tripping after "Nick" Wasnie, Greyhound winger, carried the puck through the Flyer defense to the crease, pulled Nelson to one side, only to shoot around the cage.

With Mitchell in the penalty box and five minutes to go, the crowd of approximately 3500 fans, rocked the Arena with roars as Kansas City placed four forwards on in a last minute attempt to tie the score.

Paddon, Greyhound winger, carried the disc to the Flyer goal—sticks cracked the ice, players spilled amid flying skates in a mad scramble—but no one had the puck. Far down center ice Palangio sped, carrying the rubber. Metcalfe flew after him, crossing in front of the Italian with a flying check, as he bulleted the puck toward Kansas City's goal. But Goalie Cox made a "sit down" save, by sprawling in front of the cage.

ST. PAUL, Dec. 11.—Displaying a sparkling offense, St. Paul shut out the Tulsa Oilers, 3-0, last night and threw the American Hockey Association scramble for second place honors into a three-way tie.

The Minneapolis Millers, Tulsa and the Saints share the berth behind the leading St. Louis Flyers as a result of the victory.

HOLLAND CAPTAIN OF KANSAS STATE ELEVEN

By the Associated Press.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Dec. 11.—Rolla Holland, Iola, Kan., twice chosen an All-Big Six Conference guard, was elected honorary captain of the Kansas State College 1936 football team at the annual banquet here last night.

Marchmont Schwartz, head football coach at Creighton University and a former star backfield man at Notre Dame University, was the principal speaker. Governor-elect Walter A. Huxman, who was the scheduled guest of honor, was unable to attend.

Coach Ward Haylett and his Big Six champion two-mile squad were introduced to the 300 persons present.

Increase in Player Limit Is Voted Down By Hockey Officials

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 11.

WILLIAM F. GRANT, president of the American Hockey association, said yesterday the proposal to increase the team player limit from 12 to 13 has been rejected by a majority vote of the board of governors.

The action means that until Jan. 1, 1937, the clubs may carry as many players as they wish but may have only 12 in uniform for any one game. After Jan. 1 the number of players under contract is limited to 12, including goalie. Clubs in first, second and third places are allowed until Feb. 1 to replace players on the 12-limit squad, and clubs in the second division are given until Feb. 15.

Clubs may sign players after the Feb. 1 and Feb. 15 dead lines to bring the player limit to 12 but may not use such men during the remaining scheduled or playoff games, unless through injury the club loses the services of the replaced player.

COACH HELLMICH UNDECIDED ON STARTERS FOR BEARS' GAME

The Washington-Missouri basketball game tomorrow night at Columbia will be no easy contest for the Bears, it appeared today, when it was indicated the starting lineup for the St. Louis team would be full of sophomores and the Tigers would open with a veteran five.

Huddy Hellmich, Washington coach, had his share of grief yesterday when it was learned that one of his lettermen, Dick Douglas, who is either forward or guard, would probably not be able to play because of an injured ankle.

That gave Huddy food for thought.

"Well, boys," he said, "it looks like maybe we'll have to start a team of four sophomores." Which sounded like suicide when word came from Columbia that Coach George Edwards planned to put Carmin Henderson, Clarence Hatfield, Ralph Beer and Johnny Carroll in the opening Tiger lineup.

Along with the sophomores Hellmich may start either Dwight Hafeli or Capt. Tommy Ozment, veterans. The first year varsity men are Bob Gerst, Claude Beeler, Charles Gilles and Adolph Uhlemeyer, who have been clicking as a combination.

But Huddy thought again.

"Maybe I'd better play safe and put in the veteran crew of Hafeli, Sauer, Ozment and Norm Tomlinson."

Today, the Washington coach had not made up his mind which was the best combination to use. But one thing is sure, he will attempt to put in as many players as possible to find out what he has in the way of a team.

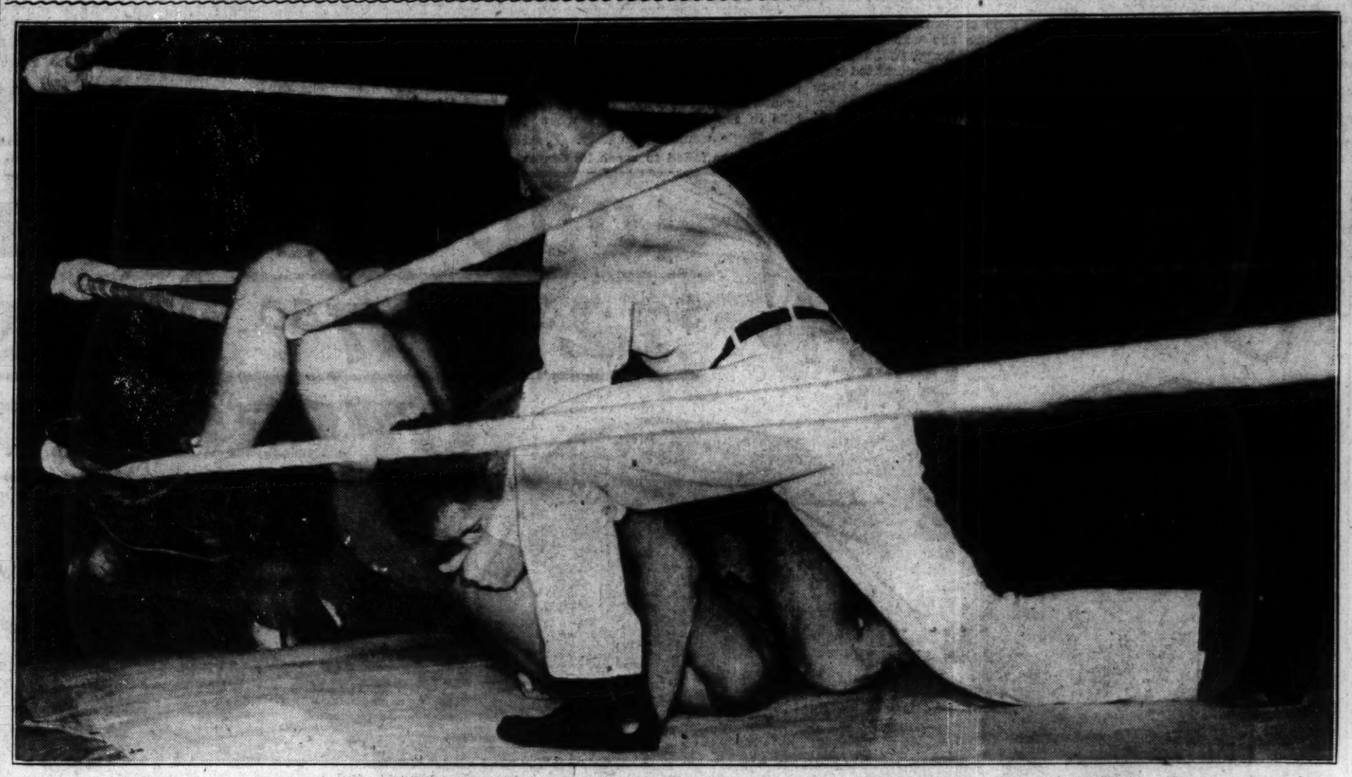

SIMMERMAN, SOCCER STAR, QUITS CLUB IN SALARY DISPUTE

In preparing for Sunday's game with the Club Lotus eleven, John Marre and his Town Crier soccer team must dig up a center forward to take the place of Jack Simmerman, who has turned in his uniform. Last Sunday, in trying to fill the gap left by the departure of the star center man, John Walsh, acting manager of the Town Criers, took hold of the job and came through with two goals, a fair afternoon's work. But Walsh is admittedly not a finished center forward and he will be keeping a sharp eye for another pivot man. Simmerman, thought by many soccer fans to be the best center forward in the city, quit the club two weeks ago in a dispute over salary.

Either the Optimist club or the Burkes could make good use of Simmerman and it is expected that a deal may be made with the Town Criers for his transfer.

Sunday's schedule at West Side Park brings together the Burkes and Harts in one game and the Town Criers and Club Lotus in the other.

Fourteen profesisonal boxing shows here this year have drawn a total of 88,790 persons and $84,796.77 in gate receipts, or an average of about 6300 persons and $6000 receipts per performance.

That is quite a record for boxing which only a few years ago was virtually dead here, attracting very small houses at the few shows held.

John Henry Lewis, light heavyweight champion of the world, was by far the best gate attraction as in four bouts, 38,925 persons paid $38,304.70 to see him win from Al Stillman, Eddie Simms, Tony Shucco and George Nichols.

The biggest crowd numbered 10,480 persons for the Lewis-Simms match but the largest gate was $10,296.95 for the Nichols-Lewis contest.

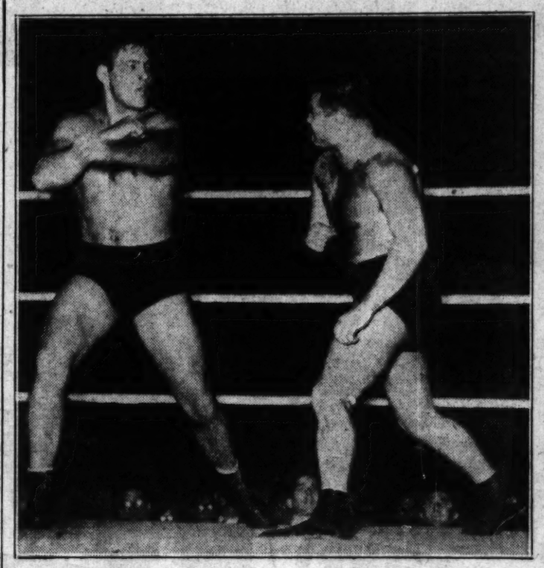

All of major bouts were held in the Auditorium with three minor cards in the Coliseum one of which attracted 2000 persons, one 2591 and the third 2135.

Uncle Sam benefited to the extent of $8442.85 as that was the amount paid for the Federal amusement tax while the State of Missouri received, $3471.85 and the City of St. Louis a like amount.

It is not likely that any more shows will be held here before Jan. 15 when the next date of the Jackson Johnson Post of the American Legion is set.

A resume of the season's cards:

WRAY'S COLUMN

His Dream a Nightmare.

THAT $100,000 dream of the schoolboy wonder-pitcher Bob Feller has turned into a nightmare. Hoping, and rather confidently expecting that he would be declared a free agent, in which case he would sell himself for one hundred grand, the 18-year-old Iowa high schoolboy now finds himself still a mere baseball chattel and not a penny richer than before.

A "HIGH COMMISSIONER" COMES HIGH.

As a free agent, he would have been privileged to dispose of his services to whomsoever would pay his price. Two clubs had intimated $100,000 was not too much. When Commissioner Landis yesterday awarded Feller to Cleveland, that dream of $100,000 faded out.

All Bob got was a lot of headlines—plus the contract that will no doubt be given him for next season. His record-breaking strikeout arm will do chores once more for Cleveland.

• • •

Will He "Burn Out"?

FELLER'S case is not too grievous, however. The young man was paid $7500 last season, report had it—which is pretty good wages for a high-school lad. Next season he will get a fine salary, no doubt; and if his high performance in several big-league games last season is a real measure of his power, he will soon be in the big money.

Indications point to a great career for this young fellow. He has plenty of power now, although he is still three years short of his majority. As a mature pitcher with major-league experience, it is reasonable to expect him to become the sensation of the baseball world.

And yet clubs that would have paid $100,000 for him on a chance probably are breathing easier. There is no guarantee that this young man will come through, despite his strikeout record. Starting so young, he could easily share the fate of so many phenomenons who have climbed dizzy heights while in their 'teens, only to "burn out" shortly after attaining maturity.

• • •

Youngest Big Leaguer?

THERE have been other "Schoolboy" wonders in major-league pitching history, but apparently Feller holds the low-age mark of all the successful ones. He established a major-league strikeout record at the age of 17.

"Schoolboy" Waite Hoyt and "Schoolboy" Rowe blossomed out for the New York Giants and the Detroit Tigers, respectively, at rather tender ages. Hoyt joined the Giants at the age of 19 and Rowe came up to the Tigers just as he attained his majority.

Had the Giants paid $100,000 for

High Schools to Open Second Half Season Next Week

At a coaches' meeting held last night at McBride under the direction of Brother Vincent Brand, the second round schedule of the High School Soccer League was drawn up. As in the first half, it will be a round robin with each team playing the other five contenders once.

Chaminade will compete in this half, it was announced by Brother Vincent. The Red Devils will entertain South Side Tuesday in their first game. Central Catholic of East St. Louis will go to McBride and Normandy will play St. John's at Carondelet Park in the other games. Following the practice instituted in the first round, all games will start at 3:30.

Normandy's Vikings assured themselves of fourth place in the first half by defeating Central Catholic 3—0 yesterday on the East Side team's field. Their record shows three losses and one victory, while Central Catholics has four defeats and no wins.

The first half schedule will be completed today when McBride plays St. John's at Carondelet.

Dec. 15—Central Catholic at McBride; South Side Catholic at Chaminade; Normandy at St. Johns.

Dec. 17—McBride at Chaminade.

Dec. 18—St. Johns at Central; Normandy at South Side Catholic.

Dec. 22—St. Johns at McBride; Central Catholic at South Side Catholic; Chaminade at Normandy (postponed).

Jan. 8—Chaminade at Central Catholic; South Side Catholic at St. Johns; Normandy at McBride.

Jan. 12—McBride at South Side Catholic; St. Johns at Chaminade; Central Catholic at Normandy.

Jan. 15—Chaminade at Normandy.

MARAS TO CAPTAIN DUQUESNE'S ELEVEN

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 11.—Duquesne University's Dukes, winners over the powerful football teams of Pitt and Marquette this season, selected Joseph Thomas Maras of Hibbing, Minn., yesterday, for their 1937 captain.

Maras, junior left tackle this year, is the second lineman to captain the team. He succeeds Mike Basrak of Bellaire, O., who received All-America mention this year for his work at center.

Potts to Fight Bloomington Star On Benefit Card

Forest Potts, flyweight boxer, who represented the Ozark A. A. U. in the national championships last spring, will take on Nick Vesselock, amateur boxing champion from Bloomington, Ill., in one of the boxing contests which will be part of Mayor Bernard Dickmann's benefit program at the Municipal Auditorium next Tuesday night.

The match was signed this morning by Frank Sullivan and Ed Burke of the matchmaking committee. Proceeds of the carnival will go to take care of the Mayor's Christmas dinner for the underprivileged and needy of the city.

In all, there are to be 11 boxing bouts, five wrestling events, a fireman's wrestling tournament, singing and entertainment.

The Potts-Vesselock bout is the sixth signed by Sullivan and Burke. Each of the half-dozen bouts sends an outstanding St. Louis scrapper against an Illinois champion.

One of the wrestling matches I send George Zaharias against Tommy O'Toole. The wrestling tournament for firemen has drawn Defending Champion Otto Brexler, Matthew Matesick, Ed Pistorius, Charles Thotus and Tommy Godfrey.

CLAYTON FIVE TO PLAY ALUMNI TEAM TONIGHT

Clayton High School's basketball team will meet a five composed of Clayton alumni at the Clayton gymnasium tonight at 8 o'clock. There will be a preliminary game between the B and C teams.

Among the alumni who are expected to play are Soell, Massey, Litzinger, from last year's team, who was high point scorer last season, and Nickel.

FANS PROTEST MAT DECISION AT COLISEUM

By Robert Morrison.

A fellow named Khayyam and the rasslin' referee, Joe Sanderson, in a way see eye to eye on the general philosophical theme of futility, best expressed by "It doesn't really matter, does it?"

Today is today and why think about tomorrow, Khayyam once implied. A fall is a fall and why worry about outworn technicalities, Sanderson echoes.

A tepee maker of parts, Khayyam was called Omar because that was his name. What some persons in the crowd at the Coliseum last night called Joe Sanderson was not by any stretch of imagination Joe's name.

Music to Joe's Ear.

Strong words, weak words, silly words came tumbling down on Joe as he left the ring after the main bout between Tommy O'Toole and Eddie Newman. But after all, they were merely words, hot air escaping from a vacuum.

And all because Joe had counted Tommy out when Newman pinned his shoulders to the canvas. His feet twisted in the ropes, Tommy was technically still outside the ring where Newman had butted him, so some spectators believed.

"Bah and a couple of poohpoohs," exploded Sanderson in the dressing room later, extreme distaste written on his face. "This modern wrestling. Ugh! It doesn't make any difference if his feet were in the ropes. He could have easily removed them. His shoulders were touching and that's all that counts in this modern game."

The story of the match is the same old tune, perhaps a slightly different arrangement. Newman punched O'Toole. O'Toole punched Newman. Each weakened and recovered. Referee Sanderson hit Newman on the jaw after the New York Hebrew had slugged O'Toole on the back of the neck. Newman worked on Tommy's leg. Etc. And then the moving finger wrote finis, time 28:22, nor all the spectators' antagonism nor wit could cancel it.

Tuffy Cleet a Winner.

A ding-dong daddy from Detroit, Tuffy Cleet, profited by another funny finish in the semifinal match. Tuffy, who wears a "gee whiz" expression half the time, has shown considerable pantomimic ability in his two appearances here.

His victim last night was George Sauer. Backed against the ropes, Tuffy was ordered to break by Referee Fred Voepel. They broke. Tuffy shoved Voepel, who fell against Sauer. And when Voepel got out of the way Tuffy jumped on Sauer for the fall.

The attendance was announced as 1335 and the receipts $644.40.

COLISEUM RESULTS

Iowa Beats Carleton.

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Dec. 11.—With Sophomore Ben Stephens leading the way, Iowa drubbed Carleton College here last night, 52 to 26, before a crowd of 4000. It was the Hawkeyes' second straight win of the 1936-37 season. Stephens connected for three baskets and eight free throws to lead all scorers.

67 AMATEUR WRESTLERS IN NORTH SIDE "Y" MEET TONIGHT

With 17 boys ready for the opening contests, North Side Y. M. C. A. tops the entry list of 67 for the invitational amateur wrestling tournament starting tonight and ending tomorrow night at the North Side gymnasium.

Beilenson faces a big threat in the heavyweight division in Bert Kleeman of the Alton "Y," who gained a decision over Beilenson in the Ozark A. A. U. tournament last spring.

The Downtown "Y" has entered nine wrestlers led by Joe Cairns, captain of the squad. John McCoy, Downtown's present 126-pound champion, is expecting trouble from Reavis Montray of North Side.

Granite City is also entering a team of nine and is pinning hopes on John Harsh, Ozark A. A. U. 165-pound belt holder, and John LaFleur, present 145-pound champion.

TWO YALE PLAYERS NAMED ON COLLIER'S ALL-AMERICA TEAM

By the Associated Press.

Center, Alex Wojciechowicz, Fordham.

Quarterback, Sam Baugh, Texas Christian.

Fullback, Sam Francis, Nebraska.

In awarding gold footballs to these players, Collier's singled out Frank, Tinsley and Francis as the three outstanding players of the year. Tinsley was the only repeater.

Tracing the movement of "football supremacy" through various parts of the country, the magazine noted that "the tides of 1936 brought it back to the East, as shown by a margin of more than two to one in over 70 intersectional games."

CARNEGIE TACKLE TO PLAY IN EAST-WEST CHARITY GRID GAME

By the Associated Press.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Dec. 11.—Andy Kerr of Colgate, co-coach of the All-East football team, yesterday completed assembling players from the Eastern and Southern sectors by announcing that the eleventh athlete to accept an invitation is Nestor Henrion, 200-pound Carnegie Tech tackle.

Kerr quotes Coach Jock Sutherland as saying Henrion was the best tackle who played against Pittsburgh during the football season. Rangy and fast, he wrecked plays run toward his side of the line.

The 10 other players selected by Kerr for the game against the All-Western eleven in San Francisco on New Year's day, are: Kelley of Yale, Handrahan and Ray of Dartmouth, Parker of Duke, Murray and Kurlish of Penn, Sanbach and Ritter of Princeton, Relyea of Colgate, and Pierce of Fordham.

These players and Kerr will join the Midwest delegation assembled by Dick Hanley, the other co-coach, in Chicago at a date to be set, work out at Northwestern University and then entrain for the Coast.

FELLER CASE DECISION REGARDED AS RETREAT BY LANDIS

Made a Case Against Cleveland, but Ruled As Owners Dictated

Baseball Commissioner in Lengthy Statement Points Out That "Baltimore Amendment" Is a Mandate Upon His Office—Rickey, Homeward Bound, Still Hopes to Trade Dean.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Commissioner Landis' kow-towing decision in the famous Bob Feller case, accepted tacitly but happily by the club owners as a victory for the major leagues, and the Cardinals' feverish but thus far futile efforts to dispose of Jerome Herman Dean, the game's most colorful player, stand out today as the high lights of the annual baseball meeting.

According to the Feller decision, regarded by disinterested observers as the first ever handed down by the Commissioner in which he "ran with the mob and mob sentiment," the major leagues are now free to compete in the open market for the services of free agents, regardless of age or previous non-service, by the simple expedient of recommending the player to a friendly minor league club and then transferring him to the covetous major league club's roster.

Landis' decision certainly was an unusual one. He stated in one breath that the Cleveland club plainly had violated the rights of minor league clubs when C. C. Slapnicka of the Cleveland Indians signed young Feller to a Fargo-Moorhead contract, and in the next breath the Judge said the Cleveland club nevertheless would be permitted to keep Feller, the fruits of the chicanery, merely by paying $7500 damages, a pittance compared to Feller's present value in the open market, to the Des Moines club of the Western League.

No Kick From the Owners.

"The decision speaks for itself," was all that President Will Hardridge of the American League cared to say and the club owners in both leagues were equally reticent. In off-the-record comment, however, they made it plain that they were delighted with the decision, which they considered a victory over the Commissioner and his big stick.

Looking at the case in another way, there was equity on the side of the Indians, of course. It seemed unfair to take from the club a pitcher of Feller's apparent ability, after the Indians had gone to the trouble and expense of obtaining title, even though the title was challenged, to the young man's services. Undoubtedly another influence that had its effect was the fact that a parade of young players, seeking to be declared free agents, would have been started toward the commissioner's office by a decision declaring Feller free to sell his services to the highest bidder. According to baseball men, there are scores of cases closely paralleling that of Feller and while the decision might seem to be a coat of whitewash, slightly thinned by the $7500 penalty, it nevertheless was the course of fewest headaches.

Everybody Is Satisfied.

The commissioner indicated that he was influenced, too, by the attitude of Feller and the boy's father, who, so Landis said, urged that he be permitted to remain with the Cleveland club, which had given him a chance to become the league's strikeout king at such a comparatively tender age.

However, the commissioner no longer can be called the all-powerful czar of baseball. He now merely is an officer who administers the rules of baseball as the club owners dictate.

The statement pointed out all the corner-cutting and violation of rules, but it cited the recently-adopted Baltimore amendment concerning scouts and their recommendations, as binding him not to invalidate the Cleveland-Feller contract. The Baltimore amendment, adopted by the minors at Montreal recently and by the majors during their sessions here, provided that the commissioner was not to construe the rules as prohibiting the recommendation of players by any major league club or any employe or officer of that club, to any other major or minor league club.

The suggestion had been made by a prominent baseball man that Feller would have a splendid civil case against baseball if the Commissioner ruled that he was not free to sell his valuable services to the highest bidder, merely because of an illegal contract signed by a minor, but the Commissioner's statement that Feller and his father wanted the Cleveland contract upheld would seem to eliminate the possibility of any litigation.

The statement, a voluminous thing, covering three typewritten pages, single-spaced, reviewed the case and major-minor legislation involved and pointed out that Cleveland could have avoided all controversy over Feller's services if it had merely acquired ownership of the Fargo-Moorhead club before signing the boy to a contract.

What Rickey Has Demanded.

Branch Rickey departed last evening for Portsmouth, O., without disposing of Jerome Herman Dean's services, and Bill Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said there was a wide margin between what Rickey wanted for the facile-lipped pitcher and what the Pirates were willing to give. Benswanger and Rickey both declined to name the players involved or the details of the difference, but it was generally known that Rickey had asked for Pitcher Cy Blanton, Outfielder Paul Waner, Catcher Padden, First Baseman Browne, Infielder Richmond and three or four other lesser members of the Pirate squad.

Pie Traynor said he would like to have Dizzy, and joined with Benswanger in saying that the deal was not definitely off, but that no deal would be made unless Rickey backed down materially in his demands.

Charley Grimm of the Cubs said he did not have enough players to give Rickey what he wanted, and the Giants indicated they were not interested by turning to efforts to obtain Van Lingle Mungo from the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Rickey undoubtedly will continue his efforts to dispose of Dean, it being understood that Sam Breadon wants to get rid of him, but if the next few weeks fail to bring results in that direction, an announcement can be expected that Dizzy is off the market. However, that announcement will not be made until all possible chances for an advantageous trade have been eliminated.

The Feller decision overshadowed all other action taken at the joint meeting. It was agreed that doubleheaders would be permitted on and after the fourth home Sunday in any city. The two league presidents were authorized to confer with the baseball manufacturers to take some of the jack rabbit out of the ball, but as orders already had been placed for the 1937 season and manufacture had started, there will be no change in the ball until 1938. Samples will be submitted from time to time for use in practice next season.

Griffith Is Voted Down.

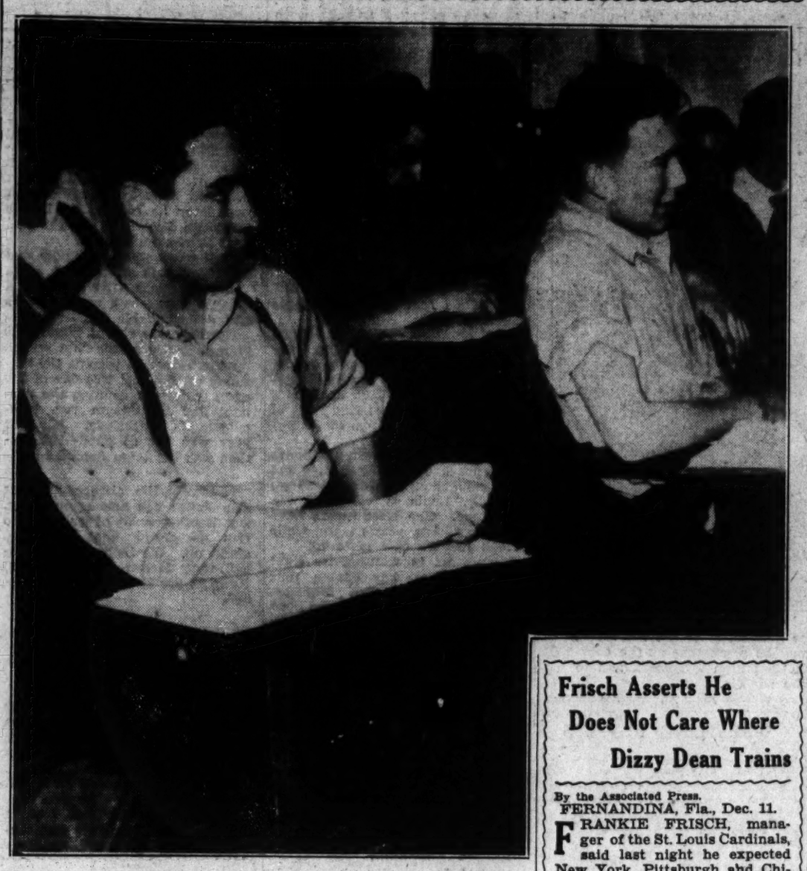

A local option decision was reached on the question of cheaper grandstand and bleacher admissions for children. Each city will be permitted to handle the situation to suit itself.

Otherwise the joint meeting was devoid of interest for the fans, much of the time being devoted to changes of phraseology in the major-minor agreement.

Clark Griffith of Washington had asked the leagues to prohibit doubleheaders on Sunday except on the last trip of the season, but the proposition was voted down.

Rogers Hornsby and Bill DeWitt went through the meeting without making any trade for the Browns, but DeWitt arranged working agreements with several minor league clubs, as the opening wedge in his farm system program.

"Schoolboy" Feller

Bob Feller (left foreground), sensational Cleveland pitcher, in class room at Van Meter (Ia.) High School just after hearing the decision of Commissioner Landis that he was the property of the Cleveland Indians. The decision was telephoned to his home. Had he been declared a free agent, Feller could have disposed of his services for approximately $100,000.

Decision Cost Feller $100,000; He Will Ask For $20,000 Salary

By the Associated Press.

VAN METER, Ia., Dec. 11.—Bob Feller, $100,000 loser by Commissioner K. M. Landis' decision making him the property of the Cleveland baseball club, took the setback in stride today and kept on with his high school studies.

"Judge Landis' decision," he said, "is fine by me. I'm glad it's all settled and I'm glad to be with Cleveland."

Bob isn't worrying about his salary but he will ask $20,000 for the 1937 season. "Dad and I talked it over and that figure looked about right," he explained.

"I want to be fair about it and I don't intend to hold out for a bonus for signing," he continued, "but judging by what the other pitchers are getting I think I ought to be worth that."

Bob's father, W. H. Feller, agreed. "That figure is Bob's idea and I think he is about right," he said. "The average salary for good pitchers seems to be around $15,000 a year and Bob is a pretty good drawing card. I don't think he will have any trouble getting $20,000."

The $100,000 "loss" was the amount two major league clubs agreed to pay for Bob's contract if he was made a free agent.

"I wish I could start spring training right now," declared the farm boy who set a new American Leaguestrikeout record for one game last season. "I'm in good shape from playing basketball, and I played catch every day before it got cold. All I want to do is pitch for the Indians. It looks as though they would have a good club, don't you think so?"

Feller said he was entirely satisfied with the ruling by Judge Landis but could not understand why the commissioner awarded Lee Keyser, president of the Des Moines Western League club, $7500. "I never would have signed a contract with Des Moines. I never worked out with the Demons and I don't see why they are entitled to the money any more than another major league team," he said.

Bob does not have a contract with the Indians but expects to reach an agreement before contracts are due back at the club's headquarters Feb. 15.

Frisch Asserts He Does Not Care Where Dizzy Dean Trains

By the Associated Press.

FERNANDINA, Fla., Dec. 11.

FRANKIE FRISCH, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, said last night he expected New York, Pittsburgh and Chicago "to give us a little trouble" in the National League pennant race next year.

Asked about Dizzy Dean, St. Louis ace pitcher, Frisch said he didn't care "whether Dizzy trains in Bradenton or Daytona Beach, just so he continues to pitch real baseball."

Dean has declared he would not go to Daytona Beach for the spring workouts, preferring to remain at Bradenton, where the Cardinals went for seven seasons.

What the Trade Winds Brought to Major Clubs

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Bob Feller was safely in the Cleveland wigwam, the rabbit ball was set for another riding spree over distant fences and the incomparable Dizzy Dean still received orders from Branch Rickey today.

As major league club owners and managers, worn to a frazzle after 10 days of bartering, headed for home, all was peaceful and serene in the baseball world.

Since the big player mart opened in Montreal last week, this is what each major league club did to repair its baseball fences.

SIMMS READY FOR BOUT WITH BROWN BOMBER

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 11. — Eddie Simms, broad-shouldered Cleveland Slovenian, tapered off training today for his "opportunity bout" with Joe Louis, Detroit's Brown Bomber, next Monday on the Cleveland News' Christmas Fund boxing show.

The 26-year-old slugger, whose lethal right hand carried him high in the heavyweight division, was named Louis' opponent when Johnny (Rubberman) Risko, originally chosen, fractured a rib in a workout.

The bout is scheduled for 10 rounds. Arthur Donovan of New York will referee.

"Simms has a kayo wallop," observed Risko. "He's young and big. If he will crowd Louis, he has a good chance."

To Cleveland enthusiasm for Simms, John Roxborough, co-manager of Louis, replied:

"If Simms beats Louis, he'll beat the best Joe Louis that ever lived. Joe never offers alibis. He says his punch will do his talking. His ambition is to prove Schmeling's kayo was a fluke. Louis is ready to fight a den of tigers."

Simms will enter the ring under the management of Jimmy Dunn, who piloted the veteran Johnny Kilbane to the world's featherweight crown.

"Physically Simms is perfect. He knows it's his big chance. We might turn the boxing world topsy-turvy Monday," said Dunn, terming his protege "a longshot with a terrific punch and plenty of heart."

Louis is expected to scale about 202 pounds and Simms 199.

WARRENSBURG BEATS KIRKSVILLE TEACHERS

By the Associated Press.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., Dec. 11.—The Warrensburg Mules easily defeated the Kirksville Teachers in a one-sided basketball game, 53 to 12, here last night.

The Mules' first team scored at will in the early part of the first half. Coach Reid then used all the players on his squad, which kept Kirksville bewildered. The score at the half was Warrensburg 31, Kirksville 6.

KANSAS COACH INJURED IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT

CLAY CENTER, Kan., Dec. 11.—Ad Lindsey, head football coach at the University of Kansas, suffered an injury to one hand when his motor car overturned seven miles west of here late yesterday.

Lindsey was returning to Lawrence, Kan., from St. Francis, Kan., where he had spoken at a football banquet. His motor car struck gravel on the highway and overturned in a ditch.

HOPPE TRIUMPHS OVER LAYTON IN THREE-CUSHION TITLE TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Kinrey Matsuyama of Japan, who isn't as tall as some of the cues used by players he has defeated, goes after his first world's three-cushion billiards championship tonight.

The squat, round-faced Oriental, who wears high-heeled shoes when he plays to boost his height to five feet, opposes Welker Cochran of San Francisco, and if Matsuyama wins he will take the angle crown back to the land he last saw 16 years ago.

If Cochran wins, however, a three-way tie for the title will result and necessitate a playoff, all because of the wizardry of Willie Hoppe of New York, graying, one-time "boy wonder." Hoppe, with no chance to retain his title, dealt a severe blow to Johnny Layton's title chances last night, defeating the Sedalia, Mo., expert, 50 to 33, in 47 innings.

If Cochran defeats Layton today and then beats Matsuyama there will be a tie, at six wins and three losses each, between Matsuyama, Cochran and Tiff Denton of Kansas City. If Layton wins and Cochran beats Matsuyama the tie will involve Layton, Matsuyama and Denton.

The Layton-Hoppe duel was one of the tourney's hardest fought games. Safety play was fairly even, although Layton lost two points when he made incomplete safeties, failing to drive a ball to the rail. Hoppe, who had the balls rolling most of the game, ran five to take the lead in the fourth frame and was never headed, going out with a run of six.

The standings:

	W.	L.	Pts.	Inns.	H.R.	B.G.
Matsuyama	6	2	369	347	12	38
Denton	6	3	410	535	8	54
Layton	5	3	338	375	11	28
Cochran	4	3	320	348	10	35
Bozeman	5	4	431	445	9	37
Hoppe	5	4	399	423	10	37
Reisels	4	5	365	457	8	44
Hall	3	6	388	444	7	37
Thurnblad	3	6	324	443	7	45
Lookabaugh	2	7	339	441	6	41

Breadon Still Considers Building His Own Park

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.

SAM BREADON told New York baseball writers that he was considering building a baseball park for the Cardinals on a plot of ground near Grand boulevard and Chouteau avenue, but that it was only a possibility. He explained that he had three more years to think about it and a fourth in which to build, before his lease on Sportsman's Park expired.

SEMPLE REACHES QUARTERFINALS OF SQUASH RACQUETS

In the championship quarterfinals of the University Club squash racquets tournament today was Bob Semple, who used to play tennis at Principia. He won his second-round match from Louis Dennig, 15-11, 15-12, 15-10.

Accompanying Semple into the quarterfinals was Presley Edwards who won by default from Harry Langenberg. In Class B, Arthur Dunn gained the round of eight by defeating C. B. Calfee, 15-12, 15-12, 18-17.

Terrier Pros Will Disband

The professional football Terriers under the promotion of James "Bud" Yates have decided to call it a season, except for a possible out-of-town game, but they will organize again next year, Yates announced.

The promoter is attempting to arrange a game with the Brooklyn Dodgers at Wichita, Kan., for this Sunday. It will be the Terriers' last in 1936.

Admitting he lost some money this season, which opened in mid-November, Yates said he would get the team organized earlier next season.

The estimated attendance at Walsh Stadium averaged 1400 for three games in which the St. Louis team defeated Peoria, 7-0, and lost to the Iowa All-Stars and the Rock Island Independents.

SCHMELING READY TO MEET CHAMPION BRADDOCK ANY TIME

GERMAN HEAVY DOES NOT CARE IN WHICH CITY FIGHT IS HELD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Max Schmeling, the German heavyweight, sought a showdown today before the New York State Athletic Commission on a title fight with James J. Braddock.

Mein Herr Max was prepared going to tell the fistic fathers he was ready to sign to meet Braddock any time the promoters can arrange the fight. Max didn't care whether it is staged here, in Miami or in Atlantic City.

Also, der Moxie was set to tell one and all he is prepared to squawk both in German and English if Braddock fails to go through with his promise to give Joe Louis' conqueror first shot at the heavyweight crown.

"And when I say first shot, that's just what I mean," said Max. "They're not fooling me with that talk about a no-decision fight. Braddock's title will be at stake the minute he steps into the ring with Louis whether the bout is for four, six or 12 rounds.

"The heavyweight title is too important to be made a joke of like that."

Just a year ago Schmeling came to New York and the commission told him he would have to knock off Joe Louis before meeting Braddock. Schmeling agreed and came through with a 12-round knockout of Louis last June.

"I won the right to fight Braddock and I won it the hard way," said the German. "They are not going to give me what you Americans call 'the run around.'"

At today's meeting with Schmeling were expected Braddock and representatives of the joint promoters, Madison Square Garden and the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

The hitch in signing is expected to develop when Schmeling insists on a clause forbidding Braddock from fighting in the meantime; and when the commission asks Schmeling to put up $25,000 as a guarantee he will come back here within a year to defend the title, if he wins it.

Max weighed 195, three pounds over fighting weight. He was met at quarantine by a large delegation of newspaper men, photographers and promoters, the latter including James J. Johnston of Madison Square Garden and Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

His visit to the boxing solons over, Max intends to take in a few movies, arrange plans for an exhibition tour in the spring and return to Germany on the Bremen, sailing Tuesday.

The Smile That May Come Off

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

Max Schmeling (right) greeting his American manager, Joe Jacobs, after his arrival in the United States from Europe yesterday. The broad smiles may be premature as the commission today expects to take action on Schmeling's match with Champion Braddock and to demand a $25,000 bond that Max defend his title in America if he wins it.

Sparta, Shamrocks' Rival In Game Sunday, Beaten Once In 17 Contests This Year

By Dent McSkimming

Although the Sparta club of Chicago has over a period of years proved one of St. Louis' most formidable rivals for Western soccer supremacy, the team has played only two games here in the past three seasons. When the Bohemian club trots onto Public Schools Field Sunday against the Shamrocks, it will be making its first St. Louis appearance since Dec. 1 of last year. And in the season of 1934-35 Sparta played only one game in St. Louis, an exhibition match under the floodlights.

In the team which appears here Sunday are several players who figured prominently in the lineup of the Wieboldts of the 1934-35 season when five games were required to settle the Western cup final, won by the Centrals (now Shamrocks). Among them were Tom Scott, John Tomich and Jimmy Munro. They had among their teammates Bill Watson and Werner Nilsen, now with the Shamrocks, forming with other stars one of the best balanced teams Chicago has had in many years. After the failure of the Wieboldts to wrest the Western title from St. Louis, the club broke up.

Lost by 3 to 2 Score.

In their only appearance here last season, Sparta played fine football but lost to the Shamrocks by a score of 3 to 2. At half time the Chicagoans (largely the same lineup they will show here Sunday) were leading, 2 to 0. And 15 minutes of the second half were gone before the Shamrocks scored their first goal, a smashing, long shot by Center Halfback Bill Watson. Within a few minutes Patenaude had tied the score and then Roe put St. Louis ahead with a nice drive from the penalty line. But it took everything the Shamrocks had in them to gain that one-goal lead and then protect it against Sparta's rally. On the strength of that game it looked as though Sparta would go on to the Western final but Heidelberg of Pittsburgh surprised the forecasters by beating the Bohemians in a Western semifinal, played at Chicago.

Sparta Team Undefeated.

As compared with the lineup of a year ago, the Shamrocks today look to be a smoother team. Sparta, too, is reported somewhat stronger but it will have to be to outscore the Irish. In midfield play, especially in co-operation between halfbacks and forwards, the Shamrocks are 25 per cent a better club than they were a year ago. Sam Dueker was in goal in that game of last December; Lehman and Hebberger were the fullbacks; Kane, Watson and Nilsen were the halfbacks; Pastor, Gonsalves, Patenaude, Roe and McLean the forwards.

Sparta has won 15 of its 17 games this season and has tied one and lost one. Thus, two undefeated clubs will be facing each other in the exhibition match here, Sunday.

Glenn Morris to Compete for New York A. C.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Glenn Morris, the automobile salesman from Fort Collins, Colo., who won the Olympic decathlon title, has joined the New York Athletic Club and will wear the Winged Foot emblem in competition this winter, Paul Pilgrim, club athletic manager, said today.

Since there is no decathlon competition in the indoor meets, Morris will concentrate on the sprints and hurdle races.

NOTRE DAME BASKET PLAYER OUT FOR YEAR WITH FRACTURED JAW

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 11.—A broken jaw will keep Johnny Moir, forward and leading scorer, off the Notre Dame basketball team for the remainder of the year, Coach George Keogan said yesterday.

Moir was injured in the St. Mary's College game at Winona, Minn., Tuesday night, but the break was not discovered until he was examined here by the university's physician.

Keogan described Moir's loss as a severe blow to the squad, already weakened by the absence of Capt. Ray Meyer, called to his home in Chicago because of illness in his family, and the slow recovery of Paul Nowak, star center, from a major operation performed in September. Nowak will be unfit for full time duty until mid-January, Keogan said.

SHAW-STEPHENS TO PLAY AT LOUISVILLE

Ten players, instead of the usual eight, are likely to make the trip to Louisville, Ky., Sunday for the Shaw Stephens American Legion girls' intercity game with the Kentucky Dairies squad, Capt. Mary Dueker announced.

The Shaws, together with a new Muny League team that is being organized, will work out tonight at the Maplewood Senior High gymnasium at 9 o'clock. At that time, players wishing to try out with either squad, may report for practice.

HANS WAGNER AGAIN NAMED COMMISSIONER OF SEMI-PRO LEAGUE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Re-election of Honus Wagner, the old-time Pittsburgh shortstop and one of baseball's most famous players, as commissioner of semi-pro baseball by the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress was announced today.

Wagner's duties, which he assumed a year ago, include ruling on all protests from district and State tournaments under the sanction of the congress, and supervising the National finals. Last season he attended 20 State tournaments.

This year it was expected 48 State tournaments will be sanctioned and he is slated to visit them all.

The State champions will be eligible for the national tournament at Wichita, Kan., Aug. 13-25.

In 1936, 32 teams competed in the national finals, which attracted 110,000 fans and were won by the Duncan (Ok.) Cementers.

Southern Illinois Wins.

By the Associated Press.

CARBONDALE, Ill., Dec. 11.—Southern Illinois Teachers chalked up their second victory of the season yesterday when they trampled the Arkansas Aggies of Jonesboro, 59-35. Southern led, 35 to 18, at the half. Norris of the Aggies was high scorer with 21 points, while Lucas led the Southern attack with 12. Teacher substitutes played the entire second half.

McBride Seeks Third Victory in Beaumont Game

Coach Toddy Kamp's McBride High School basketball team will play its fourth game of the season today with the veteran Beaumont team of the City League supplying the opposition for the prep leaguers at the McBride gymnasium.

This will be one of six games scheduled. In others Normandy plays St. Louis U. High in another inter-league clash on the county court; Clayton meets its alumni team; Kirkwood opens its season against Blewett at the Y. M. H. A. this afternoon; Ritenous and Country Day play at Codasco at 3:30 p. m., and Soldan is out for its second straight victory in a game with Madison.

Beaumont is like the old woman in the shoe. It has so many lettermen it doesn't know what to do. All of them can't play at the same time because there are seven. The starting lineup will include Moerschell Uhlemeyer, Fred Friese, Bill Wachsler or Bob Marting, Wilson Schwenk and Ney Amato.

McBride has won two of three games this season, losing to Soldan and winning from Blewett and Cleveland.

St. Louis County schools which do not play football open their schedule of games tonight. Brentwood plays at Ferguson, Jennings at Riverview Gardens, Hancock at Bayless, Eureka at Fairview and Affton at Valley Park.

DETROIT TAKES HOCKEY LEAD; HAWKS BEATEN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—It has taken a collection of injuries unusual even in so violent a game as hockey to make the fans realize just how good a team Jack Adams, manager of the Detroit Red Wings, put together to win the Stanley Cup last year. With one star after another out because of injuries, the Red Shirts, placing their faith in the great front-line combination of Marty Barry, Larry Aurie and Herb Lewis, have fought through four games without a loss and vaulted from third place to first in the National Hockey League's American division.

Barry, out of a couple of games himself, combined with his "midget" wingmen to carry the Red Wings to a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Canadiens, co-leaders of the International group, last night. The triumph sent Detroit into first place, a point ahead of the idle New York Rangers.

The only other game saw the Montreal Maroons turn back the Chicago Black Hawks, 2-1, with the "big train," Lionel Conacher, going down the rink under a full head of steam to score the winning goal.

The Maroons' triumph broke a tie with Toronto and gave them third place in the International section.

The Barry-Lewis-Aurie line, rivaled only by the Netw York Americans, Chapman-Schriner-Carr trio as a scoring combination this season, made a pair of beautiful plays for Detroit's two goals. Lewis made the first, deflecting Aurie's shot home while Barry made a fine rush and pass to set up the second for Aurie.

The Blackhawks made just one threat against the Maroons. They tied the score in the third period within two minutes after Herb Cain made the first Maroon tally. But Conacher, breaking away while his team was short-handed, went the length of the rink for the odd goal.

Kroemeke Girls Win.

Led by Miss Max Kastner, who scored 23 points, the Kroemeke girls' basketball team won from the Greeley Presbyterian girls, 52 to 20. Miss Helen Creamer of the Kroemekes counted 13 points.

St. Marks Defeats St. Edwards, 2-1, In Soccer Play-Off

St. Marks School soccer team advanced to the second round of the Parochial School League play-offs by defeating the St. Edwards team, 2 to 1, in a well played game at Sherman Park yesterday afternoon. St. Marks will oppose in the second round the winner of the Corpus Christi-St. Teresa game, which is to be played this afternoon at Forest Park.

In the first half of yesterday's game St. Marks got away to a 2-0 lead through goals by Center Halfback Bill Hake and Forward "Yatz" Corrigan, son of the former professional star. It was not until a minute before the final whistle that St. Edwards hit the target, Winnie Connolly scoring from a scrimmage.

St. John the Baptist, representing Carondelet Park, St. Ambrose, representing Forest Park, are other second round contestants.

Maryville Breaks Even.

By the Associated Press.

MARYVILLE, Mo., Dec. 11.—The Maryville Teachers split a double-header basketball card with the Peru, Neb., Teachers here last night, the Maryville varsity winning 40 to 29, while the Maryville "B" team lost to the Nebraskans, 26 to 22.

Panthers, Wildcats Meet.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Pittsburgh University's touring basketball team will be out to even its series with Northwestern tonight when the Panthers and Wildcats match shots and passes at Patten Gymnasium. The teams have met seven times, with Northwestern holding a 4—3 edge. The Wildcats defeated Carleton College early in the week. For Pitt's veteran five the battle will be the season opener.

Purchase Hockey Player.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 11. — The Cleveland Falcons hockey team of the International-American League announced the purchase of Nick Brenneman and George Massecar, wings from the Buffalo club which gave up its franchise.

EAST ST. LOUIS AND BELLEVILLE IN LEAGUE GAME

Fritz Friedli's Belleville Maroons oppose East St. Louis High School's basketball team tonight, at 8 o'clock, in the opening Madison-St. Clair League game, dedicating Belleville High School's new gymnasium. Livingston seeks its ninth straight victory, meeting Collinsville, at Collinsville, in the feature of tonight's four game non-league schedule.

Madison High entertains Soldan, while Wood River is at Mount Olive and Gillespie at Alton in other games. Non-league games tomorrow find Granite City at Benld; Belleville at Lebanon; Roosevelt at Wood River and Alton at Jerseyville.

Belleville and East St. Louis are rivals of long standing and the game should prove close, although East St. Louis is conceded the advantage. The East Siders have veterans of last year's team, while Friedli has all new material.

Livingston, in winning its eight straight games, has beaten four East Side league teams. Madison, Granite City, Wood River and East St. Louis dropped decisions to Livingston. However, Collinsville is considered the strongest league team on the East Side this season.

Bill Larson, Collinsville coach, has eight veterans of last year's team to match Livingston's fancy passing quintet. Ray Zeisel and the Evers brothers, Eddie and Walter, are the Collinsville mainstays. Elmer Sandrin, captain and forward of Livingston, will probably see action against the Kahoks. An injury kept him out of the Granite City game.

The schedule:

TONIGHT.
*East St. Louis at Belleville.
Livingston at Collinsville.
Wood River at Mount Olive.
Gillespie at Alton.
Soldan at Madison.

TOMORROW.
Granite City at Benld.
Belleville at Lebanon.
Alton at Jerseyville.
Roosevelt at Wood River.
*League game.

"Schoolboy" Hoyt, the owners probably would have suffered an apoplectic stroke. For although he showed signs of ability, Hoyt was sent back to the minors. A year later he reappeared in the American League at Boston and later joined the Yankees.

Hoyt came along gradually and developed into a genuine asset. Today, 20 years after he entered organized baseball ranks, he is still a dependable pitcher.

Rowe's more recent history is known. After a fair first season for the Tigers he became the sensation of 1934 and was one of the main factors in winning the pennant for that team two campaigns in succession. His last year was not so good—but neither was the team behind him.

• • •

Naturally, the chances are that Bob Feller will also come along. But it takes a lot of courage to risk 100 grand that he WILL stand up. We incline to the belief that Messrs. Yawkey and Ruppert are heaving sighs of relief.

• • •

The Bambino's Plaint.

BABE RUTH, turning down a chance to become manager of the Albany club of the International League complains: "After spending 22 years in the majors I can't see why I should have to 'go back to the minors to learn how to run a ball club."

There seems justice in that view. Rogers Hornsby produced a world champion team from a near tailender in a year and one-half. Bill Terry put across a pennant winner for the Giants. Charley Grimm, Bucky Harris and Mickey Cochrane are among major league stars to step directly from a big league playing job into successful managership of a major league club.

On the other hand there have been conspicuous failures among major league players who have attempted to come through as baseball pilots. Some of them even took a minor league tryout as manager before coming up, only to fall in the majors. A conspicuous example was that great star and fine character Walter Johnson.

• • •

"Queered" His Own Future?

HOWEVER, Babe seems better than 50 per cent right in making his complaint, if we base an opinion on what has happened to other baseball stars placed in his position.

That the magnates have not flocked to the Bambino with managerial propositions is due to the Bambino himself. That peevish little uprising the Babe put on when denied permission to attend the celebration on board the then new steamer Normandie about cooked Ruth's goose. The magnates were unfavorably impressed by his exhibition of childishness.

Evidently that impression has not been altered since.

To regain favorable consideration it may be necessary for the one-time idol of the fans to begin at the bottom of the managerial ladder and start climbing once more. Baseball might revise its opinion of his fitness, then.

NAVAL CADET TOPS CARD AT NEW ORLEANS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Shandon Farm's Naval Cadet, a five-year-old son of American Flag, appeared to be the "class" of the field of seven in the sixth race at Fair Grounds today, a claiming affair over the mile and one-sixteenth route. Miss M. White's Boy Valet, second to Norman D. last Tuesday, and High Diver, a recent winner, were picked to share the place and show positions.

March on Florida.

From New York Odom took 14 head South. They will race in the colors of Marshall Field, Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart and Robert L. Gerry. The string included Town Crier and Introductory, three-year-olds; Cromarty, Proximity, Rye Beach and Buttermilk, two-year-olds, and Early Delivery, Pasteurized, Milk Punch, Milk Dipper, Rich Cream and Follish Filly, yearlings.

Headley's hopefuls which will run in Hal Price Headley's colors were headed by the good four-year-old colt, Whopper, which will be a leading contender in the $50,000 added Widener on March 6. Whopper was unplaced in only one of his 10 starts this year, chalking four victories, two seconds and three thirds. Others in the string were Fraidy Cat, a four-year-old; Pelerine, a three-year-old; Lehigh, Pennine and Fairenus, two-year-olds, and five yearlings.

Seventy-seven entries were announced today for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes for three-year-olds to be run at Hialeah, Feb. 27. The race replaces the Florida Derby on Hialeah's list of 10 stakes, but retains similar conditions.

The "Wood" Worth $20,000.

Values of the Wood Memorial, run at the Jamaica spring meeting and the Brooklyn handicap at Aqueduct, have been doubled for the 1937 season. Each will now be worth $20,000 added.

Directors of the two metropolitan tracks also boosted the ante on all other stakes except those for two-year-olds.

Rides Four Winners.

Louis Machado of Fall River, Mass., climaxed the remarkable series of riding feats that have marked the current Charles Town (W. Va.) meeting when he brought home four winners and finished in the money in a fifth race on the seven-event card, yesterday.

Machado won aboard Crushed Ice in the first race; a long shot, Stickemup, in the second; Buck Langhorne in the featured Wetzel Purse, fourth on the program, and Petee Lad in the sixth. He finished third riding Jobakheta in the last race.

Buck Langhorne, odds-on favorite, owned by Mrs. K. N. Gilpin, gained his first victory in three starts at Charles Town by racing six and one-half furlongs over a muddy track in 1:24 4-5 to defeat the fast-closing Credulous, owned by Mrs. G. Hutchins. L. W. Brown's Take Off, early pace setter, tired badly and barely lasted to take third place.

A sloppy track at the Fair Grounds, result of a morning storm, failed to handicap Norman Hernandez's Biography in the Morgan City Purse, headline event. The New Orleans owned gelding let his stablemate, Marcabala, set the pace until well along in the stretch after both had started poorly. Then Jockey Turner left Biography out and he ran over the leaders to finish a length in front of Mrs. B. Fransheim's Compensatory, while Marcabala came in third.

SANTA CLARA IS 10-6 FAVORITE TO BEAT T. C. U.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 11.—The Horned Frogs of Texas Christian arrived here today for their intersectional tilt tomorrow with the Santa Clara Broncos, the nation's only major eleven with a perfect record.

The Texans were greeted with two items that failed to upset their confidence. These were:

1. The Broncos have been established as 10 to 6 favorites. "Even money" is being wagered the Texans lose by 7 points.

2. Lawrence ("Buck") Shaw, the handsome coach of the Broncos, predicted his boys will move to the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans on New Year's day still undefeated and untied.

Shaw said: "If my boys perform tomorrow like they have in practice all week then their perfect record will remain intact. And, I think they'll play that way."

A crowd of 40,000 is expected to view the tilt. The duel between the two all-American backfield aces, "Slingin' Sam" Baugh of the Frogs, and Nello Falaschi of the Broncos, is creating a lot of talk.

Shaw has warned his players not to be cocky. He pointed out that in 1934 and 1935 the Broncos fell before the Frogs and they have yet to capture their first victory from the Texans.

Shaw added that the Broncos have no right to become cocky about anything. He then disclosed he had just received word that Louisiana State, their opponent in the Sugar Bowl, has been established a 3-2 favorite for the New Year's day game.

Golfer Complains Because He Gets Only 250 Yards on Drives

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A dissatisfied Washington golfer, who says he plays infrequently and averages "only 250 yards" with his drives, caused Jimmy Thomson, the world's longest hitter, to wonder today whether Kayak paddling would lengthen his own tee shots.

The spare-time player wrote Jimmy bemoaning his lack of yardage with the wood clubs and asking assistance in adding distance to his shots.

"When I'm having a good day I get as low as 68, sometimes go as high as 88 and average around 77," the golfer wrote. "My drives carry around 250 yards. This means that with a lucky roll I can get well over 300 yards, while if the drive is hit into a hillside I am at least sure of 250 yards.

"I am not satisfied with this distance."

The golfer, 25 years old and weighing 185 pounds, explained he carried his weight in his chest, shoulders and arms because of activity in football, handball, tumbling and Kayak paddling.

"Maybe it's a gag," Thomson said, "but I've never heard of one like it. I think I'd take up Kayak paddling."

M. I. A. A. Will Meet Tomorrow In St. Louis

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ROLLA, Mo., Dec. 11.—Kirksville Teachers College, winner of the M. I. A. A. football championship this year, will play host to the faculty representatives, athletic directors and coaches of the conference at a banquet tomorrow at the Statler Hotel in St. Louis as the feature of the annual get-together of the loop officials.

It is the custom for the team that wins the football flag to stand treat for the other schools. Routine business, including formation of 1937 football schedules, plans for the 1937 track and field meet and tennis and golf tournaments to be held at Cape Girardeau, dual track meets for next spring, will occupy most of the coaches' time.

The faculty representatives probably will spend some time in clarifying the eligibility rules in regard to the School of Mines and the rest of the conference, composed of the Teachers Colleges.

Football coaches who will attend are: Andy McDonald, Springfield; Harold Grant, Missouri School of Mines; Fritz Faurot, Kirksville; Abe Stuber, Caje Girardeau; Carl Voltmer, Warrensburg, and Lefty Davis, Maryville.

RACING NOTES

Preparations are nearly complete for the opening of the Florida racing season at Tropical Park next Monday. The stalls at both Tropical and Hialeah Parks are nearly filled and late arrivals are coming in daily. One of the recent arrivals at Miami was Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, noted trainer, who brought a big string from New York.

Fitzsimmons and his assistant, George Tappen, will handle 20 horses owned by William Woodward's Belair Stud, Ogden Phipps and the Wheatley Stable of Mrs. H. C. Phipps and Ogden Mills. Among the racers are Phipps' White Cocade, winner of the Withers last spring, the three-year-olds, Isolator, owned by Woodward, and Snark and Reminding from the Wheatley Stable. The others are two-year-olds and yearlings, which will be eligible for racing after Jan. 1.

Mr. Khayyam, one-time winner of the American Derby and other important stakes, and Good Advice, both owned by Mrs. James Austin's Catawba Stable, have been retired to the stud at Silver Lake Farm near Frankfort, Ky.

In El Confido we feel we're giving you the finest cigar at any price—the only cigar ever made special to suit the taste of St. Louis smokers. FREE STATE MOVE TO GET RID OF KING'S GOVERNOR

COSGRAVE FACTION OBJECTS TO HASTE

President's Proposal Would Confine Use of Monarch's Name Strictly to Foreign Matters.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Dec. 11.—President Eamon de Valera strove in the face of an opposition attack in the Dail today to take advantage of the abdication of Edward VIII to sever all but one of the Free State's remaining ties with Great Britain.

Introducing bills for the abolition of the office of Governor-General and for the conduct of Free State internal affairs without reference to the King, De Valera told the members he had not consulted the other dominions on his action.

"This is a matter which affects ourselves alone," he said, in paraphrase of the old Sinn Fein war cry.

The Dail was crowded with members and spectators for the special session, called to ratify Edward's abdication and the accession of his brother, the former Duke of York, to the throne.

This ratification is included in De Valera's bill, but the measure would confine the Free State's use of the King's anme to foreign affairs, and make the Free State completely independent of Great Britain otherwise.

Cosgrave Opposes Move.

W. T. Cosgrave, leader of the United Ireland party, and the Labor leader, William Norton, led the opposition attack on the De Valera plan.

Norton said the legislation, on which De Valera is determined to complete action tomorrow, "is being rushed through with indecent haste."

It was Cosgrave who asked De Valera whether he intended to sever all relations with the British Commonwealth of nations, and whether he had consulted the other members of that commonwealth. The President replied he had not had time to consult the dominions, but that he had informed the British Government of his intentions.

"Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa have agreed to certain action in the present position," he continued, "but the Free State Government was not prepared to give assent to the idea that the British Parliament could legislate for the Free State."

He denied the measure would remove the Free State from the commonwealth and said it was "intended to bring the law into accordance with the facts."

Injury to Friendly Nation.

James Dillon, vice-president of Cosgrave's party, retorted that De Valera "has hurt the feelings of a great and friendly nation at a moment when they are subjected to a severe strain in a time of crisis."

De Valera's action was the first specific indication of organized opposition by a dominion to ratification of the former King's renunciation of the throne.

De Valera had already indicated his intention of substituting a "ceremonial head of the State" for the Governor-General—the King's representative—when he announced recently he was drafting a new Constitution.

The bill would authorize De Valera, as Free State President, to take over all functions of Governor-General Donla Buckley, except the signing of bills and dissolving of the Parliament, which would be done by the Speaker.

Even the continuance of the use of the King's name in accrediting Free State ministers and in other foreign affairs would be dependent upon whether the autonomous British dominions also retained the practice.

De Valera called the Parliament to consider emergency legislation with the statement that "insofar as the Free State is concerned, the abdication will not become effective until legislation for that purpose has been enacted by Parliament."

The Free State, with the status of a dominion, under the statute of Westminster has equal power with the British Parliament in any matter affecting the crown.

Authoritative sources said a sudden declaration of the Free State as a republic was unlikely.

Australian Parliament Completes Approval of Change in Rulers.

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 11.—The House of Representatives approved today the resolution of assent to King Edward's abdication, completing the Australian legal steps necessary for the accession of the Duke of York.

Mrs. Joseph Lyons, wife of the Prime Minister of the commonwealth, writing in the Melbourne Herald, described England's new queen, the Duchess of York, as "kind, most charming, simple and friendly, yet possessing great natural dignity and is a worthy successor to a great and noble queen."

11,000,000 Jobs Needed to Put U. S. Back on Living Standard Of 1929, Economist Moulton Says

Thinks Recovery More Substantial Than Previous Ones Chiefly Because of Gains in Workers' Buying Power.

To put the United States back to the living standards of 1929, in the opinion of Harold G. Moulton, Brookings Institution economist, would require the additional employment of 11,000,000 to 12,000,000 persons.

Preceding an address this morning at Graham Memorial Chapel at Washington University, in which he discussed economic recovery from the standpoint of return to the pre-depression standards, he expounded the main points of the thesis in an interview with a Post-Dispatch reporter. The institution with which he is connected, at Washington, is known for its research in the fields of economics and political science. It was founded by the late Robert S. Brookings of St. Louis.

Moulton sketched briefly the decline in production of durable goods during the depression, resulting in an accumulated deficiency. To the economist the term "durable goods" means, in general, those commodities the useful life of which exceeds three years, such as houses, automobiles, furniture, jewelry, and, of course, the capital equipment of business and industry. The term is used in contrast with "consumer goods," meaning food, clothing and those things quickly used up in the routine of life.

Figures on Needs.

The production of consumer goods annually in order to restore the living standards of 1929, on a per capita basis, would have to be at the average rate of $33,000,000,000 a year in value, he said, or an increase of nearly 60 per cent over the 1936 production of $21,000,000,000. The average in the boom period of 1925 to 1929 was about $25,000,000,000 a year, he added.

He estimated that in terms of employment this would mean the addition of eight to nine millions of workers in industry, the number depending somewhat on future developments in labor-saving machinery. There was not a great deficiency in consumer goods, he explained, since they fall more generally in the field of necessaries, so the additional employment there, in coming back to 1929 standards, might not exceed 3,000,000. The aggregate in both categories would exceed the highest recent estimates of unemployment.

He used housing as a specific example of the shortage in durable goods. To put housing on a plane equal to 1929, no better, would require the construction of 900,000 units (homes or accommodations in apartments) annually for the next five years, he said, contrasting this with the actual construction of only 300,000 such units in 1936 and 750,000 annually in the years 1925 to 1929.

Substantial Recovery.

Expressing the view that recovery since 1933 has been on a more substantial basis than the rise out of earlier depressions, he made no prediction as to the course it will take hereafter. Its solid foundation thus far, he said, has been in the gain of purchasing power of wage earners.

There was a steady rise in wages, but the price level remained almost stationary, was even reduced in some instances, so that consumption was stimulated. Proof of the wisdom of this policy, in his opinion, was found in the unusually high profits producers were receiving as their volume of sales increased. It refutes, he said, the theory of some that profits cannot be increased without increasing prices.

Moulton said he observed a disturbing factor in a trend, just now manifest, to increase prices. It came from the pressure of high taxes, increasing costs of raw materials and in some instances from the larger wage increases. Whether this tendency would be restrained he could not say, but unless it was, he thought the expansion of production would be severely checked.

Dubious of Shorter Hours.

There was danger, he thought, in the movement to drastically shorten working hours, a movement based on the theory there was not enough work to go around; this plan "would necessarily bring higher prices and the vicious circle of restricted markets."

It was his opinion the better course would be to continue the wage advances as justified by earnings and keep prices at present levels, or reduce them, if possible, and so pass on to the consumer the benefits of invention and technological progress. Only in this way, he said, could production expansion be continued and the standard of living raised.

REMINGTON RAND HEARING ENDED BY LABOR BOARD

Company Offers No Evidence After Government Rests Its Case Unexpectedly.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., Dec. 11. — The National Labor Relations Board hearing into charges of unfair labor practices against Remington Rand, Inc., ended today. The company produced no evidence to counter testimony of Government witnesses.

The Government rested its case unexpectedly yesterday and Trial Examiner Charles A. Wood denied a company motion for dismissal of the charges.

Counsel for the company contended that, because of the voluminous record, they were unable immediately to say whether the company wished to present a reply or to make more detailed and specific the motion for dismissal. Wood thereupon transferred the entire case to the full National Labor Relations Board in Washington for decision.

The company's arguments for dismissal of the charges against it included contentions that the whole National Labor Relations Act was unconstitutional, that the company was not engaged in interstate commerce and that there was "absolute failure" to prove the company guilty of unfair labor practices.

Total $946,125,000 in 50,927 Stores; St. Louis Reports $316,398,000 Business.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Final Census Bureau figures showed today Missouri retail sales in 1935 totaling $946,125,000 in 50,927 stores, an increase of 25 per cent over 1933 sales. The total is $24,539,000 greater than the preliminary figures released in October and includes 577 more stores.

The stores employed an average of 124,849 persons full and part time and paid them a total of $104,127,000. The employes increase 11 per cent and the payroll 15 per cent in the two-year period.

St. Louis and Kansas City include 37 per cent of the stores and 56 per cent of the total sales for Missouri.

The number of stores and sales by cities, with percentage of increase: St. Louis, 12,790, $316,398,000, 25 per cent; Kansas City, $5985, $209,399,000 28 per cent; University City 198, $5,163,000; Webster Groves, 172, $5,640,000; Maplewood, 226 $5,640,000; Clayton, 95, $4,328,000.

GERMAN PUBLIC GETS FIRST WORD OF MRS. SIMPSON

"Who Is She?" They Ask After Reading of Her in Papers.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—Germans read copies of the first King Edward extras just before 8 o'clock last night and then asked each other: "Who is this frau Erneste Simpson?" The papers have carried virtually nothing heretofore about England's Crown crisis.

The extras had a bannerline on the abdication, carried pictures of King Edward, the Duke of York and his Duchess, but none of Wallis Warfield Simpson, and mentioned briefly in a corner of page two: "The King's desire to marry one frau Erneste Simpson caused the crisis."

The editorial comment that may be expected from the controlled press was indicated in semiofficial comment distributed by the official news agency. It read: "The King has abdicated for reasons we respect."

It added, "It is not for us to criticise his attitude," and observed the British Government's handling of the crisis "shows on what foundations this great Empire rests."

The highest praise was voiced for the "tactful discipline" of the British Government, the Parliament and the people and for the statesmanship of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin.

"Germany greets the new King with the same sympathy accorded King Edward VIII when he ascended the throne," the editorial concluded.

Reichsfeuhrer Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, discussing the British crisis today for the first time, censured the press of other nations for making the case "a boulevard sensation." The newspaper said heart-felt sympathy was the reaction of all Germans, but added, "no nation emerges unchanged from such a crisis."

SOCIAL SECURITY PLAN NOT OPTIONAL, BOARD POINTS OUT

Every Eligible Employe Must Participate in Federal Old-Age Program.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — The Social Security Board asserted last night that every eligible employe must participate in the Federal old-age annuity program.

"The board has received reports that some wage earners believe that participation in the old-age benefits program is wholly dependent upon their decision," the board said in a statement. "The act provides that on Jan. 1, 1937, all employes under 65 years of age, who earn wages in employments not excepted by the act, are included."

The board further explained that an employe of an employer who hires only one man is not exempt, nor is a non-citizen. The board advised employes with more than one employer to put all employers' names on one application card and not to make out separate applications for each employer. Dec. 15 is the last day for filing applications.

NEW YORK BANKER REPORTS $55,000 DONATION TO G. O. P.

George F. Baker Says It Was Divided Among National Committee and 9 Local Ones.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. — Total contributions of $55,000 to the Republican campaign were reported to the Senate Campaign Funds Committee yesterday by George F. Baker, banker, of New York. His report was among the first batch of replies given out by the investigating committee on its questionnaires to big campaign donors.

Baker reported he made donations to the Republican National Committee and nine local Republican campaign organizations.

Other large contributors reporting to the committee included:

KING OF SWEDEN GIVES PRIZES TO NOBEL WINNERS

Two Americans and Six Others Are Honored at Ceremony — Eugene O'Neill Sends Letter.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 11. — Two Americans and six other leaders in their fields received Nobel prizes yesterday at an elaborate ceremony presided over by King Gustav of Sweden.

Eugene O'Neill, the American dramatist who got the literary award of $40,000, was not present, but Dr. Carl David Anderson of the California Institute of Technology was on hand to receive his prize for physics. The 31-year-old American scientist shared the $40,000 physics award with Prof. V. E. Hess of Innsbruck University, Austria.

A message from O'Neill, read for him, was received with enthusiasm because he acknowledged his indebtedness, in his play-writing, to August Strindberg, Swedish dramatist.

O'Neill expressed the opinion that "it is not only my work which is being honored but the work of all my colleagues in America—that the Nobel prize is a symbol of the recognition by Europe of the coming-of-age of the American theater."

King Gustav, presenting an award to Dr. Anderson, showed particular interest in the young American whose parents were born in Sweden.

The 1935 peace prize, not previously granted, went to Carl von Ossietzky, German pacifist who recently was released from a German prison camp in which he had spent three years.

The presence of the German Minister to Sweden at the ceremony was taken as an indication the German Government does not intend to boycott the Nobel foundtion, despite official expressions of displeasure over the award to Ossietzky.

Dr. Carlos Saavedra Lamas, Argentine Foreign Minister and permanent chairman of the Inter-American Peace Conference now being held in Buenos Aires, won the 1936 peace prize. He and Ossietzky each receive about $39,000.

Sir Henry H. Dale, director of the National Institute for Medical Research at Hampstead, England, and Prof. Otto Loewi of Graz University, Austria, received the joint medicine and psychology prize.

250 Employes in French Sugar Refinery Oppose Walk-Out.

BORDEAUX, France, Dec. 11.—Two hundred and fifty women workers who refused to join a walkout in a large sugar refinery here were held prisoners today by striking employes.

Their captors forced them to remain inside the plant which was in complete possession of the workers, who are disputing with operators over the discharge of the treasurer of the local union.

LAWYER FOR JEW IN MURDER TRIAL DENOUNCES NAZIS

CHUR, Switzerland, Dec. 11.—Counsel for David Frankfurter, on trial for killing the Nazi leader, Wilhelm Gustloff, accused German Nazis today of trying to penetrate Switzerland.

In a long address, Dr. Eugene Curti, defensse attorney, pictured Gustloff as a "little Fuehrer," heading a "veritable military organization," preparing the way for expansion for Nazi Germany.

Gustloff was shot in his bedroom last Feb. 4. Frankfurter was quoted by Gustloff's widow as saying he shot him "because I am a Jew."

Prosecutor S. R. Brugger, summing up the prosecution's case against Frankfurter last night, called the shooting a premeditated political crime.

Frankfurter sat almost motionless through the three-hour speech. Several times he smiled.

Then, replying on his own behalf, the defendant accused the prosecutor of a lack of knowledge of the facts.

Earlier, Frankfurter, 27-year-old Yugoslav medical student, testified that while in Gustloff's study waiting to see him, he hard him speaking over the telephone in the next room. He said he thought he heard him say, "Ah, these pigs of Jews and Communists, we will see an end of them."

A moment later, when Gustloff entered the study, Frankfurter lifted his pistol and fired five shots, the student said.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

In Defense of Arkansas.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

REFERRING to your photograph of Thomas Hart Benton's painting entitled "Arkansas," portraying an unflattering street scene:

It is not my purpose to condemn the painter, for I claim no knowledge of the ability of artists, but I do think he used very poor taste or very poor judgment in his subject matter. I judge that the impression he wishes to leave is that the picture is typical of our State, and that the people are an indolent, shiftless, lazy lot.

He might as easily have labeled it "Missouri," or any other state, for there is no state that does not have a certain element which is typical of this picture. But in labeling it "Arkansas," there is no other angle we can accept than that it is the typical scene in our great State.

I am not attempting to "burn up" the editor, but why should any paper let such a picture go into print?

Some weeks ago, a group of St. Louis business men called here on a "good will tour" and our little city royally received them, not as curiosities, but as neighbors to us, for after all the people of Arkansas do a lot of business with their Missouri neighbors. I'm sure, if you'll interview any of those men who made this trip through Northeast Arkansas, they'll tell you, and the painter as well, that they did not find people as depicted in this picture you published.

Arkansas people rightfully resent the insulting things that are said and printed about our State by newspapers in other states, and feel that such unfair and unwarranted publicity is the direct cause of many in other sections having the impression they do of Arkansas. We are proud of our State, and justly so. We believe no better people live on earth than are found here, and believe that if a few responsible for adverse publicity would visit with people down here, they'd feel and write differently than they do.

There's one thing you will find in Arkansas, and that is true Southern hospitality, and a hand of welcome, and you'll not find our folks sitting around poverty-stricken as the picture shows, nor will you find them ready to cast insulting and slurring remarks toward our sister State, Missouri. LAUD PAYNE.

Piggott, Ark.

All Is Forgiven.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

SINCE you've been castigated for your campaign position, permit me to point out that there are some who stuck by you, not because of your switch but in spite of it.

Naturally, when you switched from an independent attitude to open support of Landon, I wondered who had spiked your "likker." On the other hand, I figured if you could block the Pendergast machine in Missouri, it might be worth the shot. Then, I thought, regardless of what you say or do, your correspondents would give us the real news from the front—which they did.

Being a supporter of F. D. R., with mental reservations, I could hardly figure how you could help elect Landon knowing what the Pennsy gang would do if permitted to get their feet again into the trough. So I just says, They know it can't be done, anyway.

Being a maverick out of the home valleys, I have to depend on one daily to keep informed. For mere news one might pick the New York Times. But I want an independent editorial page—the best I know of—uncolored news of Washington, and local news of the most typical American scene extant—Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and Arkansas.

Reforms for City and State.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AM very glad to notice your approval of the work of the Municipal Initiative League. It would also be well to see a State Initiative League take up some serious problems of government which must be solved before Missouri can take its rightful place among the progressive states of the Union.

Here is my program:

Permanent registration.

Voting machines.

Redistricting of wards in St. Louis.

Unicameral Legislature for the State.

Electrification of railroads in St. Louis City and County. (A law providing for this improvement was introduced in the House of Delegates in 1895. It is time the city required the railroads to assist in the reduction of smoke.)

Public ownership of gas plants to provide our citizens with gas at cost (or less than 25 cents per 1000 cubic feet).

Non-political city government, or a city manager system.

The savings to the citizens from these improvements would be incalculable and would justify any effort and expenditure required to bring them about.

WILLIAM HENRY GRUEN.

THE KING IS OUT—

The man who was King of England yesterday morning has renounced the throne in deference to the Constitution, to parliamentary government and to public opinion.

"Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this sun of York."

So may the new King be appropriately received by reason of his ducal title, together with the immemorial "Long live the King!"

The mood of the moment is relief that a period of imperial tension and gravity, with symptoms of hysteria, has dignifiedly ended, with the imprescriptible majesty of law unblemished. Such, surely, will be the devout hope of men of good will throughout the world.

Yet a reservation must be entered. The man who was Edward VIII has balanced the glory of the crown against his heart's desire and has chosen the woman. The choice will have romantic acclaim. By unwritten testament he has bequeathed a legacy of chivalry. There are possibilities in that emotion. By an act of volition he has—without intent, to be sure—disparaged the institution of kingship. The glitter of the crown to be placed upon the successor's head has been dimmed.

The point at issue has been clarified by the Prime Minister's candid statement to the Commons.

Edward realized from the first that the woman he was determined to marry could not be accepted as Queen. He sought a special parliamentary dispensation by way of a legalized morganatic marriage, granting her the status of wife and forfeiting the right of succession were the union blessed by children.

The Prime Minister, it will be recalled, had, under prearranged question, publicly declared that the Government would not introduce such legislation. The conferences of trying weeks have revolved around that issue, the King insistent, the Prime Minister obdurate.

But back of that issue lay the fate of parliamentary government, of the constitutional monarchy's very life. The concession demanded by Edward might have been granted, despite injunctions of church and sentiment, except for its convulsive implications.

The question has been illuminatingly discussed by Harold J. Laski, professor of political science at the University of London and well known in the United States as a visiting lecturer at Harvard and other institutions, and as publicist and speaker.

Waiving the personalities involved, the wisdom or unwisdom of the proposed marriage, the opposition of church and aristocracy—waiving all collateral considerations, "It is the principle," Prof. Laski says, "that out of this issue no precedent must be created that makes the royal authority once more a source of independent political power in the state." It was on that ground that the Prime Minister would not, and could not, with official integrity, yield to the King's demand.

It has been observed, of course, that throughout this controversy Mr. Baldwin has had the support of the Labor party in the House. Prof. Laski, long identified with the Labor party, explains that attitude, taking due cognizance of Labor's friendliness to the late King because of Edward's interest in the distressed economic areas. He says:

> They (the Labor party) know that if the right of independent monarchical power is established (in the instance of a morganatic marriage), it may be invoked on other occasions for purposes utterly incompatible with democratic constitutionalism. Were they to succeed, a blow would be struck at the roots of parliamentary authority from which it would not easily recover.

That Edward harbored any such autocratic designs may be dismissed. Marriage with the woman he loved was the sole purpose, it may be presumed, of his request to the Cabinet. But the precedent was there, were the request complied with, loaded with dynamite.

King and Parliament have battled with words and weapons down the centuries since Runnymede. Political scientists analyze the issue. Statesmen discuss it in fierce or restrained forensics. Historians paint it in brilliant narrative and follow it down the long evolutionary trails. A poet, like Kipling, tells "The Old Issue" in a song:

> All we have of freedom, all we use or know—
> This our fathers bought for us long and long ago.
> Ancient Right unnoticed as the breath we draw—
> Leave to live by no man's leave, underneath the Law—
> Lance and torch and tumult, steel and grey-goose wing,
> Wrenched it, inch and ell and all, slowly from the King.
> Till our fathers 'stablished, after bloody years,
> How our King is one with us, first among his peers.
> So they bought up freedom—not at little cost—
> Wherefore must we watch the King, lest our gain be lost.

A London paper, the Mirror, bespeaks "a kindly and charitable farewell to Edward." In such adieu the world will heartfully join.

LET THERE BE NO DELAYS.

The decision of Federal Judge George C. Sweeney of Boston, upholding the Social Security Act, starts that epochal Federal law on the way to the United States Supreme Court.

The Federal Security Act reaches down to the lives of the rank and file of Americans; if it needs to be altered slightly or changed substantially to bring it into agreement with the Constitution, that discovery should be announced with all possible promptness. Again, if the law is constitutional in its premise or if it is unconstitutional, we cannot find it out too soon.

The public interest demands that the Government and the challenger join in carrying this case to final determination without the needless delays that all too often attend important public issues.

THE FINAL TEST.

William D. Mitchell, Attorney-General under Hoover, spoke a profound truth in his address at the St. Louis Bar Association's dinner in honor of the Federal and Circuit Judges. Reporting on the work of the United States Supreme Court's Advisory Commission on Uniform Rules of Procedure, he said that, regardless of the rules adopted, much will depend upon their administration by the courts.

As Mr. Mitchell pointed out, the commission which he heads is seeking to simplify methods of appeal and to do away with legal rigmarole generally. But unless Federal Judges are in sympathy with the aims of the redrafting, the rules will not have the effect desired. Whether the work of the Federal courts shall be contaminated by politics must depend on the character of the Judges. The test of a law, in the final analysis, is its administration. The test of the Supreme Court's uniform rules, now in the making, will be their administration by the courts.

In Missouri and wherever Federal judicial seats are to be filled, lawyers and laymen alike should be working for the appointment of the best possible Judges.

HOW OUR ZOO WAS DEVELOPED.

One of the methods we devised yesterday to get our minds temporarily off L'Affaire Simpson was to read about how the St. Louis Zoo grew from nothing in 1913 to the delightful and instructive place it is today. Miss Jim, the elephant, and Steve, the hippo, have seen it all happen. At first, the Zoo was a kind of animal jail, with the inmates peering unhappily from behind the bars of their cells. And, if it made the animals unhappy, there was little in the sight to cheer the spectators. Most of us would rather see a bird on the wing or a squirrel scampering up a tree than the rarest and most exotic animals and birds living in cramped and unattractive quarters.

The Zoo officials felt that way, too. They began to open up the Zoo. The ingeniously devised bear pits were the sensation of their time. They are still the magnet for countless visitors. It is very pleasant, both for bears and spectators, to see the former enjoying freedom of movement under the open sky in conditions similar to their natural habitats. The same is true of the quarters for the smaller mammals and other specimens. The new monkey, bird and snake houses likewise represent a tremendous improvement in Zoo technique. Soon the lions and tigers and the hoofed animals will have barless retreats.

Why is our Zoo such a success? Why is its popularity constantly increasing? One reason is because it is entirely free of politics. No one knows the politics of the attendants. They are selected for their efficiency. Another is the fact that the Zoo is supported by direct taxation. It has financial autonomy. But above and beyond these important considerations, the Zoo is what it is because of the intelligent direction of Mr. Vierheller and of the highly sympathetic co-operation he has had from Mr. Dieckmann, Mr. Lemp, Mr. Masterson and other members of the board. For them, the building up of the Zoo has been a labor of love.

St. Louis is indebted to these gentlemen.

PIRANDELLO.

It was the lot of Luigi Pirandello, the Italian dramatist who died yesterday, to arouse both great enthusiasm and vigorous criticism wherever his plays appeared. This was because of the themes he chose for topics. They were themes as old as the human race, yet always provocative. Like Pilate, he asked, "What is truth?" Like the prophet of Ecclesiastes, he found life a vanity and an illusion. With the earliest philosophers and the most modern psychologists, he saw a baffling problem in human identity, a vague borderline between the normal and the abnormal.

Pirandello achieved a following in the war and post-war days because his mood of disillusionment fitted the prevailing world temper. There were many to agree that "life is a very sad piece of buffoonery . . . the ferocious derision of destiny condemns man to deception." He won renown, too, because he was an outstanding master of dramatic technique. Pirandello's plays will continue to stimulate speculation and discussion, even after a happier world abandons the bitterness and despair which his writings so frequently expressed.

THE VANISHING VOTER REAPPEARS.

One of the common criticisms of American citizens for at least a quarter-century has been that they have not taken seriously enough their responsibility as voters. Political scientists have computed that 80 per cent of the eligible voters went to the polls in the wrenching Bryan-McKinley election of 1896. Their findings have shown a descending curve of voter interest to 1920 and 1924, whose presidential elections brought out only 50 per cent of the electorate. In 1928 and again four years ago, the vote stood at about 60 per cent, a figure far below the average in such countries as Great Britain, France, Denmark, Belgium and Switzerland.

Now come the final returns, official in every state except Rhode Island, where the voting machines have been kept under lock and key by litigation, to show a record-breaking vote of 45,812,155 last month. This avalanche of ballots represented 6,000,000 more voters than the previous high total.

Since the United States does not have official registration figures on eligible voters as some European countries have, there is no way of knowing accurately how many persons were rated as legal voters last month. The Associated Press, a few days before the election, estimated the eligible vote at 55,000,000. It is not known how many persons might have registered, yet failed to do so, so it is impossible to determine what percentage of persons who might have voted did exercise the right of franchise. But 45,000,000 is nine-elevenths of 55,000,000, and that is a much more creditable proportion for participating voters from among those registered.

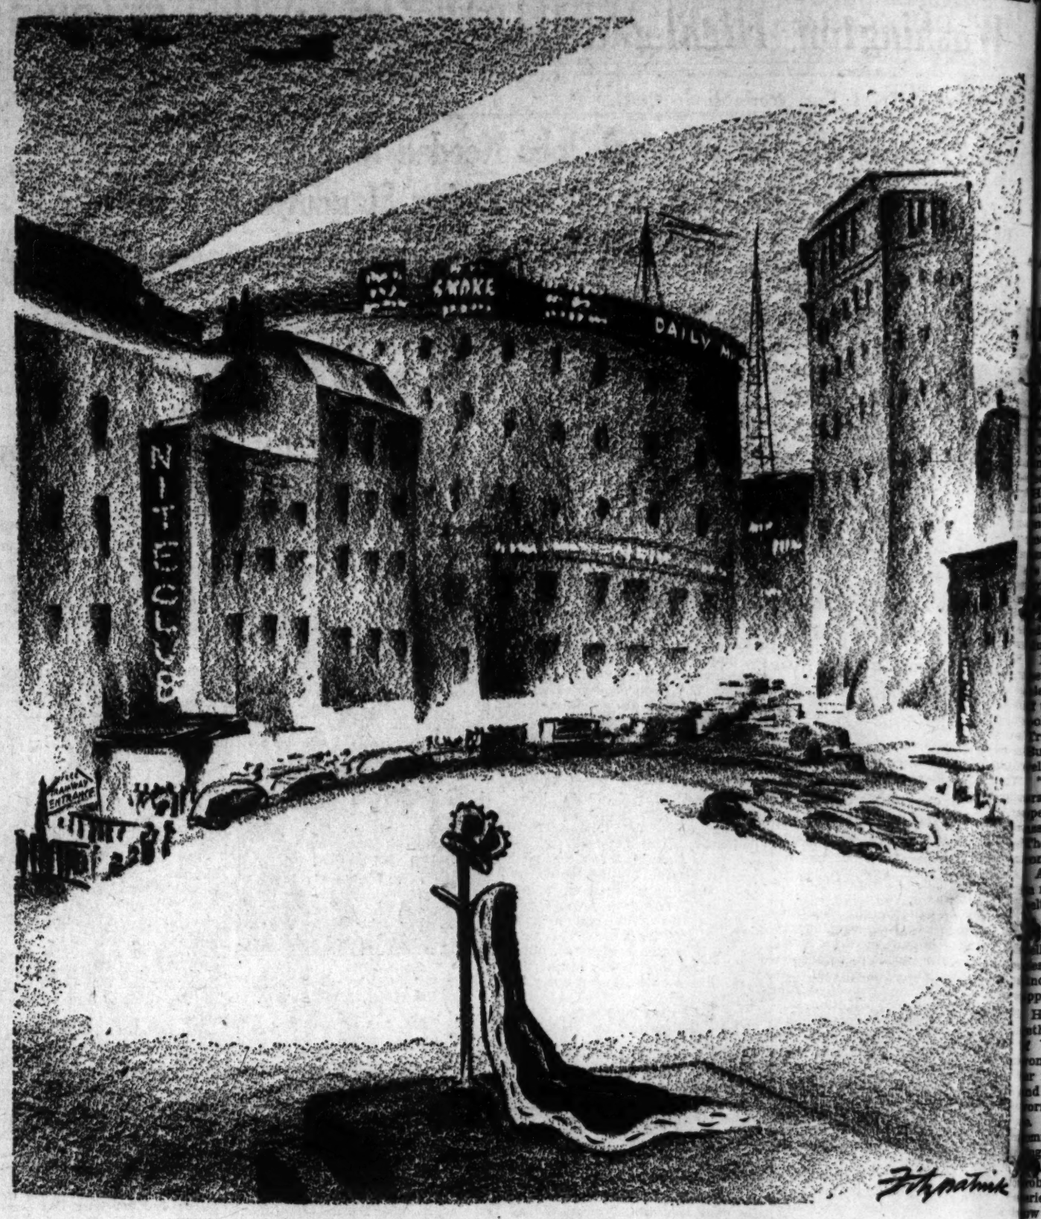

This topic is full of interest. Our friends, the professional political scientists, ought to go into it thoroughly and give us a scholarly report.

GERMANY'S "NOBLE" PRESS.

Why did not Germany's press tell its readers the news of the British constitutional crisis? Because, an official spokesman has explained to the people, Germany's press is "more noble" than that of other countries; it does not concern itself with matters that are the private affairs of those concerned. So the German people remained in ignorance long after the veil of secrecy had been removed in England and the affair had been discussed in Parliament.

German editors are not really so "noble" as the Government represents them to be, a New York Times correspondent says. They chafed at the restrictions throughout the course of the crisis, and bought news reports from outside agencies hoping that they would at last be permitted to publish them. Neither do the German people possess such a degree of nobility. They eagerly purchased all the foreign newspapers that were available, and discussed the affair with an interest as great as that of other peoples.

It seems inconceivable that the press of a whole nation could be prevented from printing news of a world-shaking event. This, however, is one of the ways that Fascism works. In this instance, the masters of Germany were not frank enough to say that they did not want, for reasons of diplomacy, to risk offending British feelings. Instead, they conjured up a picture of editorial nobility. Question: Did anyone in Germany believe this fiction?

"WITH YESTERDAY'S SEVEN THOUSAND YEARS."

Latin America Looks North

Southern neighbors have many grievances against this country, founded on imperialism and exploitation; distrust began to dissolve with Morrow's conciliation in Mexico; since U. S. put good-neighbor policy into effect by giving up privileges, new era has dawned; high hopes are held for achievement at Buenos Aires conference.

An Anonymous Latin American in Review of Reviews.

YOU Americans of the United States have a vague idea that Latin Americans as a whole have generally disliked and distrusted you and seem to find it surprising. It is a comparatively easy fact to explain, if you try to understand our point of view.

To the average North American, the Monroe Doctrine is, of course, the cornerstone of all relations between the United States and the rest of the American countries. He has been taught to believe that we owe the maintenance of our independence to the enunciation of this doctrine. He cannot understand why we appear to resent and oppose the Monroe Doctrine.

Leaving aside for the moment the fact that the doctrine wasn't always successful in keeping Europe out of Latin America, you have indulged in plenty of aggression yourselves. While we realize that the Monroe Doctrine contains no promise to keep hands off, that doesn't make us any happier about your conduct.

Memory of your methods of continental expansion might be dimmer in our minds were it not for your record in the Caribbean in the first two decades of this century. The story of Cuba, Haiti, the Dominican Republic, Nicaragua and Panama has been told to you by your own publicists, while many of your men of middle age got their first training for service in the World War by marching into Mexico and back out again.

So much for how little your actions as a country have done in the past to make us trust and believe in you. The Americans you send abroad, representatives of your Government and your huge business interests, have on the whole not done much more. Some of your big companies have been almost as imperialistic as your Government.

I am sorry if I present a dismal picture, but it is a true one of what has prevailed until the last few years. Fortunately, there is a much rosier one today, and we hope as sincerely as any of you that it will become increasingly so. For this to be the case, however, it is necessary for North Americans to realize why in the past we have been suspicious of them and their country so that the errors on your part may not be repeated.

There is no question but that today we have a feeling of greater confidence and faith in you and your Government than we have ever had before. There is a fundamental reason for this. While we have in the past often had good words from you, deeds have not borne the words out. During the past few years, we have found for the first time that the speeches of your leaders as to the necessity for being good neighbors have found real expression in actions.

Most of us lay the beginnings of your good-neighbor policy of attempting to understand your American sister nations and respecting their rights to the mission of the late Dwight W. Morrow as Ambassador to Mexico. Mr. Morrow went to Mexico at a time when relations between the United States and Mexico were at their lowest ebb. By a combination of complete simplicity, honesty, industry and intelligence, he within a few months established relations of complete mutual trust and confidence with the leaders of the Mexican Government.

Morrow's regime had a tremendous effect. Other North American diplomats began to pattern their conduct on his, and gradually a better feeling developed. The Government of the United States slowly but surely liquidated its various remaining adventures in the field of imperialism. The marines were withdrawn from the Dominican Republic, Haiti and Nicaragua. All this heartened us greatly, but we were still uncertain.

* * *

At this time came the event which did most to bring inter-American relations to their present happy state: the first election of Franklin D. Roosevelt as President. We did not know him. We were, in fact, suspicious of him because we remembered that during the World War years he had, as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, played an important role in the American control of Haiti. It was not long, however, after his inauguration that we began to appreciate him for the true anti-imperialist which he is.

The Platt amendment, which prevented Cuba from having all the attributes of a truly independent state, was abrogated. Steps were taken to do away so far as possible with slight vestiges of North American control in Haiti. A new treaty was negotiated with Panama, freeing her from much of the tutelage and special relationship which had made her in effect only a protectorate of the United States. In other words, American imperialism in the Caribbean was, so far as we could see, being in truth rapidly and thoroughly liquidated.

As practical evidence of what his Latin American policy meant and how it was being conducted, President Roosevelt sent to us, at the end of his first year in office, Cordell Hull as head of the American delegation to the Seventh Pan-American Conference, at Montevideo. This gentleman captivated us with the same qualities which had made Dwight Morrow's name a loved one in our countries. We were surprised to find an American Secretary of State not attempting to dominate a Pan-American conference, but instead entering it on terms of equality.

The final touch in proving to us that President Roosevelt visualized Pan-Americanism as real co-operation rather than as a means of enforcing North American domination came when he suggested in personal letters to the Presidents of the other nations that an inter-American conference for the maintenance of peace be held at Buenos Aires, not Washington.

Much can be done at the conference. We have had many Pan-American conferences, and at all of them numerous treaties, conventions and resolutions have been signed—and usually not ratified. We are consequently somewhat cynical as to mere documents. We all fear the danger of war in Europe and have as heartfelt a desire as any North American to keep out of the hostilities if and when they take place. Will it not be possible to present a united front of firm neutrality?

One step which every sincere Latin American friend of the United States hopes for is that in some way the Monroe Doctrine will at this conference be expanded from a unilateral and outdated expression of the paternalistic policy of one nation into an instrument of the entire American continent.

Some Recent Abdications

From Editorial Research Reports.

ABDICATIONS of monarchs in the last several decades have been involuntary. The Russian revolution in March, 1917, forced the Czar to renounce the throne of Russia. For several months, there had been suggestions that he abdicate in favor of his son, with the Czar's brother, the Grand Duke Michael, as regent. But when the revolution proved successful, the ruler's advisers persuaded him that the succession of the Czarevitch would not satisfy the people; also that it would bring danger to the heir apparent. So the Czar abdicated in favor of Grand Duke Michael.

The latter, in addition to other obstacles, was considered declasse for having married a divorced commoner. He felt himself forced in turn to abdicate the next day, without naming a successor; and the Romanov dynasty came to an end.

Defeat in the war impelled the Kaiser to proclaim that he renounced the throne and the Crown Prince the succession. A regency would be established. By adopting this technique before fleeing, the Kaiser evidently hoped to preserve the monarchy, but the German Republic was established.

Similar tactics were employed, also in vain, by the Emperor of Austria-Hungary. He announced that a parliamentary autonomous government would be established, and that he would take no further share in the Government of Austria. But the dual monarchy fell apart, and Austria became a Republic. Hungary retained the monarchy in principle but has placed no occupant on the throne.

* * *

The Sultan of Turkey remained in power for several years after defeat in the World War; then was dispossessed by the establishment of the Turkish Republic. In Bulgaria, the Czar abdicated, but in favor of his eldest son, and the monarchy continued.

During the war, the Allies drove Constantine off the throne of Greece, for trying to remain neutral. They replaced him by the second son, who then declared war on Turkey and Austria-Hungary. When the latter King died, Constantine regained his scepter, but was forced to abdicate again in 1922. He was succeeded by his eldest son, George II, who was dispossessed when the Greek Republic was formed late in 1923. A coup d'etat in 1935 re-established the monarchy and brought George II back to the throne.

When Alfonso was driven out of Spain and the Spanish Republic formed, he explicitly stated that he was not renouncing his legal rights. King Manuel, expelled from Portugal in 1910 when the Republic was established, died in exile in 1932.

Connections which scandalized his people have played a prominent part in the checkered career of King Carol of Rumania. In 1925, Carol surrendered, probably under duress, his succession to the throne in favor of his son Michael. When King Ferdinand died in 1927, Michael became King under a regency, but in 1930 Carol dispossessed his son and took the throne for himself. Parliament declared null and void all acts relating to Carol's abdication.

SHAKESPEARE SAID IT.

Laertes to Ophelia (Hamlet, Act I, Scene) quoted in part by Prime Minister Baldwin in Commons yesterday.

. . . . . His will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unvalu'd persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and the health of the whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscrib'd
Unto the voice and yielding of that body
Whereof he is the head.

Washington Highlights

Election Cows Two Republican Critics of New Deal, but Democrats Glass and Byrd Will Carry on—Berry's Conference.

By Paul Y. Anderson,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.

If the administration is to have an "opposition" during the next Congress, apparently it must come from inside the Democratic party.

Where are two Republican congressional districts which have repeatedly been demonstrated to be "landslide-proof." One is the Twenty-sixth New York. It happens to include Hyde Park, the President's home, and is represented in the House by Hamilton Fish, noted for his work in the Harvard backfield more than 25 years ago, and his more recent attempts to save America from the "Reds." The other is the First Massachusetts District, represented by Allen T. Treadway, who felt that the Hawley-Smoot tariff act failed to give adequate protection to American industry.

Both were re-elected in November. They would have been re-elected in the year of the flood. If there is such a thing in American politics as a "diehard," Fish and Treadway seemed to fill the bill. But listen to them now! They got religion in November. Says Fish: "The Republican party must liberalize or die." He made a radio speech the other night in which he assailed "the privileged classes!" The old Red-baiter appears to be completely demoralized.

As for Treadway, pointing out in rather shocked tones that Roosevelt carried his district, and that he himself, might have been beaten, he announced that he "feels impelled to give consideration to policies sponsored by the President, since apparently my constituents approved them."

However, the case is not altogether hopeless. Glass and Byrd of Virginia will be back. They won't like the New Deal any better next session than they did last, and having no personal political worries, they will continue to say so. In fact, Byrd's forthcoming committee investigation of overlapping, duplicating and unnecessary administrative New Deal agencies probably is the most unpleasant experience which the administration now is facing.

Big-Name Conference With Vague Purpose.

THE purpose of George L. Berry's "Council for Industrial Progress" remains a mystery, despite all the speeches and mimeographed handouts. It appears to be a gathering of small business men who would like to see some form of NRA revived. They derived certain pecuniary benefits from the old NRA, and their wish to regain them is understandable. How this may be done is not so clear. The Constitution and the Supreme Court all are intact.

It may be, of course, that Berry has ideas of his own which have not been publicly disclosed. Officially, he is "co-ordinator for industrial co-operation," by presidential appointment. (That title, incidentally, probably sets a new high for this administration.) In private life he is president of the Printing Pressmen's Union. He is very shrewd and subtle. And is known to have political ambitions.

An Alcoholic Cable That Made History.

A FEW mornings ago a member of the Senate press gallery confessed somewhat shame-facedly to his colleagues that during a moment of alcoholic gallantry the preceding evening he had taken up his telephone and dictated the following cablegram to King Edward:

A few moments later, he said, from somewhere out of the murk came a flash of understanding, and he realized that his message would not be delivered, and there was no use running up his telephone bill. So he called back and canceled the cable.

"Well, you never can tell," one of his colleagues said.

"If you had let it ride you might have altered the course of empire." And he proceeded to recite the following history:

In 1922 the Government of Guatemala, headed by President Carlos Herrera, decided that it needed a loan of $25,000,000. Obviously, New York was the place to get it. When a Latin-American republic sets out to get an American loan it invariably hires an assortment of people. Among those hired upon that occasion was Monta Bell, a Washington newspaper man, who has since become a prominent motion picture director.

The negotiation was successful. A syndicate of five New York banks agreed to make the loan. The Guatemalan Minister and several associates, including Bell, went from Washington to New York to complete the transaction. Success having crowned their efforts, dining and wining on a large scale seemed to be indicated. Emerging from the restaurant at a late hour, they bought a paper, and read that the Government of President Herrera had been overthrown in a coup d'etat led by J. Maria Orellana, and that Herrera and all members of his cabinet were in jail. The horror of the thing dawned on them. Then Bell said:

Rushing into the adjacent telegraph office he dispatched the following cable to Orellana:

Early next day the State Department received this official message from Guatemala City:

WATCHMAN ADMITS $4900 JEWELRY THEFT

Jewelry valued at $4900, stolen from a safe in the office of Chilton Atkinson, attorney, was recovered yesterday with the arrest of Dewey Walk, night watchman in the Merchants-Laclede Building, Fourth and Olive streets, where Atkinson has his office.

Detectives arrested Walk for questioning when they observed him loitering near Franklin avenue pawnshops. They found a diamond ring and stickpin in his possession and Walk told them where he had pawned two other rings.

Atkinson learned of the theft when police informed him they had recovered the stolen jewelry. He told police the jewelry had been in his family for many years and he had had no occasion recently to remove it from the safe.

Walk, police said, admitted taking the jewelry shortly before Thanksgiving day. While making his rounds one night, he said, he noticed that the outer door of Atkinson's safe was open and, searching the office, he found the keys to the inner door in a desk drawer.

He took police to pawnshops where he had borrowed $25 on a three-and-a-half carat diamond ring valued at $2000 and $10 on another ring valued at $1500.

Walk, 38 years old, said he lived at 1127 Wyoming street.

ARKANSAS MELON GROWERS SEEK ADJUSTED FREIGHT RATE

Shipments to Farther Points Than St. Louis Said to Be Unprofitable.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JONESBORO, Ark., Dec. 11.—Sponsored by interested St. Louis produce men, the organization of an Arkansas-Missouri Melon Growers' Co-operative Association to save the watermelon industry in Eastern Arkansas will be attempted within the next few months, according to truck farmers in this section.

The difference in freight rates in Arkansas and Missouri to middle-western markets is to great for melon growers in this State to realize any profit on their crops, they say, and only some arrangement which will enable farmers to truck their melons across the State line and ship by rail from Southeastern Missouri points will save the industry in this section are concerned.

Melon growing was ntroduced in Craghead and Mississippi County last year as an early cash crop, several thousand acres being planted. Until the St. Louis market became flooded farmers were realizing an encouraging profit from their produce, however, shipments to such points as Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City and Pittsburgh resulted in losses because of a change in freight rates inaugurated by the Interstate Commerce Commission which affected Arkansas shipments but not those in Missouri.

COPIES OF WARD DISTRICTING BILL SENT TO ALDERMEN

Measure Eliminates Four Downtown Divisions and Creates New Ones.

Copies of the bill redistricting the city's 28 wards, prepared by the Municipal Initiative League, have been mailed to members of the Board of Aldermen, with the request that the bill be introduced in the board, Harold R. Hay, chairman of the league, announced today.

Hay said that the league plans to start circulating initiative petitions next week to have the redistricting proposal placed on the ballot in the municipal election next April if the Aldermen do not pass the bill or enact an alternative redistricting plan.

The plan prepared by the league involves the elimination of four downtown wards and the creation of four new wards in the northwest and southwest sections of the city, so as to give each of the 28 wards an average of about 15,000 registered voters. At present, the number of registered voters ranges from 8800 in the Fifth Ward downtown to 35,000 in the Twenty-fourth in Southwest St. Louis.

British Woman Novelist Defends Mrs. Simpson

Thinks Empire Would Be Safer If She Were Prime Minister Instead of Baldwin.

By REBECCA WEST,
British Novelist.

(In a Letter to the British Publication Time and Tide.)

LONDON, Dec. 10.—Some time ago King Edward formed a close friendship with Mrs. Ernest Simpson who is described as undesirable only by those who have never met her.

She is in fact an obviously sensible, practical, dignified and kindly person. She has many friends who are themselves worthy of respect and don't have contemptible intimates.

She and her friendship with the King have been described by the foreign press in terms of extreme vulgarity but that vulgarity resides in the eye of the beholder.

A short time ago Mrs. Simpson's husband left her and it's a matter of common knowledge that she was extremely disconcerted by this event. After she took the divorce proceedings, the King's behavior became recognizably that of a man who sees the woman he loves about to be freed from the bonds which have till then kept her from him.

Silent on Marriage.

But we've yet to learn of any word or gesture of Mrs. Simpson which betrayed a corresponding intention to make any such use of her freedom. It would be quite safe to challenge the Government to produce any statement made by Mrs. Simpson before the crisis to the effect that she intended to accept the King's proposal of marriage.

I think it would even be safe to challenge the Government to produce any statement made by Mrs. Simpson before the crisis to the effect she ever even received a proposal of marriage from the King.

That's the situation before the crisis as it was well known to that section of the world that had an opportunity of knowing about it. Then came the crisis: A disgusting performance.

The Bishop of Bradford felt called upon to administer an impertinent reproof to the King in public for his alleged indifference to the sacraments. There are conventional, decent methods of approaching the King on spiritual matters.

Condemns Newspapers.

For a reason that's not explained, a group of provincial newspapers, instead of rebuking the Bishop for his disorderly conduct, chose to pervert his remarks into comments on the King's friendship with Mrs. Simpson.

There is obviously every reason why the same forces in the newspaper world which protected the King from impudent intrusions into his private life should come down on these newspapers with a heavy hand.

But on the contrary, the Government rushed into the arena and proceeded to spill just as many beans as it could and those as poisonous as possible. The whole press came out in rash, Government-inspired statements that the King had asked his Government to devise a new law by which he might marry Mrs. Simpson morganatically.

These were followed day in and day out by leaders commenting on Mrs. Simpson's unfitness to be Queen, which were guaranteed to make the King stick to his point unless he had the spirit of a louse.

There have also been these tense scenes in the House, where there had been etched on the public mind the picture of a rash, unbalanced King attempting to disrupt the Empire by disregarding the advice of his wise, patient Ministers.

Suggests Another Course.

Now what can be the reason for this loathsome, dangerous exhibition? Well, we're told the King had asked his Ministers to devise a legal formula for his marriage to Mrs. Simpson. But if he did, why did that have to be published any more than any other conversation between the King and his Ministers?

The Ministers had a plain easy task. They simply could say that such a formula couldn't be found; if the King said he'd then marry Mrs. Simpson unmorganatically, they had simply to remind him that for the next five months she would be still married to Mr. Simpson, that he'd better not talk too loud or she'd be married to Mr. Simpson forever.

The King could have made no repartee to that. He could have done nothing. He couldn't even have threatened anything. He would have had to wait five months; that's a useful period in the progress of passion from urgency to the wisdom of endurance.

Moreover, five months at this stage of our history would have given very painful demonstrations of the existence of national problems beside which all private problems look small indeed. There never was any case in which delay was more likely to have been helpful than this; particularly as Mrs. Simpson had shown no sign whatsoever of eagerness for the dangerous event.

Nothing in fact could have been more gratuitous than this performance; nothing could have been more dangerous, since royalty must necessarily have the psychology of a spoiled child.

"Baldwin Not Wise."

So let's face it: Mr. Baldwin hasn't been a wise statesman. He's blabbered and dithered. It was certainly not the King who wished his marriage to be discussed publicly; since he'd hesitated to discuss such matters privately at that stage, this public discussion must have been an inflaming outrage.

Can Mr. Baldwin have had one motive for so doing that wasn't purely idiotic? And if we get involved in a difficult international situation, will he deal with it in the same fantastic ineptitude?

It may be unwise for Mrs. Simpson to be Queen; but I am sure the British empire would be safer than it is if Mrs. Simpson were Prime Minister.

MANUFACTURERS ARE CONCILIATORY TOWARD NEW DEAL

Adopt Declaration Promising in General Terms to Co-Operate With Administration.

DENOUNCED ITS ACTS LAST YEAR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The National Association of Manufacturers closed its annual convention here yesterday after adopting a declaration of principles drawn up by a committee headed by S. Clay Williams, North Carolina tobacco manufacturer and former National Administrator of NRA.

The annual declaration, which last year denounced the national administration as tending to "a reactionary and coercive system," closed this year with these words: "Industry seeks an era of good feeling."

In general terms, it opposed child labor without offering support, however, to specific pending proposals to outlaw it by constitutional amendment; promised industry would "continue to do its full part to provide work for those not yet absorbed by private industry as far as manufacturing capacity and demand will permit," and pledged "co-operation with government in the promotion of economic and social progress."

A government unemployment census dividing those willing and able to work and the unemployables was requested.

Other Recommendations.

Among other points in the declaration were:

A statement that average individual wages had increased from 9 cents an hour in 1850 "to the highest in our history today."

A reaffirmation that the greatest progress is possible "under a competitive private enterprise profit and loss system."

Opposition to "any monopoly in production, distribution or labor."

Condemnation of "any undesirable practices and abuses in industry," with a pledge of "vigilance to bring about their correction."

Promised co-operation toward a study by business and other economic groups of "the whole field of recurring depressions and business cycles in an endeavor to curb and mitigate" them.

Asserted "the true function of proper government, as declared by the founders of the American system, is to protect the individual in the exercise of his rights."

Government Competition.

Declared "Government competion with private industry is injurious and unsound," expressed doubt "that the Federal Social Security Act will attain the very human goal of individual security it seeks," while announcing in "favor of creating economic security for each citizen without limitation of his individual opportunities and responsibilities for creating such security for himself."

Affirmed "the right of labor to seek, secure and retain employment without regard to membership or non-membership in any organization and to bargain, without interference or coercion by anyone, either collectively or individually. We believe in the correlative right of the employer to be free from coercion by anyone."

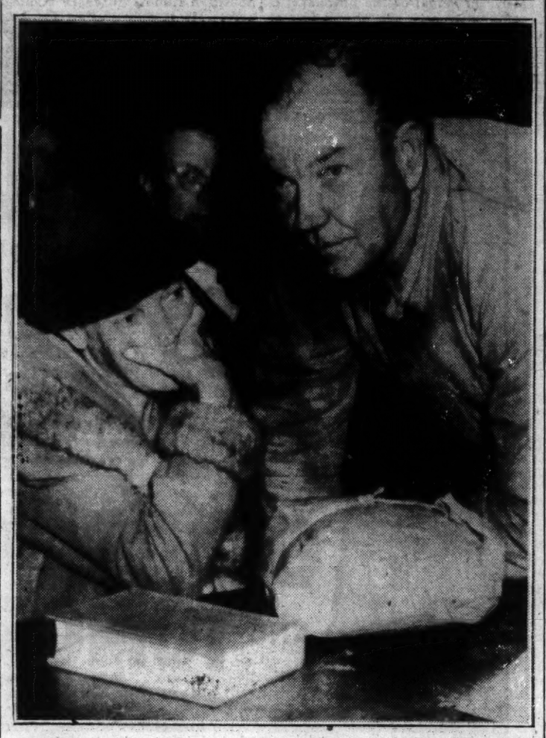

Said corporate "reserves are indispensable to progress and stability and as such should be encouraged and fostered."

Declared the Government had a "constitutional responsibility to keep open the channels of international commerce."

Howard I. Young, St. Louis, president of the American Zinc, Lead & Smelting Co., was elected to the board of directors.

Edgar M. Queeny, president of the Monsanto Chemical Co., St. Louis, is also a director.

ENGLAND'S EDWARDS GENERALLY UNHAPPY

Stories of Kings Who Have Borne the Name Since Tenth Century.

By the Associated Press.

The lot of England's Edwards generally has been an unhappy one.

Edward the Elder, thrice-married King of the Angles and Saxons (died 924), won his throne after overcoming bitter oppositon and had to fight during much of his reign to hold it.

Edward the Confessor, King of the English (died 1066), was known for his sanctity more than for regal qualities. His preference for foreigners over Englishmen resulted in intrigue and a revolt he could not crush. His failure so deeply humiliated him that he died.

Edward I (died 1307) was an exception. Tall and handsome, he was proud of his love of justice, his blameless home life and his devotion to reform. He convoked the first forerunner of the modern Parliament and removed feudalism from England's political life. Twice he subdued Scottish revolts, but, at the age of 70, when he took the field against Robert Bruce, it was too much for him. His chief ambition had been to conquer Scotland.

Son Forced to Give Up Throne.

His son, Edward II of Carnarvon (died 1327) had little confidence in himself and cared for nothing except amusements. Quarrels with the aristocracy finally compelled him to stand aside while the realm was governed by a baronial committee of 21.

There were court intrigues. Edward II, vainly attempting to escape to sea, was captured, imprisoned and forced to renounce his throne.

Edward III (died 1377), who succeeded his father, was inspired to emulate his grandfather's example. He scored military triumphs in Scotland and France, but tragedy marked his rule. The Black Death scourged England in 1348 and recurred twice during his reign, in 1362 and 1369. Late in life, after many knightly campaigns, he fell under the spell of Alice Perrers, a greedy mistress. She aided John of Gaunt to obtain influence with his father and abuse it.

A King Secretly Married.

Edward IV. (died in 1483) head of the House of York during the Wars of the Roses, won his throne by force and almost certainly ordered the murder of his saintly but incompetent pedecessor, Henry VI, to get it. Secretly wedded to Elizabeth, daughter of Lord Rivers, Edward was forced to flee when the Earl of Warwick, once an ally, turned against him. He returned and rewon his throne, but his last years were given to overindulgences.

Edward V (died 1483) was England's tragic boy King. When his father, Edward IV, died, the throne was engulfed in a fierce struggle for power. Richard, Duke of Gloucester, the boy's paternal uncle and guardian, fought Earl Rivers, the King's maternal uncle. To fortify his grip, Gloucester imprisoned Edward V and a younger brother of the King in the Tower of London and had them both murdered, smothered to death under pillows while they slept.

Edward VI Died Young.

Edward VI (died 1553) was the frail son of Jane Seymour, third wife of Henry VIII. In feeble health, he took the throne when he was only 9 years old and died prematurely.

Edward VII (died 1910), the son of Queen Victoria, did not ascend the throne until he was 60, for his mother's 63-year rule was the longest in Britain's history. He was the father of the late King George V. and the grandfather of Edward VIII. Edward VII, who made many diplomatic tours, was known as "the peace maker" and was a strength in his own government. But he loved the gay life.

Edward VIII was the first British monarch to abdicate the throne voluntarily.

Deposit of $24,174 by the Missouri Pacific Railroad in a bank in Mexico, D. F., to guarantee payment of Mexican income tax was authorized yesterday by United States District Judge George H. Moore.

Trustee Guy A. Thompson, seeking authority to make the deposit, said the tax had been assessed on account of earnings of the company's equipment which runs through to the Mexican capital, and that it was his intention to resist payment through court action. It was necessary, he added, to make the deposit to avoid levy on the road's equipment in Mexico pending determination of validity of the assessment.

COUNCIL ON BUSINESS ADVOCATES WAGE LAW

Directs Committee to Incorporate Provision in Recommendations for Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Council for Industrial Progress decided today that "Private industry cannot safely be permitted to administer business and industry entirely free from governmental intervention."

After adopting this general policy, the council turned over to a committee of business men and labor representatives the task of drafting legislation designed to prevent depressions and to speed current industrial gains. The council is meeting at the invitation of George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's Co-ordinator for Industrial Co-operation.

The form of the proposed legislation was left to the committee, but the council directed that it should cover "a minimum wage in industry and the payment of substantial overtime rates for hours worked in excess of a reasonable work week."

The legislation, the council stipulated ,should curb unfair competitive practices and provide for a permanent business advisory council.

Edward A. Filens, Boston merchant, told the council, "We must concentrate on the job of raising the standard of living throughout America . . . We must organize to eliminate unemployment. We must find a way of excluding from our ranks anyone whose business practices tend to produce unemployment, anyone, for instance, who does not pay sufficiently high wages to enable his employes to do their share of buying."

"WE LIKE A&P BREAD 'CAUSE IT TASTES SO GOOD"

THESE TWO YOUNGSTERS HAVE THE RIGHT IDEA. THEY EAT A&P BREAD BECAUSE THEY LIKE IT!

1 "Nobody can fool us about eating. We know what's good, and we think A&P Bread is grand."

2 "Parents are funny folk. They wanted us to eat bread 'cause it was good for us. But the bread mother bought was sort of stale and flat-tasting."

3 "Then, one day, Mom brought home a loaf of A&P Bread. It smelled so good, and looked so good, and tasted so good, we ate four slices apiece at the first meal."

4 "Now we eat A&P Bread all the time. Mom's glad because she says it's good for us, but we don't eat it for that reason, we eat A&P Bread because it tastes so good."

And there's a reason why A & P Bread is tastier, fresher, smoother! It's made of only the finest ingredients money can buy—blended and baked by master A&P Bakers. Try a loaf today! We know you'll agree it's a tastier, fresher, better bread—and one that costs you less money, too!

Parachutes Making People Of Tiflis, Russia, Airminded

From a Manchester Guardian Correspondent.

TIFLIS, Russia.—Past my window a big white object fluttered down into the crowded center of Tiflis. I rubbed my eyes. "Did you see that parachute?" I said. But no one would believe me until I made them look at what I had seen. Only a few hundred yards away, in a clearing among the houses, stood a tower, a wooden and steel erection looking like a Meccano model. From the crane at its top hung a large parachute, and soon, from the little penthouse under the crane, we watched a man emerge, his hurtling body disappearing behind the houses in a flash.

That evening, in the Park of Rest and Culture, we investigated another of these aids to airmindedness—though their popularity is an odd way of showing one's trust in the Soviet Air Force. The Georgian youth who seemed in the casual sort of way to be its custodian ran up the wooden steps and showed us how to do it. You stand in the little manhole at the top, and the music and lights from the Park seem suddenly to be far away; the rent in the fabric, which gives it that real Russian look, takes on alarming proportions; the 100-foot drop looks 200—but still, perhaps, no Englishman has done it before, at least not in Transcaucasia. You strap on the supporters round shoulder and waist, stand on the edge, and prepare, like a magician of old, to experience the sensation of flight by leaping from a high tower.

This leap into the night is the worst part. You cannot help clutching the straps and hoping that they will not cut you too much; you remember tales of Russian inefficiency; you wonder how your friends at the bottom will inform your relatives. Then, closing your eyes and bending your knees, you jump. For a few age-long moments you are falling, feet first but fast, and then the parachute fills, your straps pull you up, not too jarringly, and you are floating down into the hands of the attendants. They unstrap you, the parachute is hauled up by crane and it is ready for the next foolhardy or patriotic sky-pilot.

All for a Rouble.

It seemed a great adventure, but the Georgians, strolling round in their clean white tunics or sitting and watching you from the seats below, take it quite for granted. For a rouble they can experience the same sensation whenever they like. Can and do. In the train a young Russian woman had expressed surprise that we had not yet done any parachuting. Still, a drink seemed welcome just then, in spite of the prohibitive price of a glass of beer (1.60 roubles, or about 1s. 6d. for us) or of vodka (two or three roubles). We sat in a smart cafe which looked out on to a square where the proletariat were dancing most respectably to capitalist fox-trots, slowly and earnestly and badly. But the Georgians seem to take their pleasures as sadly as the English. Even the vast portrait of Stalin in the role of family man beaming away at his daughter as he gives her a toy does not inspire them with cheerfulness. The Rest and the Culture are all taken seriously.

On our way back we lost the tram route. The talkative tram conductor, who had left his machine to guide us to the park, was gone. People were friendly, but our Russian was poor. Suddenly a small, bright-eyed boy, dark and good-looking, who in England would have been in bed four hours back, appeared out of nowhere, talking fluent German. With the pride of a 12-year-old burdened with great responsibilities he led us through Tiflis, talking all the time. He was a Tartar, the son of an engineer who worked at Baku. Five languages he spoke with ease, German, Russian, Armenian, Georgian, and Tartar. As a matter of fact, most young men of Tiflis know three of the last four tongues. His German, though he learned it for as much as two hours a day, was astonishingly fluent. His class included girls, but the other boys, he said sadly, did not mix with them. The inference was obvious. He wanted to know whether England was far away, farther than Moscow, and whether we played many games, but otherwise he was content to answer our questions. He accepted postage stamps, foreign coins, and a visiting card with the greatest glee, but what really attracted him was the news (not entirely accurate) that one of us was a famous footballer. The signed photograph of this man will presumably take an honored place among that small boy's dearest treasures, unless it is put in the school museum with the stamps. No other payment would he take, and with a cheerful "Auf Wiedersehen" he disappeared into the night as he had come.

People Very Friendly.

The Caucasian peoples are very friendly, if only you can understand their various tongues. Our small Tartar friend from Tiflis talked in German; in Ordonjonikidze, the fast-growing town at the other end of the Georgian Military Highway, which straddles the Caucasus, neither German nor even Russian carries one far, but the read friendliness of the people breaks down language barriers. In an underground eating-house we were treated by two economics students of 22 to vodka and its usual accompaniment of sliced onion and tomato, at what must have been a large expenditure to them. The little stone-floored room, bare of rug or ornament save only the inescapable portrait of Lenin, was full of rough faces, which, through the haze of garlic and bad tobacco, looked absurdly reminiscent of Low's "Bolsheviks." But one, a handsome young engineer from Kiev, could speak halting German, and when the news got round that some English from the Intourist hotel had actually come so far from the usual tourist haunts, they went out of their way to be friendly.

First they sang to us, mournful catches of Slav melancholy which were hard to follow but impossible to ignore. They then played on piano and fiddle, and then a bearded Cossack in white tunic and black sheepskin hat rose up from one of the tables and showed us a Caucasian dance. Putting tremendous energy into it, his body flew up and down, his feet twinkling, but his arms folded motionless. Wilder and wilder grew the pace, but only after a time when any Englishman would have dropped exhausted did he slacken and stop. Later came a more "respectable" dance, an American fox-trot of dubious rhythm, at which a square-necked, red-jawed man in a cloth cap insisted on dancing with an English girl in spite of her hobnailed shoes. To dance with no less a person than the Secretary of all the Transport Workers in the capital of the North Ossetian Soviet Republic is an experience not given to many Englishwomen.

Difficult Conversation.

All the men present, and there were no Russian women there, were, as far as we could understand them, firm adherents of the Soviet regime, though they admitted that it had been unpopular at first and that prices were still too high. But there was one exception, the little wizened fellow who played the piano in the two-man orchestra. He was an oldish man, shabbily dressed and wearing a moujik cap, his eyes sunk deep in a clever face, lined and wrinkled like the sand in a dried-up water channel. Hesitantly he sidled up to us and asked: "You speak English?" So far, so good, but further conversation was not to easy. Rather was it like grappling with a deficient penny-in-the-slot machine. Each of our questions had to be written down in English. Next came a long interval for thought, and then, as often as not, an answer spoken in perfectly intelligible English. But no other procedure produced any effect. The reason was soon revealed. He had learnt English by correspondence course from Moscow, had never heard it spoken, and had only once or twice had any opportunity of speaking it. His crowning ambition was to come to England. An Armenian from Rostov-on-Don, he had, like many others of his race, come to Ordonjonikidze after the war, but he found life very hard and prices high; and he said, surprisingly frankly: "I am not a supporter of the Soviet."

Only one other person in all Georgia did I find who was bold enough to express disapproval to us, and that was an old woman who stopped us as we were entering our hotel. She told us in German that everything was "ganz schrecklich," that she had not enough food or clothes, and that the winters were horrible. "Your hotel is all very fine," said she, "and so are these main streets, but you go round the corner and look at the back streets. You'll see!" Confident that her complaints would pass unnoticed in a foreign tongue, she moved off into the crowd. But her warning served as some corrective to the unmistakable and inescapable impression of progress, material, moral, and intellectual, which strikes one in these Caucasian republics. To see a grown man spelling out a child's reading book in the street is a comic but at the same time a most inspiring sight. The new generation of Caucasians, with their parachutes and dancing and higher education, will not be the "noble savages" that their grandfathers were.

. . . And when buying WHISKEY look for two things on the label

1. THE TYPE OF WHISKEY . . . BLEND OR STRAIGHT
2. THE "PROOF" . . .

These statements on the label are dependable guides to the kind of whiskey you want.

In a straight whiskey, "proof" is a most important thing to look for. It's the measure of strength and, hence, a measure of value. But some people assume that a straight whiskey at full strength, 100 proof, lacks smoothness.

Every rule has its exceptions. We believe . . . and ever-mounting sales seem to prove . . . that Old Mr. Boston Straight Whiskey is a notable exception . . . a full, 100 proof Straight Whiskey that is as honey-smooth as any straight whiskey you have ever tasted.

Buy a bottle of 100 proof straight whiskey tonight for extra value . . . and for extra smoothness be sure to ask for Old Mr. Boston.

JERSEY COUNTY MAN'S FARM REFUGE FOR PHEASANTS, DUCKS

The largest flock of pheasants in Jersey County, Illinois, is on the farm of Louis Spatz, in Elsah Township, and the presence of so many, State conservation officials say, is an example of what good game management may accomplish.

Spatz prohibits hunting of any kind on his land. A tract of sweet clover, at least 20 to 30 acres, is allowed to stand, and furnishes covering. The clover is preferred above all other types of cover if the acts of the pheasants on the farm are to be taken as a criterion. In addition, Spatz permits at least five acres of corn to remain unhusked close to the clover patch. This supplies adequate feed during the winter, and when good weather prevails in the spring, Spatz harvests what is left.

Several deep lakes on the farm furnish a never-failing source of water for all types of wild life. In the vicinity of these, Spatz always has a large number of water foul. Wild ducks may be found almost any time of the year, and in winter only the most severe weather conditions will cause them to leave.

COMMANDER COLMERY TALKS ON PROGRAM FOR PEACE

The American Legion program for peace was presented last night by National Commander Harry W. Colmery in an address at Municipal Auditorium. The plan was threefold: an adequate national defense, a strict policy of neutrality in other nations' quarrels, a universal service law, providing for conscription of capital as well as men, to take the profit out of war.

"With these principles," Colmery concluded, "we believe that peace can be maintained without sacrifice of honor, prestige or the rights of a sovereign nation."

The outspoken commander from Topeka, Kan., who in previous public utterances has not hesitated to criticise certain activities of American Legion posts, was introduced by Gov.-elect Lloyd C. Stark. His address followed a dinner at the Statler Hotel, attended by officers of St. Louis and Missouri Legion organiaztions. During the day he visited Veterans' Hospital, Jefferson Barracks, and the National Cemetery.

CENTURY'S SCIENTISTS ANSWER AMERICA'S APPEAL FOR A TRULY FINE WHISKEY

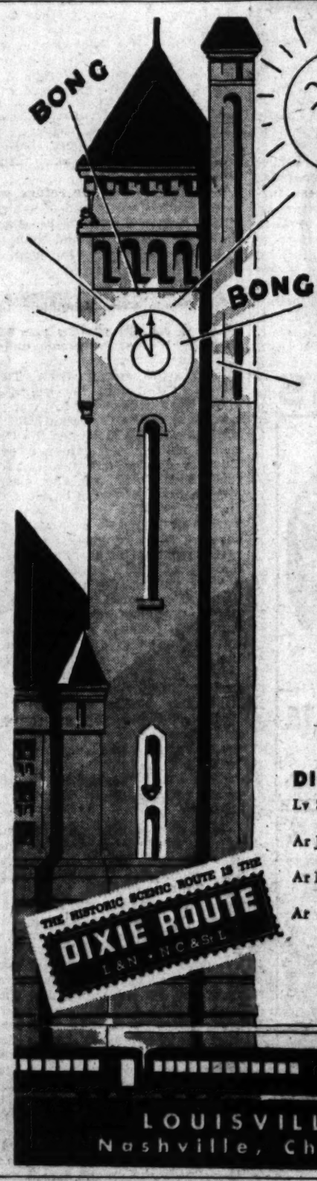

Fusel-Oils Reduced

YES—driven out by Century's exclusive degerminating process that reduces fusel-oils to a minimum. The result—a fine clean whiskey of superb flavor, exquisite bouquet and kindly disposition. Century Club is the scientists' answer to America's appeal for a truly fine, fully matured whiskey.

Note: The photograph at the top shows the grain in Century's modern, sunlight distillery, entering the "breakers" where the germ of the grain, high in fusel-oil forming proteins and oils, is separated from the starchy, liquor producing parts. The scientific way is the right way to make good whiskey.

FRA TO SEEK $100,000,000 FOR FARMERS IN DROUTH AREAS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—The Federal Resettlement Administration officials said today they would ask Congress to authorize loans for farmers in drouth areas to help place them on a self-supporting basis.

Present resettlement funds, they said, would last until Feb. 1, and would provide only emergency relief in the form of direct grants for the 148,085 farm families now on the rolls and the 250,000 to be turned over to them within a few weeks by the Works Progress Administration.

Milo Perkins, in charge of the resettlement drouth relief program, said between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000 would be needed for the proposed loan plan. The loans would enable the destitute families to keep a cow, some chickens, a horse, and plant crops.

Perkins said the Resettlement Administration planned to take over from WPA the following in drouth areas: South Dakota, 42,000; North Dakota, 32,000; Wisconsin, 28,500; Missouri, 20,000; Minnesota, 14,000; Nebraska, 12,500, Kansas 10,500; Kentucky, 9800, and Iowa, 4300. These total 173,600 families.

Perkins said the others to be aided—about 75,000 families—would range from a few hundred to several thousand in Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Montana, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, South Carolina, Virginia and Wyoming.

Named Head of New Hampshire U.

DURHAM, N. H., Dec. 11.—Dr. Fred Englehardt, 51 years old, a graduate of Yale and now professor of educational administration at the University of Minnesota, will become president of the University of New Hampshire in the spring. He was elected yesterday by the university trustees.

Barges to House CCC Camp for Work at Duck Refuge

Only "Floating" Unit in Country, Officials Say—Land Camp Was Previous Quarters at White River Sanctuary.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JONESBORO, Ark., Dec. 11.—Living on barges fitted up for their accommodation, Civilian Conservation Corps workers will begin work next week in the 110,000-acre White River duck refuge in Eastern Arkansas. More than 160 CCC enrolees have arrived and will take up their residence on the barges.

Due to the swampy condition in the refuge, it was decided to make the unit a floating CCC camp, the only one of its kind in the United States. By use of barges, officials said they would be able to cover greater territory in a much shorter and more convenient time.

Containing approximately 110,000 acres, the refuge is a harbor for thousands of ducks and geese during the fall, winter and spring when the birds beat their way between their breeding and wintering grounds. It is nearly 30 miles long and four miles wide, covering a sector of the White River and its many bayous a few miles before they empty in the Arkansas River. It extends over Monroe, Arkansas, Phillips and Desha counties.

Work in the refuge has been carried on for more than a year by CCC workers, but, previous to this time, they have worked from a land camp. Much progress has already been made, officials announce. During the winter feed is distributed at various points in the argea for the birds. The Biological Survey, which has worked in co-operation with the CCC, has sponsored the sowing of such grain crops as rice, soy beans, kaffir corn, sorghum and other duck and geese foods.

Workers of the CCC have worked steadily td stabilize water levels in the refuge, although little can be done to lower the level of White River, due to the pressure from the Mississippi, engineers state.

Some 130 fresh water ponds are located within the area. Major problems of hydraulic engineering are involved and the CCC workers digging sluices and building dams are learning the nature of these problems at first hand.

Aquatic vegetation is being planted on the lakes after the willows and other marginal vegetation has been cleared away. That ducks and geese have already discovered the work that is being done to protect them is shown by the thousands that flock to the area during the fall and spring months. Biological Survey officials state that the refuge has also become a harbor for deer, herons, kingfishers, muskrats and other wild fowl and game.

When completed, the refuge will be a key link to a chain of sanctuaries which will extend the length of the Mississippi flyway from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico.

Nazis Abolish Sausage Skins.

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—Transparent wrapping materials will be Germany's substitute for sausage skin when Adolf Hitler's four-year plan for self-sufficiency is put into effect. The saving on imported sausage skins, amounting to 40,000,000 marks annually, will prevent a pork shortage, according to Der Angriff. "Hot dogs" and Bavaria's fried sausages, however, will upset these plans, for substitutes are no good for them.

KIRK L. KELLER HEADS HORTICULTURAL GROUP

'Show Me System' of Pruning Apple Trees Explained at State Meeting.

Kirk L. Keller of Creve Coeur was elected president of the Missouri Horticultural Society at the concluding session of its seventy-ninth annual convention yesterday at Hotel Melbourne.

Keller, who is 35 years old, since his graduation from the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, has been associated with his father, James T. Keller, treasurer of the Pulitzer Publishing Co., as manager of their fruit farm at Creve Coeur. The 117-acre farm includes 80 acres of orchard and 4000 trees.

Fred Turner, Neosho, was chosen vice-president and W. R. Martin Jr., Columbia, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. The retiring president is George W. Hunt of St. Joseph.

Show-Me System.

T. J. Talbert, a member of the College of Agriculture faculty at the University of Missouri, explained to orchardists what he described as the "common sense or show-me system" of pruning apple trees, developed at the agricultural experiment station at Columbia.

The method, he said, is not claimed as new, but takes advantage of all practices and systems previously used. Quality and quantity of production, rather than the appearance or beauty of the tree, is the aim.

"In general," Talbert said, "fruit trees should be allowed to assume their natural shape and pruning may be confined profitably to the judicious removal of dead, weak, crowded, superfluous and rangy branches. During the first five years of a tree's growth, corrective pruning is done largely by thinning out thick clusters and interfering or competing branches. An effort is made to select fairly wide angle scaffold branches, shaped six to 12 inches up and down and around the trunk.

Pruning After Bearing.

"After the trees come into bearing," Talbert explained, "pruning is confined to the thin unproductive wood in the interior shaded and lower parts. Occasionally, it is necessary to shorten rangy branches, thin thick clusters and cut cross branches. The cutting should proceed moderately."

Since 1920, Talbert said, plantings show a trend toward the new and more popular varieties of apples in response to consumer demand. More than 50 per cent of trees in commercial orchards planted since 1920, he added, are Delicious, Jonathan, Staymen Winesap, Winesap, Golden Delicious or McIntosh.

Federal farm census figures were cited to show that there had been a "marked decrease" in the number of apple trees. In 1935 reports showed there were 100,054,047 apple trees, of which about one-sixth were non-bearing. An average of 1.5 bushels was produced by each bearing tree in 1934, when total production was 124,236,768 bushels. Washington, with 30,997,021 bushels, produced about one-fourth of the 1934 crop and New York, where 13,555,726 bushels were grown, was second among the states in production, although first in the number of trees.

Other speakers included G. M. Darrow of the United States Bureau of Plant Industry, and W. W. Magill, Lexington, Ky.

Missing Hired Man Who Said Woman, 33, Was Visiting Friends, Sought by Sheriff.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 11.—The body of Mrs. Arthur C. Utterback, 33 years old, wife of a Wichita Federal Land Bank auditor, was found today in a pit on the Utterback farm, near Mulvane, by the Sheriff and deputies.

The Sheriff immediately ordered a search for a hired man who disappeared from the Utterback farm Wednesday night after telling Mrs. Utterback's stepsister, Harriet Gilbert, 13, the woman had gone to Wichita with friends.

The body was found in a deep hole dug by former tenants of the Utterback farm for a tank.

Utterback, informed last night by telephone of his wife's disappearance, was thought to be on his way here by plane from St. Paul, Minn., where he went last week on business, after hiring the man to take care of the farm.

GUARANTEED RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Common constipation is usually due to meals low in "bulk." Pills and drugs give only temporary relief. The sensible thing to do is to put "bulk" back into your meals.

Millions of people get this needed "bulk" in a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Its "bulk" is much like that in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.

Some years ago, an investigation was made among thousands of ALL-BRAN users. 98 per cent found it satisfactory. Only 2 per cent had the type of constipation that would not respond to ALL-BRAN.

ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as cereal or in cooked dishes. ALL-BRAN is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

The reserve championship prize was won by 15-year-old Janet Witte of Collinsville, Ill., who entered an 880-pound Aberdeen Angus, "Tom." Miss Witte, student of the Collinsville Township High School and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Witte, won first prize in the same show last year.

Morgan, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Morgan, will receive a total of $135 in prizes for his calf, which won first prize in the 1000 and 1150 pound Angus class at the recent International Stock Show at Chicago. Miss Witte will receive a total of $80 in prizes. All entries were to be auctioned off today in the stockyards ring.

The show, sponsored by the St. Louis Livestock Exchange, was open to all youths between the ages of 7 and 20. Their entries were required to be between 9 and 18 months old. Most of the youths were members of 4-H clubs or vocational agricultural students from Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Arkansas.

In awarding prizes, each of the three breeds, Aberdeen Angus, Herefords and Shorthorn, were divided into two classes—Class A for under 940 pounds and Class B for all under 940 pounds and Class B for ranged from $25 for first prize to $2 for fifteenth prize.

MAN SOUGHT FOR KILLING WIFE AND GIRL ENDS LIFE

Sherman Long, Canton, O., Found Dead in Rooming House at Mount Clemens, Mich.

By the Associated Press.

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich., Dec. 11.—Search for Sherman Long, 64 years old, which began when his wife and his stepdaughter were found murdered in their Canton (O.) home a week ago, ended today with the discovery of his body in a lodging house here.

Police said Long had killed himself with a pistol, muffling the shot by wrapping the weapon in a handkerchief. A note asked that a sister, in Creston, O., be notified. It made no mention of the fatal clubbing of his wife and the shooting of her 18-year-old daughter, Virginia Hensen, for which he had been sought.

Long came to Mount Clemens last Saturday. Police said he probably killed himself Wednesday night. He was a retired farmer and real estate dealer, and had been married five times, Canton police said.

Milwaukee Paper Says Group of Regents Has Advised University President to Resign.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 11.—The Milwaukee Sentinel says a powerful bloc of regents has notified Glenn Frank "The time has come for him to step out as president of the University of Wisconsin."

"For nearly a year—ever since Gov. La Follette's five appointments to the board of regents gave control of that body to progressives—it has been general knowledge that Dr. Frank's days as president were numbered," the Sentinel says.

The newspaper says it was definitely learned that just prior to the regents' meeting yesterday a delegation of the anti-Frank bloc conferred with him and advised him to resign.

Miss Dana Jones, a teacher who was in charge of the rehearsal, said Charles Cochrane, also 16, and a member of the cast, picked up a revolver used in the play and pointed it at Thomas. The gun fired and Thomas slumped to the floor of the stage, Miss Jones said.

The teacher said the shooting was accidental and that "everyone thought the gun was unloaded."

NYA GUIDANCE COURSES TO AID IN JOB FINDING

National Director Buckner Announces Cities in State Where Classes Will Be Held.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 11.—A new program for steering young people into private employment will be begun this month in 11 Missouri cities, C. C. Buckner, National Youth Administration, Missouri supervisor has announced. Intended specifically for those now on work projects of the NYA, the program is open to any young person, the announcement said.

Cities where the guidance courses will be conducted are: Springfield, Joplin, Sikeston, Rolla, Flat River, Sedalia, Hannibal, St. Joseph, Moberly, Kansas City and St. Louis. Buckner said five or six other cities would be added later. To get the course under way, a series of 10 meetings will be held in each location, where qualifications and opportunities of several occupations will be discussed.

Persons taking the course will be enrolled after their education, interests, abilities and work experience have been recorded. In the last year approximately 1500 persons went into private employment from their connection with the State NYA program and with the cooperation of employment services, Buckner said.

CANVASS AMONG EMPLOYES FOR FR. DEMPSEY CHARITIES

The committee in charge of the annual campaign for funds for Father Dempsey's Charities is seeking the co-operation of business establishments in arranging for circulation of subscription blanks among employes.

Samuel W. Fordyce, campaign chairman, said the committee was unable to make a general canvass for donations because no solicitors were employed and that wide circulation by mail would be too expensive. Firms desiring to co-operate may obtain subscription blanks by telephoning campaign headquarters, CHestnut 9217.

WRONG TITLE FOR SHERIFF

Fitzsimmonsh Gets State Commission as Assessor.

When the commissions for St. Louis officials, elected Nov. 3, were received by the Board of Election Commissioners from the Secretary of State yesterday, it was discovered that a commision had been issued to Sheriff-elect James J. Fitzsimmons as Assessor of St. Louis, instead of Sheriff.

The City Assessor of St. Louis is not an elective official, but is appointed by the Mayor. Fitzsimmon's commission was returned to the Secretary of State for correction.

ORDERS $7,500,000 TAX PAID

Minnesota Supreme Court Rules Against 26 Mining Companies.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 11.—The Minnesota Supreme Court upheld today an $88,000,000 valuation for tax purposes of Northern Minnesota mining properties. It ruled that 20 companies must pay $7,500,000 in back taxes withheld pending decision. Valuations were reduced on two properties.

The mining companies, including 15 United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries, contended the assessed valuations were too high. The State contended they were too low. Both parties appealed from a District Court decision which set the valuation at $88,000,000.

WPA Staff at Moberly Reduced.

MOBERLY, Mo., Dec. 11.—Seven stenographers and clerks at the district WPA offices here are being laid off in a movement to reduce administrative costs. Two others previously employed in the local office have been transferred from there to posts as supervising timekepeers on WPA projects in the district. With removal of the nine persons from the office, 39 persons now are left employed at the office, which has supervision over 13 counties in Northeast Missouri. Jim Holman is district director.

Brick Thrown Through Window.

A brick was thrown through a window at a beauty shop at 4589 Easton avenue last night, causing $25 damage. Police quoted the proprietor, Herbert Killough, to the effect that he had heard rumors he was to have trouble because he had cut prices.

U. S. ENGINEERS' BOATS TIE UP FOR WINTER AT CAPE ROCK

Old Harbor South of Cape Girardeau No Longer Suitable, Due to Change in Channel.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Dec. 11.—Cape Rock, historic river mark just north of Cape Girardeau, is to be the sheltering place for the First Field Area of U. S. Engineers for the coming winter.

The old harbor south of the city is no longer suitable or safe for wintering, as the revetment work has thrown the channel of the Mississippi River to the Missouri side. In case of heavy ice, as last winter, the boats would be in danger in the lower harbor.

There are about 50 boats of all kinds tied up at Cape Rock, and more are expected as soon as bad weather and floating ice make their appearance. The boats now in the harbor have been in use doing river work that has been stopped until spring. Some of the boats that will come in later will be from St. Louis and other points on the river. River workers who have been on the boats for the summer are now housed in the city, and only a watchman stays with the fleet.

FEDERAL CHURCH COUNCIL ASSAILS EXCESSIVE DRINKING

Recommends Reinforced Temperance Education to Meet "Grave Social Emergency."

By the Associated Press.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Dec. 11.—The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ found today a "grave social emergency" in what it called "widespread and excessive drinking."

A resolution adopted at the council's biennial session noted that liquor production in 1936 reached the "perfectly appalling total" of 449,000,000 gallons, as compared to 181,000,000 gallons in 1914.

"The moral consequences to individuals and to the nation of such widespread and excessive drinking are a challenge to all thoughtful people and to all agencies of education . . . to exert themselves in the interest of temperance and restraint," it said.

The resolution recommended reinforced temperance education, study of the possibility of taking the profit out of liquor manufacture, that the press, radio and screen eliminate what it called the emphasis on drinking habits, and that individuals sponsor measures for restraint.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold

That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now.

CORN SETBACK IS FEATURE OF GRAIN TRADE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 11.—Corn suffered a market collapse today to the extent of 2½ cents a bushel maximum overnight loss, dragging wheat lower in some cases about 1½ cents.

Notices were posted today that some corn and wheat would be delivered tomorrow on December contracts here. Liquidating sales of December corn took on considerable proportions, and were largely of a stop loss character.

At the close, corn was ⅝@2⅛c lower compared with yesterday's finish, Dec. $1.07⅜@⅝, May new $1.02⅝@⅝, wheat unchanged to 1 cent down, Dec. $1.27⅛@⅝, May 1.23⅜@1½, oats ¼@⅜ off, and provisions unchanged to 17 cents decline.

More than 2 cents a bushel tumble in the price of December corn had a similar effect on other grains early today.

Increased offerings of corn to arrive in Chicago led to considerable selling pressure from holders of December contracts. Some December selling, however, was against simultaneous buying of the May delivery. This helped to retard downturns in May and July corn, but the market as a whole underwent decided setbacks.

Arrivals of corn here were 205 cars, almost equaling the total a year ago. The influence of corn price downturns was emphasized by references that the markets were approaching the pre-holiday usual lull in grain business, particularly in importing countries.

December corn fell at one stage to $1.07⅛, an overnight drop of 2⅛ cents, and showed but little power to rally.

Wheat, rye and oats prices averaged lower, sympathizing with corn market declines. One sustaining factor as to wheat was word that English millers were nervous over continued Italian buying, and that any expansion of flour purchases would immediately be reflected by much higher wheat quotations in Great Britain.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 40,648,000 bushels, corn 10,310,000. Open interest in wheat was 95,388,000 bushels, and in corn 52,541,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 11.—Wheat and corn futures were unquoted today.

Winnipeg wheat opened ⅛ to ⅜d higher and early was off ⅛@⅜d. The close was ⅛@½c lower.

Liverpool wheat opened ⅛ to ⅝d lower and subsequently was ⅛d up to ⅛d off. The close was ¼@⅝d lower.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN.

In the cash grain market today wheat was ¼c lower and corn ⅛@2c lower.

Sales made on the floor of the exchange were as follows:

OATS—Sample grade mixed, 50¾c.

Local wheat receipts which were 25,500 bu., compared with 21,000 a week ago and 10,500 a year ago included 11 cars local and 6 through. Corn receipts which were 124,500 bu., compared with 130,500 a week ago and 42,000 a year ago included 72 cars local and 11 through. Oats receipts which were 18,000 bu., compared with 12,000 a week ago and 34,000 a year ago, included 9 cars local. Hay receipts were 1 car local.

SPECIALTIES SCORE GAINS; LEADERS IN LOWER AREA

Exceptional Liveliness of Shares Selling Under $10 Attracts Attention—Shifting of British Kings Has Little Influence Marketwise.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Specialty stocks held the buying limelight in today's market, many getting up fractions to 2 or more points. At the same time a number of recent leaders, confronted by selling pressure, were unable to make headway, and some backed up for substantial losses. Transfers were in the neighborhood of 2,700,000 shares.

Low-priced issues splattered the ticker tape throughout the session and for a while in the morning printed quotations were a minute or so behind dealings on the floor of the exchange.

Brokers saw nothing especially in the news to spur the list one way or the other. There was little change in the industrial scene and the British King-shift was thought to have lost much of its influence marketwise.

Bonds did a bit better. Commodities were uneven and foreign currencies quiet in terms of the dollar.

Stocks in the popular column included Goodyear, Goodrich, United States Rubber, Budd Manufacturing, Pressed Steel Car, Poor & Co., Evans Products, Seaboard Oil, Houston Oil, Central Foundry, Crucible Steel, United States Pipe & Foundry, Hiram Walker, United Aircraft, Wesson Oil & Snowdrift, Walworth, American Radiator, American Zinc, General Realty, Canada Dry, Consolidated Film, Congoleum, Commercial Solvents, Consolidated Cigar, Porto Rican-American Tobacco, American Type Founders and Pathe.

American Can and Western Union displayed weakness and a falling trend was shown by United States Steel, American Telephone, Continental Can, Westinghouse, du Pont, Santa Fe, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio, Anaconda, Kennecott, Consolidated Edison and Sears Roebuck.

Corn at Chicago was off ⅝@2¼ cents a bushel and wheat was unchanged to down 1.

Late advances were scored by Standard Gas, Western Pacific, Mohawk Carpet, Barber Co., American Chain and Crown Cork. On the declining side were Loew's, J. I. Case, Chesapeake & Ohio and Republic Steel.

Sterling at mid-afternoon was off ¼ of a cent at $4.90¼ and the French franc was .00¼ of a cent lower at 4.66¼ cents.

Cotton was down 40 to 65 cents a bale.

News of the Day.

Paramount Pictures issues did little, seemingly having discounted yesterday's $12 disbursement on the first preferred and a 60-cent payment on the second preference stock.

Once more the exceptional liveliness of shares selling under $10 attracted the attention of commission house veterans who deduced that the public was again in a buying mood for "quick turns."

Commission house arguments for a year-end rally were based on the unusual amount of reinvestment money available due to extra dividends and the belief that manufacturing and merchandising will continue at a high rate well into next year. Analysts also recalled that over the past 35 years the market has almost invariably done well in the last fortnight of the final quarter.

Rails were in a resting mood while awaiting decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the extension of emergency rates. Freight loadings last week were ahead less than seasonally.

Weekly Commercial Revenues.

Helpful to market sentiment was the rising tempo of retail and wholesale volumes, as stressed by the week-end review of Dun & Bradstreet.

Nation-wide retail sales were estimated at 4 to 8 per cent ahead of the preceding week and from 12 to 25 per cent better than in the same period last year.

Comparative steadiness of tobacco shares in the face of increased prices for the burley product was attributed to the fact most of the large cigarette manufacturers maintain inventories on a three-year basis and earnings, consequently, may be little affected unless the higher rates continue over a long period. A successful burley crop next year, it was suggested by observers, would have a tendency to lower costs.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions sterling was unchanged at $4.99½, as was the French franc at 4.66½ cents.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES 8 TO 13 POINTS LOWER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Heavy profit taking attracted by the recent rise of about $1.50 to $2.50 a bale in cotton caused prices to react moderately today. Pressure appeared early after net losses of 8 to 11 points had been registered and by mid-afternoon the market was quietest and ruling 3 to 7 points net lower. March, which had ceased from 12.38c to 12.27c, was selling at 12.31c.

Futures closed barely steady, 8 to 13 lower. December, 12.56@58; January, 12.27; March, 12.27; May, 12.12@13; July, 11.95@96; October, 11.56. Spot quiet; middling, 12.87.

Dec. opened 12.68; Jan. 12.37; March 12.35; May 12.20; July 12.06; Oct. 11.64.

Trading was active but orders were rather mixed at the start. Relatively easy Liverpool cables, active liquidation January and Southern selling met a fairly general demand, including continued trade price fixing. Foreign orders were on both sides but these sources seemed to be buyers on balance.

At 12.25c for May the selling became more active and shortly after the first half hour of trading, some deliveries were off 2 or 3 points from the highs. March advanced from 12.33c to 12.38c and then reacted to 12.35c with prices generally 2 to 4 points lower.

The private estimates of domestic November cotton consumption were issued, ranging from 620,000 to 625,000 bales compared with October consumption was 647,000 and 512,000 in November last year.

Liverpool reported mixed trading but with an increased volume of liquidation owing to settlement of the constitutional crisis.

Profit taking and local selling became more active during the middle of the morning and prices sold off to net losses of 8 to 12 points.

Selling was attributed partly to a feeling that the technical position was easier following the recent advance. Offerings tapered off by mid-day. March, which had eased from 12.38 to 12.27, ruled at 12.30. The market was quiet, at net losses of 4 to 8 points.

CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL HEAD, 9 OTHERS SURRENDER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 11.—Orville F. Schoeck and nine of his associates in the operation of the variously named Schoeck correspondence schools at Alton, surrendered yesterday to the United States Marshal here on mail fraud charges and were released on bond.

Those who surrendered with him were H. A. Schoeck, R. H. Hessingflow, A. Edward Terpening, R. W. Johnson, L. B. Culp, P. R. Johnson, C. P. Truesdale, H. T. Wyant and R. S. Heater.

So far 22 of the 32 indicted have surrendered. Postoffice inspectors in several states are searching for the others. The indictments, returned recently by a Federal grand jury here, were suppressed pending the arrest of the defendants.

The Government charges that the correspondence schools induced persons to buy courses in various technical subjects by misrepresenting that the school had business connections which would assure them of employment and through other misrepresentations.

FRUIT SUPPLY CO. GETS PERMISSION TO REORGANIZE

Lists Assets of $257,000 and Liabilities of $275,000; Owes RFC. $13,000.

A voluntary petition for corporate reorganization under the amended Bankruptcy Act, filed in Federal Court yesterday by the Fruit Supply Co., 809 North Fourth street, was approved by Federal Judge George H. Moore.

The firm, incorporated in 1908, listed assets of $257,052, including merchandise, accounts receivable and real estate, and liabilities of $275,492, of which $200,000 is capital stock, $31,738 secured claims and $43,753 unsecured claims.

The petition stated that under present conditions the company was unable to pay its obligations but would be able to do so if reorganization were permitted. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which holds the company's note for $13,495, has agreed to extend the obligation and permit the company to pay it off as accounts receivable are paid, the petition asserted. The RFC loan is secured by a real estate mortgage, claims against railroads with a book value of $23,169 and certain accounts receivable.

The petition was filed by the firm's secretary, F. J. Adams, acting under a resolution adopted by the directors.

FUNERAL OF EX-POSTMASTER WHO DIED ON HUNTING TRIP

CARBONDALE, Ill., Dec. 11.—Funeral services were held here yesterday for Homer D. Lee, 64 years old, who fell dead while on a hunting trip in the Mississippi bottoms of Union County near Reynoldsville, Tuesday evening. He was with L. L. Heilig, railroad claim agent of Carbondale.

Lee, former assistant postmaster of Carbondale, treasurer of Jackson County, and business man, had been in poor health for some time. A Coroners inquest was held Tuesday night and gave a verdict of death from apoplexy.

Heilig and Iee had been hunting all the late afternoon and were ready to return to their car before coming to Carbondale. Lee complained of being tired, and, being careful of exertion, stated that he would walk directly along the edge of the field to the waiting car while Mr. Heilig took the dogs and worked in a roundabout route to the car in order to find more game. When he reached the car he discovered that Lee had not arrived and, upon searching for him, discovered the body near where they had parted.

3-DIMENSION MOVIES WITH POLARIZED GLASS

Pair Who Invented Glareless Auto Lights Demonstrate Before Scientists.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11. — Two young men who learned how to make 100,000 minute crystals stand on end on the point of a pin, exhibited the result yesterday at the Museum of Science and Industry here. Their crystals, said Dr. Robert W. Wood of Johns Hopkins University, noted physicist, solves the problem of automobile headlight glare.

With the same stuff for spectacles an audience saw complete three-dimensional movies, with pictures taken by ordinary cameras and projected from regulation film.

The crystal substance "polarizes" the rays of light, or in other words lines them up. The discoverers of the process are a former Harvard instructor in freshman physics, and one of his freshmen students, who was so advanced that his teacher asked him privately not to propose such difficult questions in class. Edwin H. Land was the pupil, and George Wheelright III, was the instructor.

Land is the son of a Norwich (Conn.) cotton man. At the age of 6 Land, performed his first physics experiment, which blew out all the electric fuses in the house.

He began the problem of balancing 100,000 crystals on a pinpoint 10 years ago, when he was 16, and was reading a book in the New York Public Library. The book was Sir William Brewster's work on the kaleidoscope. It told of the attractive things which could be done by using polarized light with a kaleidoscope.

Land asked his father for $5000 to go ahead with this idea and to make glareless automobile headlights. Perfecting their process took Land and Wheelwright 10 years, mostly in their laboratory in Boston.

The crystals are made of iodine and quinine. They are so small that anywhere from 100,000 to 1,000,000 would stand on a pin-point. If they are all lined up they transmit light much like glass, and they also polarize it.

The polarizing glass is made by using a thin inner layer of these crystals between two sheets of glass, the same as safety glass is made.

MURDEROUS CHINESE SUFFER SAME FATE AS VICTIMS

Man and Woman, Who Killed Nine, Executed and Bodies Cut to Bits.

CHUNGKING, China, Dec. 11.—Balked in his attempts to run away with the wife of his employer in a Czechuen Province town, a servant conspired with her to poison all the members of the family and their servants.

This accomplished, the lovers cut up the nine bodies, threw them into an old well and ran away with as much of the family's belongings as they could carry.

Then they were beheaded and their bodies cut to small bits and thrown to the village dogs.

FORMER OFFICER SUING TO GET CONTROL OF ADVERTISING FIRM

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 11.—George H. Thornley, former vice-president of N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., advertising agency, has filed suit to gain control of the corporation, asserting that he has the right to buy 234,000 shares of the company's stock, which represents a controlling interest.

He testified yesterday that under the terms of a voting trust agreement he has authority to buy the shares held by the estate of Wilfred W. Fry, president of the company, who died last July. He announced he was prepared to put upu $300,000 of his own money to purchase the stock, valued at $1,500,000, and that a New York firm would supply the rest.

The directors of the company contended that before Fry's death it was agreed to distribute the securities to the vice-presidents to equalize their holdings.

$90,000 Bequest Saves Pigeons.

GYOER, Hungary, Dec. 11.—An anonymous citizen has bequeathed 500,000 pengoes (about $90,000) to the city administration for the care of the pigeons that throng the Gyoer market place. The city fathers had planned to kill most of the birds, which had become a pest, but were forced by the will to hire a caretaker and build a house for the pigeons.

VENEZUELAN PROGRESS TOWARDS DEMOCRACY

Marked Liberalization Noted Since Death of Dictator Gomez Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—Approach of the first anniversary of the death of Venezuela's tyrannical dictator, the aged Gen. Vincente Gomez, finds that rich country making marked progress towards democracy.

Freedom came Dec. 18, 1935, after more than a generation of fierce dictatorships, some 27 years of that period under the iron fist of Gomez. A year ago the people were living in a state of near serfdom, without any personal rights. Most folk had never heard of such a thing as a popular vote.

Opposition to the Government was crushed by terrorism. Those who ran afoul the masters were imprisoned and fettered, or exiled, or put to actual torture. There was no freedom of speech, and the press was muzzled by an air-tight censorship.

Gomez and his adherents had waxed immensely rich, and the poor had become poorer. It is true the ruler had wiped out the public debt, eliminated direct taxation, and built some fine highways and made other improvements. There are those who sing his praise, but his successors charge that these things represented a diversion of only part of the river of gold that flowed into private hands of privilege.

With the last breath of Gomez, the embittered people started to pillage and burn property belonging to the old man and his followers. The blood of citizens wet the pavements of the Plaza Bolivar in Caracas when a Gomez official ordered the military to fire into a vast crowd of demonstrators.

Changes Under President.

Then apparently was born a new nation, under the dominant leadership of President Lopez Contreras, an outstanding personality and head of the armed-forces of Venezuela. He had been the right-hand of Gomez, but he had the reputation of shielding the people as best he could, and the man in the street liked him for that. The public followed his leadership, and in the past year there have been these changes:

A democratic constitution, providing for popular vote, has been prepared, and in the near future there will be a general election—the first for many of the people. Gomez' hand-picked Legislature will give way to men elected by the country.

The Government is in the process of reclaiming, through the courts, hundreds of thousands of acres of the country's richest farming and grazing lands which were in the possession of Gomez, unlawfully, according to the prosecution. Other huge estates of Gomez-fattened overlords are being similarly treated.

These ranches will be broken up—some have been already—and turned over to the impoverished, would-be farmer who, under the dictatorship, was unable to get hold of land. Money is being loaned to small farmers to help them get started.

Other court suits are being brought to recover money and securities held by Gomez and adherents. Nobody knows how much the General was worth; some estimates have placed his fortune at a hundred million dollars, some run higher, but they are guesses.

Schools have been opened in rural sections where heretofore children lacked facilities to learn even reading and writing.

Communications have been improved. Highways have been driven into the hinterland, where lie the gold and diamond mines, which hitherto has been all but cut off from civilization.

Labor laws are being put into effect to improve the conditions of the masses.

The harbor of La Guaira, principal port of the country, and the railway from there to Caracas, have been taken over from British interests and placed under national control.

Trade Agreement Under Way.

Venezuela and the United States are working on a trade agreement for mutual benefit. Under Gomez, and since his time, the Venezuelan duties on most imported goods have been terrific, to the detriment of American trade. Presumably concessions will be made by both sides.

The above are only part of the changes in less than 12 months. Coincident with them, this bids fair to be a peak year for oil production in Venezuela, which ranks among the foremost petroleum centers of the world. Word from Caracas predicts a record of more than 160,000,000 barrels. Last year some 150,000,000 barrels were pumped out of the wells—also a record output.

Man Behind the Program.

The man behind all this great program, Gen. Lopez Contreras, is about 55 years old—a professional soldier, with the face of an ascetic college professor. He is slim, straight and square-shouldered and has an aristocratic, intellectual visage. But he is as hard as a top sergeant when he has to be. The old soldier crops out in his short, incisive utterances.

"I am whole-heartedly for democracy," he said to the correspondent in Caracas not long ago, "and my entire effort will be toward that end."

On top of that, with reference to radical elements in the country, came this: "If democracy exceeds the bounds of law and order, I shall meet force with force. I shall maintain my position. I depend upon the army, and I know the army."

NEW TEST ON GOLD CLAUSE LAW BEFORE SUPREME COURT

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—A new test of the gold clause resolution barring payment of obligations in gold was called up for argument today before the Supreme Court.

Two and a half hours were set aside for arguments on whether the measure applied to contracts for payments in bullion as well as coin.

At issue was an appeal by the Holyoke, Mass., Water Power Co. from a ruling by lower courts that contracts for gold bullion or the equivalent in currency could be paid at their face value in present-day devalued money.

Because of devalution, it sought to collect $28,874 more from the American Writing Paper Co. of Massachusetts for leases entered into 40 years ago for water power rights on the Connecticut River.

Thirty minutes were allotted to Solicitor General Stanley Reed to argue as a "friend of the court" that if the water power contentions were upheld "the power of Congress over the monetary system would be frustrated."

NEW REHABILITATION TRACT NEAR MARKED TREE, ARK.

$34,000 Paid for 382 Acres on Which Farmers Will Live 5 Years on Probation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JONESBORO, Ark., Dec. 11.—Purchase of 382 acres of land in Poinsett County for the establishment of another small acreage farming project was announced yesterday by the Arkansas Rural Rehabilitation Corporation.

The tract is located three miles south of Marked Tree. The purchase price was listed at $34,000. The corporation, which was created by the former Federal Emergency Relief Administration, to function in the rural rehabilitation program before the Resettlement Administration was formed, continues operation under the direction of the Resettlement Administration.

Farmers placed on the project will be on probation for five years and if they are successful they will be permitted to purchase their holdings under a sales agreement that will require 40 years to complete.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU—By BOB BURNS

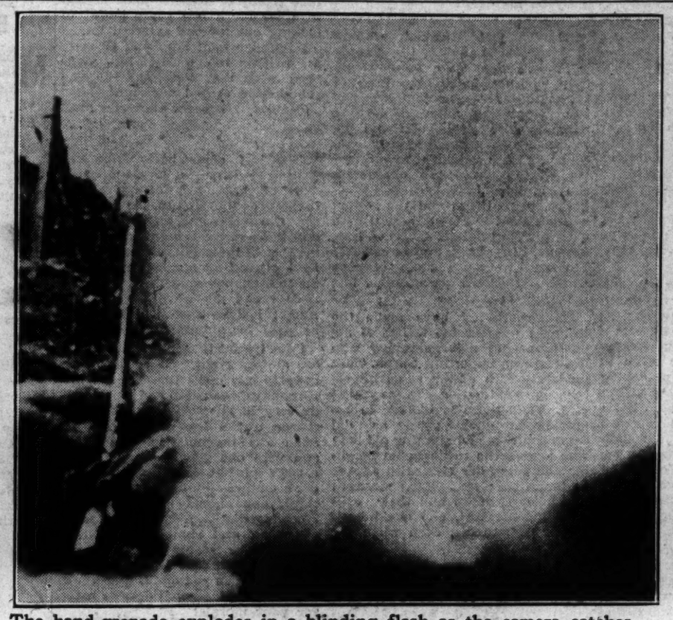

WITH all these arguments about the six- hour work day, I can't understand why somebody don't git the real low-down on the subject from my Uncle Spaff, who has been waging a bitter fight for the six-hour day for years. Uncle Spaff is a coal miner and he worked such long hours, he never had a chance to go to the picture show or have any fun at all. Finally he won out and he told his wife they were going to celebrate by goin' to the picture show. So he cleaned up and they went. The next day, my aunt went down to the judge and told him she wanted to git a divorce. The Judge says "On what grounds do you want a divorce?" And she says "I'll tell you, I don't like his looks." The Judge says, "You've been married 16 years—did it take you all that time to find out you didn't like his looks?" And my aunt says "Yes, yesterday was the first time I ever saw him with his face washed."

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a girl 17 years old and a senior in high school. I have been chumming with several girls who have formed a club where we have a very good time, but the trouble now seems to be jealousy creeping in.

Now I am not trying to make myself appear perfect in your eyes, because I have my faults as well as others. I have tried so hard to please my girl friends, especially one that seems so close to the trouble; which is, that I always get such good grades and this girl does not. Her father would like to see his daughter at top.

I have always loved my work and feel I am entitled to the grades I get, but sometimes I wonder if it is worth the grades to give up friends. I have never been out with boys, as I have felt I didn't have time for boys.

BROKENHEARTED.

I very much fear that you are inclined to dramatize. These things come up everywhere. Don't feel abused about it. Very likely you are taking it more seriously than anybody else and giving it more thought. And it is likely that the girl's father has much less thought and jealousy about your grades than you dream. He may, to urge the girl on, cite your good record and that probably is as far as it goes in his mind. He doesn't realize that he is making trouble at all, I am sure, between you two girls. Older people do these things inadvertantly, and when reminded of the trouble they make are the most surprised persons in the world and regret their shortsightedness.

There is no need of making an issue of it; whether to give up being such a noble scholar or be frivolous and unambitious and keep your friend. That is putting it strongly; but it is what one would infer from your letter. You take the whole thing entirely too seriously. You'll have much more serious experiences in later life over which you can become "broken-hearted."

My dear Mrs. Carr:

SEVERAL months ago I wrote you about having some Bantam chickens my little brother had to give away. I want to thank you for printing the letter, for it was through your column that we found a good home for them. Of course, we received more requests than there were chickens to go around, but finally decided upon one from St. Charles. You were so kind about this that I am wondering if you would help us again.

I am a young married woman living in South St. Louis. My husband works mostly at night and I am usually left alone and unoccupied. My one great interest is singing and I am very much interested in joining a choral club or choir in South St. Louis.

I am a soprano and was a member of the glee club and triple quartette during my high school days. I cannot afford to pay any dues, but will be glad to exchange my services for membership. I am a stenographer and unemployed. I should be glad if I do not have too great a distance to go and will appreciate any suggestion from you. M. D. M.

I would advise you to write Mr. John C. Walter, president St. Louis Music Extension Society, 721 Olive street. Walter is in touch with many musical organizations here and could advise you of their location.

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

OF THINGS AND PERSONALITIES

The Author of "Live Alone and Like It" Reviews Her Experiences

By Marjorie Hillis

WHEN I wrote "Live Alone and Like It," I think I had one thought in the back of my mind that applies to everybody, whether she (or he) lives alone or not. It was just this—it's stupid to let what you haven't got spoil your life.

So many people do! Most of the complainers and failures and unhappy people are doing just that. They're stewing about what they haven't got—and that's really the chief difference between them and the successful, happy people. They've taken what they have got and made the most of it.

Nobody has everything. Of course, the particular thing you lack always seems to be the most important—whether it's a husband or a family or money or talent or beauty. I suppose the phrase "If I only had so-and-so" begins more sentences than almost any other. But it's a rather stupid phrase, really. It's full of regret, in the first place, and I think that regret is the most wasteful emotion in the world.

With all the interesting things there are to do, anybody can make an attractive life. Any one can make an attractive background for herself, and make herself into an attractive person, and fill her life with attractive interests.

The last should be especially easy. There is such an overwhelming number of interesting and exciting things to do and see that, really, if you find life dull or lonely, you ought to go to see a doctor!

I don't believe that even the sorrows of unrequited love would have much chance if you decided to see the 10 best plays or pictures that came to town, and read the 10 best new books, and hear some good speakers, and take a course in something that interests you, and catch up on all your social obligations, and get enough exercise. And these are all things that everybody ought to do anyway!

* * *

ONE Sunday recently, I strayed out of the beaten path and down to the Russian Orthodox Cathedral in Houston street, in New York City—and I felt as though I'd stepped into Russia itself!

It's really only half a church—walled off from the other half by beaver-board covered with religious paintings, and fitted with icons and shrines and candelabra that give a rich foreign color. The room was crowded when I got there, with men standing on one side and women on the other (there are no seats, except some benches against the wall), and I've never seen as much going on at once in any church! A priest in a chartreuse damask robe was chanting in a magnificent voice; the choir was singing moving Russian music; people were praying, some kneeling on the cold floor; a few were busy lighting candles and muttering little services of their o n; others were making sort of tour across the pulpit platform, behind the guest's back, kneeling and kissing the feet of the saints in the illuminated panels as they went; still others were chatting cozily in corners.

Of course, I couldn't begin to follow the service. But I was fascinated as I watched the priests, as splendidly dressed as the Magi in a Christmas pageant, as they came and went from an inner room to the platform, chanting, preaching and performing strange Russian rites. It didn't matter that what I took for an impassioned sermon turned out—according to a round-faced woman in a shawl beside me—to be an announcement of the ladies guild. Later, the Bishop, in a gold robe and a long gray beard that fringed his face from ear to ear, really did preach one.

But it was the people who moved me most. None of them, seen on the street, would have looked more foreign than half the passersby, but packed together they were Russian and strange. And they seemed to know more about worship than many Americans. Even a smart young thing in a coat with a cossack flare and a high astrakhan hat dropped to her knees from time to time and bent slowly forward till her head touched the floor, like a superbly done esthetic exercise. And the stout and the elderly, too, accomplished this feat—sometimes alone and sometimes with all of the congregation—with a suppleness that made me feel like a muscle-bound pagan.

I shall go back some day to find out more about it. Why some of the congregation knelt before the Bishop and were fed from a large gold spoon. Why they made the almost furtive trips across the platform. Why there were the three collections. And why the dean emerged once balancing what looked like a red cushion precariously on his head!

* * *

I HAVE just finished reading "Great Laughter," Fannie Hurst's story of a fabulous old lady who dominated the lives of her children, her grandchildren, and her great-grandchildren, like a witch in a fairy-tale. I found the reading both extraordinarily interesting and slightly revolting—the first because the characters are so alive that I cared what happened to them, and the second because the book is so littered with such physical details as arms, legs, bosoms, hips, flesh, and sweat that I wanted to skim some of the words out of the paragraphs, like scum off cocoa.

Nevertheless, I have made the intimate (almost too intimate) acquaintance of a large family who illustrate an important lesson. That moderation in power is as important as moderation in anything else. That there is danger in acquiring as much power as did Gregrannie, the dominating old lady who lauged the rather grim laughter and ruled her clan with almost inhuman wisdom. Her strength made her children and their children incompetent, and she herself didn't dare to die, even when she was a hundred years old and knew that she had cancer.

Gregrannie acquired too much power, and her parasitical family acquired too little. They didn't have power to make decisions; they had to turn to Gregranie to make them. They had no power to face facts, and the facts hurt like barbs when the old lady hurled them in their face. They couldn't make their own way and at least some of them know that Gregannie despised them for their weakness.

In fact, Gregannie's progeny had very little power among the lot of them. They never felt any need to develop it, because the end of her wealth was a cushion on which they could relax. They relaxed so thoroughly that when the depression came and their jobs shrank, they were just able to scuttle back to Gregrannie's skirts, filling the house with their children and possessions till it overflowed like the Ark.

We leave them there, thoroughly uncomfortable, on Gregannie's one hundredth birthday, while she—as hard hit as they, but keeping the fact grimly to herself—pulls herself together for a few years more of looking out for the assorted lot.

I found myself admiring Gregannie a little reluctantly. She made them what they were, and the load she carried served her right.

Besides, I suspect that she liked it.

I'VE just come back from visiting seven stores in seven cities, all of them full of glamorous things for the house, new things for Christmas. Expensive things and inexpensive things, an amazing number of them full of charm! They have stirred up a new ambition in me to make my apartment more up-to-date and my wardrobe smarter. And I believe such a tour would be good for almost every one.

I don't want to suggest that things are all-important. Or to urge anybody to buy more than she should. Nowadays, one can do so much with so very little—with paint, for instance, and a few gay accessories, and a little ingenuity in one's house; and with one good costume, and a change of hat and accessories in one's clothes. But this much, I do think one should do if one can. Knowing that your house is gay and charming and right gives you so much more assurance when you entertain your friends, and so much pleasure when you don't. And knowing that you look well does so much for your morale!

Don't think for a minute that I believe that these things are as important as personal relationships. But I do believe that those who lack just the personal relationships they'd like can fill their lives so full of charming things that they scarcely miss the other.

A great many people are much too noble about what they call the material things of life. They are usually rather drab people. For material things are an expression of your taste and personality, regardless of their cost. They aren't the warp and woof of life, of course, but they are the finish and the trimming, which every life needs.

Psychology's Importance In Contract

It Is Not Always Easy to Anticipate Opponent's Reaction to Play.

By Ely Culbertson

MOST hands, and certainly all of the interesting ones, present more than one plausible line of play. Usually the question declarer must resolve is which plan has the greatest mathematical chance of success. But this is by no means the only consideration! At times the problem may be not mathematical, but psychological. And here is where the true skill of a player becomes apparent. It is an easy matter, although sometimes a laborious one, to calculate percentages. It is not nearly so easy to anticipate the probable reaction of an opponent to a certain play. Today's hand illustrates one of the simpler forms of this type of anticipation.

Ely Culbertson

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 ♥ A Q 2 ♦ J 10 5 4 3 ♣ 10 9 2
♠ Q 9 4 3 ♥ 10 8 7 6 5 ♦ 9 8 ♣ Q 8	WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 10 6 5 2 ♥ K 9 ♦ A 2 ♣ K J 7 4 3
	♠ A K 7 ♥ J 4 3 ♦ K Q 7 6 ♣ A 6 5

The bidding:

SOUTH.	WEST.	NORTH.	EAST.
1 no trump	Pass	2 no trump	Pass
3 no trump	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the six of hearts and before declarer touched a card in the dummy he properly went about counting his potential winners. He could see two certain spade tricks, four certain diamonds and one club, a total of seven, and it was immediately apparent that he would not require three tricks in hearts. If he had, there would have been no doubt as to the proper first play. He would have let the heart lead run to his own jack, so that if the king were in the leader's hand the jack would win the first trick, and a subsequent finesse win two more. The fact that he did not require three heart tricks made declarer give serious thought to the possibility that the heart king was held by East, and it was an easy matter to anticipate that if that were the case, and dummy were to play the deuce on the opening lead, East, on winning with the king and being faced with two certain heart tricks in dummy, would shift to another suit. Obviously there was danger that this shift would be to the declarer's badly protected club suit.

HAD declarer needed only one trick in hearts to complete his contract, the proper play would have been to put up dummy's ace, since he still would have control of the heart suit, but with two tricks necessary, neither the ace nor a complete duck was correct.

Declarer made the correct selection in playing the queen and, when East won this with the king, East was faced with a real problem. He simply could not tell whether declarer's original no trump and rebid had been based on the ace-queen of clubs or on merely the ace of clubs and a strong position in spades and diamonds. If West had a certain spade or diamond entry it might be fatal not to return his opening lead. A club shift might gave the declarer just the time he needed in which to set up his diamond suit. East's decision therefore to return the nine of hearts cannot be severely criticised, for certainly there was no way for him to tell whether the play of the heart queen on the first lead had been a genuine finesse or merely a device by which the declarer was insuring a heart return.

Obviously, on the return of the heart, South had no trouble with the hand. He won with the jack, cleared away the diamond ace, and later was able to claim nine tricks.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: Dealer opened the bidding with one club. I, second hand, held: ♠ A K 8 5 3 ♥ A K 9 4 3 ♦ 7 ♣ 8 4. What should I have bid?

Answer: Two spades.

FAMOUS LAST WORDS

Exercise Helps General Health if Restrained

Leisurely Walk Is Finest Type — Little Protection Against Acute Disease.

By Dr. M. G. Seelig

DURING the past few weeks several of my readers have written to ask me if regular exercise will protect against surgical diseases. Of course, such a question as that cannot have an universal answer. Everything depends upon the individual, the kind of surgical disease and the type of exercise. As a general proposition it is beyond all doubt true that moderate exercise tends to keep the body in tone, and that the better the general tone of the body, the better will be the general state of health. I cannot, however, conceive of exercise protecting to any significant degree against most of the acute or chronic surgical diseases. Probably directed exercise may accomplish a great deal in restoring stiffened joints, weakened abdominal muscles, or strained and relaxed ligaments that might otherwise have to be restored by operation.

I am sure that general health, and, of course, surgical health would be improved if the great mass of the public realized that a leisurely taken daily walk is about the finest type of exercise. But most people are bored by walking just for health's sake. If it were not tragic, it would be amusing to contemplate how many men past 50, gay blades of the dangerous age, seek rejuvenation in too much golf, dancing, tennis and even handball. Such activities as these, if they are not practised with most intelligent restraint, instead of conserving health, lead headlong into serious physical hazards for the oldster. Argument is of no avail in trying to prove this thesis for one usually gets the retort, "But, doctor, you don't know how good it makes me feel!"

Right here I am going to step out of character as columnist advisor, and say that I myself practically never exercise. In so refraining, I have always felt that I was in high company, because it is a well-known fact that Sir Isaac Newton had an inherent dislike for exercise; Lyman Abbott, the famouse editor and preacher, used to glory over the fact that the only exercise he took was to dress id the morning and undress at night; John Fiske, the historian, a veritable behemoth of a man, never stirred except to get from one place to another, when it became necessary to get there.

I could cite many other examples, but these will do. And mind you, I am not justifying them. I'm merely presenting the facts that these men did not exercise, they did not suffer from surgical disease, and the three of them lived to a ripe old age. In this connection it may be interesting for my readers to know that there is a substantial basis for the belief that long life depends more on the inherited equipment with which we start life than on the fashion in which we live.

And do I hear some one asking: "Am I to understand you to mean that since you never exercise, you advise me to follow suit?" My answer is that I have explained the beneficent effect of intelligent exercise. I indulge in the physician's prerogative of assuming thath you will do as I say and not as I do."

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.

WHEN Oscar of the Waldorf—that benign and rotund Oscar Tschirky who has been publicized for many years into the nation's Number One Maitre d'Hotel—is finally translated from the Hotel Militant to the Hotel Triumphant, I don't know what on earth we newspaper people are going to do for copy about food and its serving. He's our arbiter elegantiorum on all such matters—and when a worried hostess wants to know whether to throw an artichoke with a half-Nelson or a flying tackle she trots to the phone and calls Oscar.

In addition to presiding majestically over the internal workings of the Waldorf-Astoria, the old boy is always on his legs somewhere making a speech about grub and cookery. The other day, passing through that famed inn, I heard the familiar voice, and there was good old Oscar addressing a group of 200 eager Brooklyn ladies interested in the use of herbs on the dinner table. And Oscar told 'em, and I listened in.

Oscar began by launching a head-long attack on cocktail drinking as the great modern foe of good home cooking. His thesis was that this sinful practice kept young girls out of the kitchen where they should be learning to shake up a meal. He denounced that New York curse, "the delicatessen dinner," consisting of liverwurst and canned goods snatched at the corner store and slammed on the table in nine minutes or less. Then, considering his audience, he said some nice soothing things about the use of yarbs. I heard all sorts of half-forgotten names—chervil, tarragon, thyme, marjoram, basil and the rest. And as Oscar spoke his honeyed words, the good ladies beamed on him, their herb-love growing by the moment, and I began to wonder how in the dickens we could ever do without Oscar!

THE marriage of night-club-singing Frances Maddux to a Washington gentleman didn't slow her career an iota, or jot. She's warbling now at the very nice La Rue's on Park avenue—and if you want to assault some delicious viands when you're in town, try that place. It's at Fifty-ninth street. . . .

When I read about that St. Louis man who has had 173 operations, and then thought of the fun some old biddies have over one little cutting-up, I realized what a sparkling conversationalist that chap must be! . . .

Who should be in town but Mistinguette, the ancient French musical show star whose legs were famous for their pulchritude before ever Marlene Dietrich was born! Well over 60, the old girl is, and there's a fiendish rumor being whispered about that she proposes to appear in some sort of a show here. Even so, she's remarkably well preserved—a sort of Gallic Fanny Ward. . . .

The Times Square district doesn't usually go for them, but smart press-agenting has put over a Chinese eatery on West Fifty-second street. It is run by Ruby Foo, who also has a famous place in Boston called "The Den". . . . But I'll still take Chinatown, any time of night. . . .

Clark Gable, during his brief three days in our palpitating midst, was seen much in the company of Sue Rosenberg, a pretty girl from Rochester, N. Y., who is winning her way into the local hotsy-totsy set. . . .

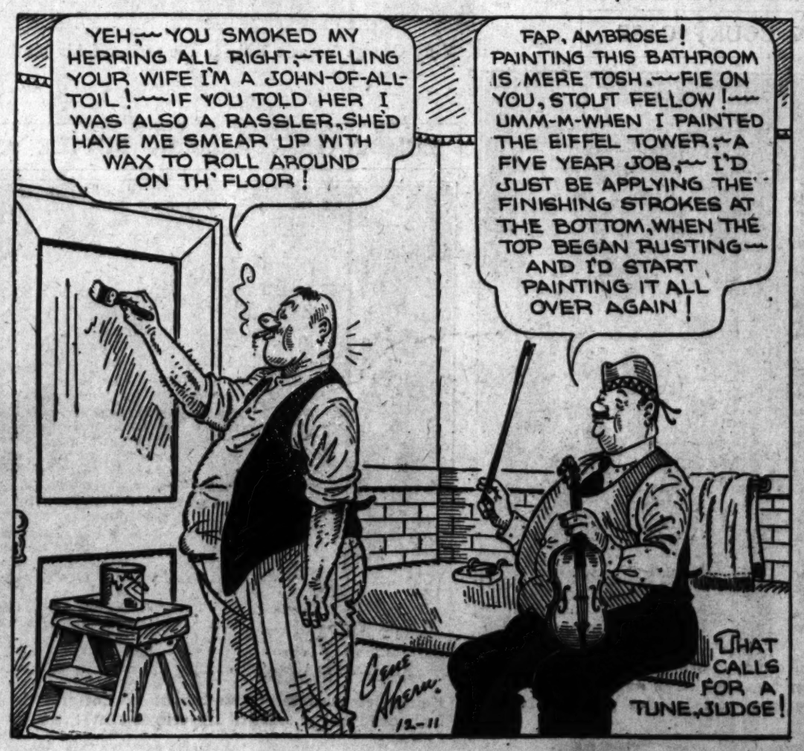

Every year I try to do my best at our annual Siamese Cat show, and every year I fall back whipped. The other day I went in, hopefully, to see the champion, Djerkits' Chinkaling of Newton, mother of 85, and her cold, sneering stare drove me completely out of the place with a chill. I can cope with the dirtiest looks that humans can hurl, after long training, but that grim, contemptuous gaze of a blooded cat I simply cannot stand. What is this—some sort of an inferiority set-up? Or are the darned animals really so superior to us?

* * *

I note that frilly, ruffly effects are showing up in evening things these days—made of net and lace. Even the bottoms of wool and jersey skirts break into ruffles, often of pleated taffeta. My Parisian friend Lycilene has just designed one of these—a black jersey dinner dress, plain and severe and fitted right up to the ear-lobes, then bursting into frothy taffeta frills at the hem. And a very tasty job it is, too. Think I'll try teasing for one.

HER NAME WAS WALLIS WARFIELD

By Edwina Wilson

WALLIS WARFIELD, RIGHT, AND HER COUSIN BASIL GORDON, IN MAY, 1899.

DEBUTANTE . . . WALLIS WARFIELD IN 1914.

THE headlines were alarming—inch-high, in black type: "RUSSIANS ATTACK BRESLAU FORTS WHILE FRENCHMEN AIM AT FREEBURG"; "ALLIES BEGIN A FORWARD MOVEMEN—BIG GUNS FIRING ALONG WHOLE FONT"; "GERMANS ON NEW BATTLE LINE IN POLAND —REINFORCEMENTS FROM WEST—A NEW GERMAN ARMY MOVES ON PIOLRKOW"——

Of course, everyone said, there wasn't a chance for the United States to become involved in the war, frightful as it was. The United States had troubles enough at home, without borrowing more in Europe. There was widespread sympathy for devastated Belgium and Red Cross drives were in progress. Food and clothing and hospital supplies were being packed and loaded on ships. Women made bandages and signed petitions and contributed to relief funds.

There was talk of "Preparedness" by those who thought that national defenses were inadequate and those who thought they were not . . . President Wilson discussed with Ambassador Herrick plans to aid destitute noncombatants . . . Ex-President Theodore Roosevelt wrote to the New York Times about conditions in Mexico where Gen. Villa's followers had sent President Carranza fleeing. . . . Assistant Secretary of Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt made an address before the National Civic Federation. . . . From Washington, D. C., came news that: "The navy has completed its new wireless chain. Eventually Washington will be able to reach its warships anywhere in the world."

Three thousand miles away from all this, across the black Atlantic, a boyish-looking young English officer was seeing action at the front for the first time. H. R. H., the Prince of Wales, first lieutenant in the Grenadier Guards, was reported by news services to be "looking fit in spite of the enormous amount of work he manages to cram into the hours from daybreak until sometimes almost daybreak. One of his favorite habits is to vanish, to be discovered several hours later, interrogating wounded men in out-of-the-way corners." The Prince wrote letters to his mother, Queen Mary, that were opened and passed by official censors, as those of any other British soldier. The Prince went about his duties as any young lieutenant. He was seeing war for the first time, as all Europe, in December, 1914, was seeing war.

And, in the United States——

The Colorado mine strike was being investigated . . . Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle's dancing was thrilling Broadway audiences, and a new play, "the Miracle Man" by George M. Cohan, had opened . . . Women suffragists paraded in New York and Chicago . . . Eddie Pullen won an automobile race at Corona, Cal., over a 300.3 mile course, setting a new world mark for road racing—87.4 miles an hour . . . High-laced shoes with cloth tops were a new feminine fashion . . . Newspapers printed lessons in auction bridge . . .

There was a new book out that fall, a novel called "His Royal Happiness," written by Mrs. Everard Cotes. The book was advertised as "a timely and startling international romance, relating the dramatic complications which arise when a Prince of England happens to fall in love with the daughter of the President of the United States." Reviewers called the volume, "a charming love story" with "a daring theme."

Did Wallis Warfield, spending her first year out of school days, read that book? Probably not. There were so many, many other things for a girl about to come out in society to think about, so many other things to do besides reading books. Shopping and luncheons and matinees. Talking over the party the night before, talking over the one to come. Telephone calls and flowers arriving, and invitations.

For a girl reared in Baltimore, social debuts are made invariably at the Bachelors' Cotillion. It is a tradition to be compared only with that of the Saint Cecilia Society in Charleston, S. C. In Charleston, as in Baltimore, each season's "buds" make their bows together, at one gala ball. It is, for 18-year-olds, the night of nights —to be tremblingly anticipated, treasured in memory.

But in December, 1914, battlefields, even 3000 miles away, had cast their gloom over Baltimore, as over other American cities. Earlier in the fall a Baltimore society editor had written:

"Entertainments to be given this season for and by debutantes are likely to be marked by a simplicity not known in Baltimore for a generation or more. Thirty-four of the "buds" who will make bows this year have signed an agreement, insuring an absence of rivalry in elegance in respective social functions, and pledging the signers and their families to refrain from extravagance in entertaining."

Wallis Warfield was among the 34 who signed this pledge. Later her uncle, S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, busy with relief work and charitable organizations, stated that, "the report that he will give a large ball for his debutante niece, Miss Wallis Warfield, is without foundation in that he does not consider the present a proper time for such festivities, when thousands are being slaughtered in Europe."

But "Uncle Sol" Warfield was ever ready to escort his niece and her friends where they wished to go. To the 18-year-olds, it was quite an occasion to ride in state in S. Davies Warfield's big limousine, driven by a chauffeur, to be seen with the distinguished-looking older man.

Wallis and her friends frequently drove in another impressive automobile. It belonged to young Carter G. Osburn—or rather, to his father. Today Osburn is an automobile salesman at Cockeysville, Md. He was one of the young men with whom Wallis played tennis and golf and danced at the Country Club the summer of 1914. He was —and today admits it—badly smitten.

Some of the events listed in Wallis Warfield's engagement book that fall were:

Nov. 5—Football dance at the Catonsville Country Club.

Nov. 6—Luncheon at the Stafford Hotel, given by Mrs. William R. Eareckson for her debutante daughter, Miss Augusta Eareckson.

Nov. 13—Oyster roast given by Albert Graham Ober for his debutante niece, Rebecca Ober, at his country place in the Green Spring Valley at 1 p. m. The evening of the same day, the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Beacham for their daughter, Priscilla Beacham, at Lehmann Hall, at which Wallis Warfield assited in receiving the guests.

Nov. 17—Luncheon at the Baltimore Country Club for Miss Carolyn H. McCoy, given by her mother, Mrs. Kent McCoy.

Nov. 19—Luncheon at the Baltimore Country Club given by Mrs. Henry C. Kirk Jr., for her daughter, Miss Mary Kirk.

Nov. 25—Luncheon given by Mrs. Edwin H. Truist at her home on N. Calvert st., for her debutante granddaughter, Miss Rena Alverda Sawyer.

Nov. 28—Trip to Philadelphia with Miss Priscilla Beacham to spend the week-end with friends and attend a football game.

Dec. 2—Luncheon given for Miss Eleanor Cole Bosley by her mother, Mrs. John C. Bosley, at the Baltimore Country Club.

Dec. 7—The Bachelors' Cotillion.

Baltimore's Lyric Theater that night had been transformed, according to a newspaper report, into "a bower of beauty where light and color mingled to form an almost tropical atmosphere of warmth and fullness of life." The floor of the theater had been cleared of seats. Surrounding the large h[illegible], were the boxes, with nets draped beneath them in which the debutantes' flowers — bouquet on bouquet—created the effect of a continuous garland. The stage had been transformed into a garden-like supper room, reached from the dance floor by satin pillows, serving as steps.

There is a story, told by Baltimoreans, about these pillows. It is said that, in days before the Civil War, the proud Marylanders, refusing to surrender to the poverty that was a common lot, contrived to maintain their social traditions. Spending money on anything so extravagant as decorations for the Bachelors' Cotillion, however, was out of the question. So Baltimore matrons ripped up their ball gowns —worn to shabbiness—and made them into cushions to give elegance to the scene of their daughters' presentation to society. Ever since those days there have been silken cushions for the slippered feet of dancers at the cotillions.

But back to the night of Dec. 7, 1914——

Wallis Warfield arrived at the cotillion with her mother's cousin, Mrs. George Barnett of Washington, as chaperon and with two partners—Major-General George Barnett, United States Marine Corps, and her cousin, Henry M. Warfield Jr. Wallis wore a gown of white satin combined with chiffon and trimmings of pearls. The chiffon veiled the shoulders and fell in a knee-length tunic, banded in pearl embroidery—a style similar to the gowns in which Mrs. Vernon Castle danced so gracefully. Her flowers were American Beauty roses. Mrs. Barnett, her chaperon, wore a gown of cloth of gold with touches of turquoise and diamonds.

Forty-nine debutantes waiting for the exciting moment to arrive. Forty-nine young girls, each wearing a new dress and carrying flowers, trying to look serene and calm, aware that the event was the most important, to date, of their brief lives.

The band struck up the first number. Partners turned to partners. The cotillion was on!

News columns next morning reported that "the first Monday german of the Bachelors' Cotillion Club was held at the Lyric last night and, despite the shadows which gathered over society when the war began, the great opening event of the season was one of charm and happiness and, of course, of beauty."

To older men and women, doubtless, it was just another cotillion. To 49 debutantes, bright-eyed, hearts singing, smiling at partners as they danced, it was the threshold of a new world—a world that surely would match the cotillion itself in glamor and color and excitement.

• • •

THREE days later Wallis Warfield assisted in receiving at "one of the largest receptions of the season." She saw the Princeton Triangle Club's performance at Albaugh's Lyceum the night of Dec. 24. The play was "Fie! Fie! Fi-Fi," a decided hit. Critics wrote of it, "Much of the entertainment was due to the clever lyrics of F. Scott Fitzgerald, who has written some excellent 'patter songs.'"

Christmas night, Dec. 25, the second german was held at the Lyric. The debutantes and their partners, their parents and their parents' friends danced that night to this musical program:

One-step, "I Want to Go Back to Michigan"; waltz, "Flora"; one-step, "Tsin-Tsin"; one-step, "Land of My Best Girl"; the german; waltz, "Heart O'Mine"; fox-trot, "Reuben"; waltz,"The Skaters"; one-step,"When It's Night Time in Burgundy"; Waltz, "Please"; Fox-trot, "Old Folks' Rag"; One-step, "When You Wore a Tulip"; Waltz, "Millicent."

There were other cotillions—Jan. 18, Feb. 1 and Feb. 15. There were other parties and dinners and luncheons and receptions. Invariably, where the younger set gathered, Wallis Warfield was noticed for her style and distinction. One of her evening gowns, remembered today, was made with a bodice of cloth of gold, figured with little flowers and a full skirt of crepe de chine in a shade called "sunset color." Wallis was wearing her hair in a new way that season, waved softly at the sides, with a French roll from the forehead to the crown of the head and coiled in a knot at the back.

She had plenty of admirers. Tony Biddle of Philadelphia was one. He came to Baltimore with Reggie Hutchinson and a number of other Philadelphia youths to attend a birthday party. The boys had to return to classes at Yale in a few days and when they left there were sad good-bys.

Later—in the spring—there was a Campus Club house party at Princeton, where a number of Baltimore young men were students; De Coursey Orrick, Bryan and Bill Dancy; Tom Hilliard; Charles Kock; Bill McAdoo, whose father was Secretary of the Treasury in President Wilson's Cabinet. Duly chaperoned, the girls went to dance at the Colonial Club and to the Ivy for tea.

The spring and the summer slipped by. August and then September, and a new social season—

But not for Wallis Warfield. Her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Mactier Warfield, had died, and Wallis, in mourning, did not accept invitations. She and her mother were living in an apartment at Earl Court. Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman came to spend part of the winter with them.

Wallis did not attend the Bachelors' Cotillions in 1915. In the winter, though, she went to visit her cousin, Mrs. Henry Mustin, at Pensacola, Fla. Lieut. Henry Mustin was an instructor in the naval aviation school there. Pensacola was a place of excitement and activity; of gorgeous sunshine and the blue, blue ocean; of young men in uniforms who risked their lives recklessly, skyrocketing through the air; of war talk and whispered rumors; and official teas and dances.

ROMANCE

The room was a hum of voices—low-pitched, even, with now and then a femininee exclamation — rushing, staccato—and a rumble of laughter. Tall young men in uniforms and others in civilian clothes, talking to women whose bright-hued gowns made splashes of brilliant color. Older men, handsome, with snow-white hair and the gold braid of authority. Older women in little groups, nodding, smiling.

The musicians lingered over their instruments, but soon they would be playing again. It was an orchestra that played fox-trots with a verve, though so many of the older dancers thought the fox-trot undignified and the new tunes even worse. But then, many things were changing these days. . . .

She stood near a window—a slender, graceful girl wearing a pale blue gown. She was talking to two young men in uniform and her eyes, bluer than the dress she wore, shone, starlike, as she turned, smiling up at the taller young man beside her. She held a pink rose, nodding on a slender stem, in her hand.

The young man in the doorway halted. He was a young man in the uniform of a naval lieutenant, on his shoulders the insignia of the air corps. There was dash to the set of those shoulders, jauntiness of an indefinable sort in the way he stood. He was a tall young man, compactly built and handsome. He had dark eyes and hair and a small mustache.

"Who," asked the Lieutenant, touching the arm of his companion, "is the girl in the blue dress?"

The other turned. "You mean over there by the window? Oh, that's Miss Warfield. From Baltimore, I believe. She's a friend of Lieut. Mustin's wife—or maybe a relative. They say she's as clever as she is good-looking. Look, over there's that chap from Boston I was telling you about who wants to meet you. Shall we go over and—why—well, I'll be!"——

There was no use saying more, for the Lieutenant was no longer beside him. The Lieutenant was half way across the room, making his way toward the girl in blue.

• • •

"So you've never been in Florida before, Miss Warfield," he said. "How do you think you're going to like it?"

"I do like it—very much. I think it's lovely here."

"Yes, Florida sunshine's the real thing, isn't it? Great, when you're accustomed to the sort of winters we have in Chicago."

"Is Chicago your home?"

"Well, it has been. Highland Park is where my family live—that is, my father and mother. But I've drifted around a good deal. Never know, in the navy, where you'll be tomorrow. I'm glad, though, that you like Florida. Are you going to be here for a while?"

"Oh, a few weeks."

"That's good news. Pensacola's quite a place—interesting, really. I hope you'll let me show you about. Have you seen the aviation school yet?"

"Yes. It's fascinating! Lieut. Mustin took us the day after I arrived."

"Yes, isn't he! His wife is my cousin. I'm visiting them."

"Then would you think it impertinent of me to ask if the four of us could have dinner together—say, tomorrow night?"

The girl looked up, smiling. "I wouldn't think it impertinent of you, at all, Lieut. Spencer," she said. "But I have an engagement for tomorrow evening. I'm sorry."

"Then how about the next night?"

"I'm not sure whether Corinne has something planned or not. You might telephone"——

"I will. I'll telephone the first thing in the morning."

"Oh, but not too early, please!"

"What time, then? At 9 o'clock, 10 o'clock, 11? I want to know when I'm going to see you again. I'm afraid I'm going to be impatient about that. There are a lot of things I'd like to talk to you about. A lot of things"——

Abruptly — on a shrill note—the music ended. Lieut. Spencer's words were lost as another girl greeted his partner. In a moment she was the center of a group. Someone spoke and Wallis Warfield made a quick retort. There was laughter and the group widened as another officer joined them.

"My dance next, Wallis," he announced. "I hope you haven't forgotten. I've asked Harry to play that Victor Herbert waltz you like so much"——

Portrait of a Man Playing the Typewriter.

The New York American announces a new series about the heroism of the local police. . . . The editor of that esteemed newspaper is welcome to this aggravating fact about them. . . . The New York radio car patrolmen are now permitted to have heaters in the radio cars in this North Pole weather — on one condition, however. . . . That they buy the heaters with their own money! . . . Until recently, it appears, heaters were not allowed be put in the crime-chasing autos, the reason being most appalling, too. . . . The heaters, someone decreed, might wear out the batteries too quickly!!! . . . And the American's editor, it is hoped, will not forget to include these amazing facts: That a cop must pay for everything, except his badge! . . . If he jumps into the icy rivers to save a life, and his uniform is stained—he must pay for the cleaning and pressing of it. . . . And get this and groan: Cops must pay for the bullets, three cents each!

Walter Winchell

Mark Twain is doing nip-ups and handsprings in his grave right this minute. . . . He must be! . . . At a dinner commemorating his 101st birthday the other night, the president of City College spoke and said: "He was to humor what Walt Whitman was to poetry and James Fenimore Cooper to the novel!" . . . Twain once indicted Cooper in a piece called: "Fenimore Cooper's Literary Offenses" a terrific panning. . . . Cooper was one of Twain's pet hates, and he took issue with leading critics over the merit of Cooper's works. . . . Today, according to authorities, opinion seems to confirm Twain's estimate.

A friend of Johnny Hauser just returned from a Midwest city where he had played an engagement which lasted two weeks. Because the place did a most discouraging business. . . . "It must have been terrible playing to so many empty tables," said Hauser. . . . "Say," was the retort, "it was so empty the second week—that the waiters were getting snow blind from the glare of the table cloths!"

People I'm Glad I'm Not: The phoney who was nabbed by the police for posing as a columnist. . . . The columnist who hasn't been nabbed yet although he's guilty of the same thing. . . . The dramatic critics who have to sit with first-nighters, instead of on them. . . . The newspaper people who meet so many interesting people—when they get home, which isn't often enough. . . . The night club entertainers who have to mix with the customers and be pleasant to people who aren't. . . . The doormen of night clubs, buildings, apartment houses, theaters, at this time of the year when it's awful to be anything but indoor men.

They are trying to show great similarity in the tunes, "Chapel in the Moonlight" and "If We Never Meet Again." . . . Oshins and Lessy at the Caliente have an amusing routine—a new note in idiocy. . . . Backstage at the Center Theater, a Rockefeller owned theater, the bulletin board states: "No food allowed in dressing rooms." . . . Fearful of mice, roaches or competition to the Wainbow Woom, Mr. Rockefeller? . . . As a result of one line here about Kay Picture, dancer in "Red, Hot and Blue" (Kay Picture is the only girl on Broadway who knows algebra, but what good does it do her?) she has been deluged with letters. . . . From teachers all over the country comforting her and denouncing us for sich iggerince!

The long-argued matter of: "Who'll Get the Royalties?" from the song, "The Music Goes Round and Round" has finally been settled . . . Ernie Palmquist and Red Hogdsen are to receive 70 per cent of the "ransom" and Riley and Farley (who got famous from the ditty) will get the other 30 per cent . . . Palmquist, it is said, originated the song and Hogdsen worked it out with him . . . A smile and nod and a pattycake to the genius who thinks up Macy's ads for coining a new word: "Macyelbrities" . . . The steam animated Java outdoor ad, at Broadway and 47th, now has icicles hanging from the bottom of the steaming cup.

"Dear Walter," writes Jimmy Durante, "thanks so much for the item about my wife getting better in the hospital. Last week you mentioned me three times but spelled my name wrong by calling me Walter Duranty. There is no 'y' at the end of my name, it's an 'e,' and you know damb well my first name isn't Walter. I am not squawking, though, because I remember you once said how a columnist could say a million nice things about a guy, and it is okay. But when one not so nice thing is printed, then the columnist is called a soandso. So it is okay for you to spell my name Walter Duranty. Saluda! Jimmy."

IN LOVE WITH A T-MAN

A Serial Romance

By ROB. EDEN

Paul Shows Up in a Surprising Manner, and Interrupts Nick's Plan—Regrets Are Wasted.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

THE elite was where Nick kept still another car, a coupe, under still another name than either Nick Oliver or Dick Jones. There he was known as Gene Murphy, and the car was registered in that name with a driver's license in the side pocket in that name, too, handy so he could get hold of it quickly.

"Have you a key to Rod's car?"

"Yes. Time?"

Jessica said it was 1:42.

The front seat was not crowded even with the three of them, for Jessica and Carol were slim. There was plenty of room. The side window was up, and Carol could lay her cheek against it if she wished. She did but felt no coolness from the glass because of the gag.

In the silence, she became conscious again that her wrists hurt her, her ankles, too. When she moved, the pain became worse, so she didn't stir much. She sat quite still and tense, every muscle in her body taut, every nerve in her body tight. Even her lungs, as she breathed, felt tight and with the tightness came a pain that stabbed her chest.

"Don't worry, we'll get away." Nick turned the car swiftly down a side street and stopped suddenly.

"I'm not worrying, dear. I know we'll get away."

"Rod's is right around the corner. You stay here. I'll be back in a few minutes"——

Paul!

Carol wanted to shout with happiness, with joy. Sudden tears welled up in her eyes, dropped onto her cheeks, and onto the silk gag, but she didn't even know she was crying, she didn't even feel the tears, nor hear the sobs that came to her throat, and were muffled by the handkerchief.

"I'll have your gun, Nick! Right now!" Paul was leaning over the seat, his head between the two of them. He picked up Jessica's gun from her lap, and took Nick's which was handed to him slowly. "Out of the car with you, both of you!"

Nick had already opened the door of the car, so he stepped out in the street. Paul opened the tonneau door and was beside him instantly.

Carol saw the two guns in his hands, and struggled again to break the cords but couldn't.

"You, too, Jessica. Out here!"

Jessica slid out slowly as Nick had done and when she was standing beside Nick, Carol saw the shift of the gun Paul held in his right hand to his left hand, saw another lightning movement, and the next thing she heard was a slight tinkle of metal, then another, and Nick and Jessica were handcuffed together. In the moonlight the steel flashed like silver, two cuffs, one of them on Jessica's left hand and the other on Nick's right.

"Over here!" Paul ordered. "No, Nick!"

Nick stepped closer to the car as Paul indicated, and there was another flash of steel and tinkle of metal, and Nick's left hand was handcuffed to the metal handrail on the back of the front seat.

It was then that Devlin dropped one of his guns in his pocket, and examined both Nick and Jessica for other weapons. Not a word had been said by the two. The T-man was the only one who spoke. When he spoke again, he addressed Carol.

"All right, Carol?" he asked, but he didn't look at her. He was still holding his gun in his right hand as he walked around the front of the car to the door where Carol was.

She couldn't answer him, but she knew what he was going to do. The gag came off first, not untied, because Paul had only one hand free, and his eyes were watching his two captives. The gag was pulled away from the girl's mouth, and around her neck.

"Oh," she said when it was off. "Oh"—— Then she stiffened her arms behind her and she felt his hand on hers, his warm flesh on her warm flesh. Only for a moment, though, and then her wrists were free and he was putting something in her lap. A knife.

* * *

HER wrists, even her fingers were numb as she picked up the knife. Once it fell on the floor of the car and when she found it, some feeling came back in her fingers, long prickles of pain, the blood rushing into her hands. She was longer at the job of cutting the bonds on her ankles with both her hands than Paul had been with one hand, but finally they were cut and she was free.

"All right?" Paul asked again.

"Now I want you to drive us to the Federal building. You in the front seat, Nick, Mrs. Reynolds and myself in the back seat. Think you can do it?"

"I can do it"— But after she said the words, she didn't know. Her legs seemed so numb. If she could walk a bit first, so her feet would be steady on the clutch, on the brake—

She did do it, although, somehow, with the clanking of the handcuff fastened to Nick's left arm and then to the metal rail of the tonneau in her ears the whole way, with the consciousness about her, within her, that Jessica and Paul were side by side, with the silence of the three behind her worse than their voices ever could have been.

In front of the Federal building, four men surged about the car as soon as she brought it to a stop. Fred Taggart was one of them.

"Take Carol home, Fred, right away, aand get a doctor for her. The others will come with me. As soon as you see that Carol's all right, you may come back."

There were other orders, too, that Paul was giving, but Carol didn't hear them. She didn't want to hear them, she didn't hear anything that Fred said on the way home, either, except what he said as he was helping her out of the car.

Carol had been wondering that, too, all the time she was driving Nick's Ford sedan downtown . . . Paul's silence had been so frightening . . .

At first, Carol didn't know whether she'd open the door or not. Of course it was Fred—he'd said he was coming in the morning to see how she was. She let the bell ring twice before she got up from the couch and put her half-finished cup of coffee on the table.

"I came as soon as I could," he said, coming into the room. "I just got through." His eyes caught the cup on the table in front of the couch. "Would you have a cup of coffee for me? Haven't had a bite of breakfast."

Carol said she would get some—she was glad to get away, for Paul had completely taken her by surprise. When she entered the living room a little later with a plate of fresh crisp toast and a pot of coffee, she had control of herself again.

* * *

HE ate the toast quickly and drank the coffee thirstily, ded another cup, and when she poured that, drank it immediately. Then he put down his cup and leaned back with a deep sigh.

"Yes, it's over. I'm all through, except for reports which I can make out at my leisure. Nick and Jessica in jail—"

Carol looked at him sharply. There was no disappointment in his voice when he mentioned Jessica's name, rather an excitement which she had never heard before.

"I'm sorry—" the girl murmured. She wasn't sorry at all. She was glad, but she felt she should say something, offer some condolence.

"Sorry about what?"

"Mrs. Reynolds. I'm sure you must—"

"Must feel wretched?" he took the words from her mouth.

"Quite the contrary, Carol, quite the contrary!"

He had called her Carol! Somehow she had expected him to call her Miss Mayo—that was what she was waiting for, her body waiting for Miss Mayo as if the name were a blow that would cause her pain. Her body ready for the pain. . . .

"I'm delighted that Jessica is finally in jail," he went on. "That's where I intended her to be, that's where she should be, only I hoped she'd be there before this. I didn't know it would take so long to put her there, or that I should become so involved putting her there. But I went ahead without reckoning on Jessica. Mighty smart woman, Carol. . . ."

For the second time she was Carol!

SYNOPSIS.

CAROL MAYO loves her employer, PAUL DEVLIN, who is, on the surface, a real estate dealer and is actually a T-MAN, a secret service operative on the trail of a clever band of counterfeiters. In the four months that Devlin has been in Los Angeles, he has become engaged to JESSICA REYNOLDS, a beautiful young widow whom Carol heartily dislikes. Carol even suspects Jessica of being a member of the counterfeiting band when she learns that NICK OLIVER, leader of the suspects, is in love with Jessica.

Nick and Jessica plan an "accident" to Paul and Carol. But Devlin has been expecting some such move and, when a big truck attempts to ram his car one foggy night, he fires into the cab, wounding a man.

Paul does not learn that the wounded man is LARRY, younger brother of Nick, who with his wife, MARGARET, and SAM and NORA BOLES, their "servants," have been part of Nick's society "front." Nick refuses to have a doctor for Larry, and Margaret grows to hate Nick, holding him responsible for Larry's death. Though she is guarded every moment, she nevertheless manages to get a note to Carol Mayo, who she knows is Devlin's secretary.

Nick surprises Carol in a cheap apartment on Minor street. He seizes, binds and gags her and holds her prisoner in the flat. Later, Jessica, dressed as a youth, joins him.

Paul arrives at the scene but is unable to do anything as Nick threatens to harm Carol.

"A Check-Up Of One's Life Often Needed"

By The Rev. J. F. Newton

A BOY went into a drug store, got change for a dime, and went into a telephone booth. The door was left ajar and the clerk overheard one side of the talk:

"Is this the firm that advertised for a boy a few days ago?"

"Oh, the job has already been filled, has it?"

"Does the boy do his work to suit you?"

"There is no chance for me, then?"

"Thank you, sir; good day!"

"Tough luck that you missed out on the job," said the clerk as the boy came out of the booth. "Don't fool yourself," said the boy. "I landed the job three days ago. I'm just checking up."

A young man, fresh from college, went into the office of a business man in New York—a friend of his family—to talk about his life work. Suddenly the man turned to him and said:

"Do you know, I really question whether I have ever gotten any of this 'happiness stuff' they talk so much about. If it exists at all, I've never been able to hook it." He, too, was checking up.

A famous preacher tells, in his autobiography, how he tried to read one of his old sermons, but could not make a go of it. He tried another, and it fell flat. Something was wrong.

At last he discovered, to his surprise, that his whole outlook had altered, like the shifting of a river bed, and his old sermons, well made and clearly written, had nothing to say to him.

In a remarkable letter a woman tells me how she saved her marriage from wreck when it was on the rocks. She blamed her husband, but one day she sat down and asked herself some questions:

"If his secretary left him, he would be panic-stricken; if he lost one or two of his men friends, he would be heart-broken. But if I went away—what would he miss? I've been a selfish parasite."

An honest, searching check-up is a healthy thing now and then, for all of us.

WHY GROW OLD?

By Josephine Lowman

ONCE while watching a fire I saw a symbolic thing. The firemen rushed to get their hose. When they turned the water on, very little came from the nozzle, but it leaked from a hundred little holes.

Our energy is very much like the water in the hose. We spend it in a thousand little unmeaning ways and when we want it for the things which really mean a great deal to us we haven't any left. Learn how to replenish your energy. Do these exercises when you are tired.

Lie on the bed, arms at sides and legs straight. Lazily raise the left arm upward as far as you can. Lower arm. Raise the right arm upward. Lower arm. Continue. After your arms are tired, bend the left knee up close to the abdomen. Straighten and lower legs. Bend the right knee up close to the abdomen. Lower leg. Continue. Don't do either of these exercises strenuously but do them very lazily.

What is your figure moulding problem? Write to Mrs. Lowman. If you want your questions answered directly, send a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. All correspondence will be strictly confidential.

Stuffed Dates

The following suggestions for the stuffing of dates are welcome at the holiday season: To one cup of peanut butter add slowly five tablespoons orange juice and one-half teaspoon grated orange rind. To one and one-third cups confectioners' sugar add one-eighth teaspoon vanilla, two tablespoons cream and two-thirds cup chopped nuts. Cut one-fourth pound marshmallows into pieces with wet scissors. Mix with finely ground almonds and finely chopped maraschino cherries. After stuffing, dip the dates in granulated sugar.

Cranberry Mold

One cup water.
Two cups sugar.

Wash berries, add water and boil until soft. Press through sieve and add sugar to berry pulp. Boil four minutes. Pour into ring mold. If none is available, use a round mold. Chill until firm (overnight is best). Unmold on serving platter, garnish with curls of celery. Fill center with apple mixture. If a round mold is used, remove part of center to form a case for the filling.

For apple mixture take:
Two cups diced apples.
One cup diced celery.
One-half cup broken nuts.
One-eighth teaspoon salt.
One tablespoon lemon juice.
One-half cup salad dressing.

Chill ingredients, add half the dressing to rest of ingredients. Fill the berry mold and top with rest of dressing.

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Albert Edward Wiggam, D. SC.

1. I surely think it would because the amount would be so staggering. By the best estimates crime costs the United States some 13 billion dollars annually, which means at least $100 for each man, woman and child. Suppose half of the population are adults. This would mean $200 for each adult or an average of about $16.66 per month. I think if every adult had to pay this bill monthly or be punished it would wipe out organized crime, overnight. These suggestions are inspired by Mitchel Dawson in the Atlantic Monthly.

2. Certainly, because all golf courses are built for right handed people Quentin Reynolds points out in Collier's that nearly all the hazards—bunkers, sand pits etc., are to the left of the fairway because 98 per cent of all golfers "slice" and tend to drive their balls to the right. So the golf course architects have obligingly placed most hazards to the left. The left-handed player also slices—but to the right and—well you see how it is—he is up against a serious handicap as compared with his right-handed competitor.

3. So that very able student of women, Dr. Olga Knopf, says in her "Art of Being a Woman." This is because hate is usually concentrated on one or two particular acts or characteristics of a person—he has insulted you, or cheated you or made you feel inferior. But love involves the whole personality of the other person as well as your own. Hate stimulates you merely to injure the other person but love inspires all your powers to serve and benefit the object of your affection. Love is as wide as life and, if anything survives death, love surely does.

BEACH PARTY -:- By PAUL PFEIFFER
The Daily Short Short Story

PRINCIPAL REDDINGTON paused and Charles Hughes, the new teacher, wondered what was coming. Then the gray-haired man looked at him squarely and went on: "I think it best to tell you that, up at Stanford yesterday, I met Mr. Griffin and we talked a little about you."

Charles' breathing stopped and he felt his hands clutching the arms of his chair. Yet, there seemed only kindness in the blue eyes of the man in front of him.

"He told me," the principal was saying, "about the—the unfortunate incident in the high school where you taught last year. He assured me that, in his opinion, you were absolutely innocent of the charges brought again you. You are attractive in appearance and in a high school there are always likely to be one or two girls who will annoy good-looking male teachers."

"The girl's charges were absolute lies," said Charles coolly. "She was in none of my classes at school. I did meet her for a few minutes once at the home of one of my students who was a family friend. She came around to my room at school and tried to make dates with me. She had made a fool of herself paying similar attentions to other men on the faculty. None of us would have anything to do with her. When I learned that she had brought the charge——"

In his anger, Charles rose from his chair. The principal held up a quieting hand, and said: "Don't, Mr. Hughes. Please say no more. I didn't intend to revive painful memories, and, if I have, I beg your pardon. I merely wanted you to know that I have heard of the matter and that I have absolute confidence in you. I like to see my teachers happily married. Some of them have paired off with others in our own teaching force."

Charles recalled the gray hairs and wrinkles of some of the veterans in his former school and shuddered a little. Mr. Reddington continued: "You will have an absolutely fresh start with us. And you will find that we have such a fine lot of young women here who are beyond high school age that you will not need to form your social acquaintanceships among girls of our student body. A pleasant week-end to you. Report for duty at 8 on Monday, please."

The principal extended his hand and Charles shook it sincerely. But as he walked down to his hotel he couldn't help feeling that the principal had given him a subtle warning that he'd better make no dates with students. "Well, I won't," Charles said to himself.

Saturday afternoon ahead and nothing to do. He went down to the beach, rented some swimming trunks, dived in the plunge where the water was too warm, swam in the ocean where the water was too cold, then went up to a warm spot on the sand and lay down.

He was just about to doze when he heard a childish voice saying near him, "Boat. Boat." Charles raised his head a little and saw the most charming little fellow of 3 that he'd ever beheld. In his hand the baby had a toy boat. He fell upon his knees and started to shove it through the sand toward Charles.

Charles looked around and saw the speaker, seated underneath a beach parasol. One glance led him to say hastily, "He's not bothering at all. I'm glad to have him." And while he made a great system of lakes, canals and oceans for Tinker's boat, he looked as often as he might at the girl. Her red bathing suit showed her beautifully proportioned body. Her face had a smooth brow below which were dark, quiet eyes, and a nicely modeled mouth. Charles enjoyed watching her smile and laugh at the antics of Tinker, who was having a wonderful time. Yet he couldn't help sighing to himself, about her being married and the mother of this child.

Now, for variety, Charles gave Tinker a ride on his back. Then he stood up and, raising the child till its feet were on his shoulders, let him do a somersault. Just as he had completed this last performance he saw another woman, older but otherwise like the beauty, approaching. "Mama," shouted Tinker, and ran toward her. To her the lovely one turned and said, "Dorothy, this gentleman very kindly has been amusing Tinker. I hope you don't mind."

* * *

"NOT at all, Eleanor," answered the woman, and thanked Charles. They started to gather their things together, preparatory to leaving. "May I," he asked, and unjointed and let down the big parasol. The thanks in the eyes of Eleanor was all the reward he wanted. He said in a low voice to her, "Pardon me, I'm not trying to rush you—but will you be here tomorrow." She shook her head. "Then could I—could I call on you Monday night?" He felt that his very life depended on her answer.

It seemed ages before she lifted her eyes to his. She simply said "56 Balboa street." Though they wouldn't let him help them take the things to their car, Charles was tremendously happy. "56 Balboa." That was more important to him than London, New York and Paris combined.

On Sunday morning he looked up "56 Balboa." It was in a nice part of town, but not in the forbiddingly wealthy district. In the evening Charles passed that way again—just to be sure the house hadn't been moved.

And on Monday morning, just before 8, he saw Eleanor in a hallway of the high school. There could be no doubt that it was she. She was coming toward him. She stopped, surprised at seeing him. Then she smiled with pleasure, nodded and hurried on. He was still gaping after her when the class bell rang. During that day students in the class of the new teacher passed around the word that he was the most absent-minded instructor they'd ver had.

A terrific battle was going on within Charles. But by the time the closing bell rang he had made up his mind. "I will go to Mr. Reddington now. He'll be very busy after this first day of school. I can't help it. I'll tell him that, though I was sincere on Saturday, I'm now in love with a high-school girl. I'll resign. It'll be hard to start all over again. But I'll find something to do. And I'll have her."

He strode resolutely toward the office. The door of the office opened and out stepped Eleanor. Behind her was Mr. Reddington. "Did you want to see me, Mr. Hughes?" he asked, then called. "Just a moment, Miss Cline."

Eleanor returned. "Miss Cline, may I present Mr. Hughes, a new teacher, like yourself. I was just telling Miss Cline that she'd have to be careful or she'd be mistaken for a student. Have you two young people met before?"

"Just slightly," answered Charles, smiling.

"Did you want to see me, Mr. Hughes?"

"I just wanted to tell you, sir, that I'm sure that I'm going to be very happy here."
